Board acts on assessing audit

By Kevin C. Kennedy

NEWTON — Hiring an office manager and putting together an "operator's manual" on how the Assessing Department works will be the first real steps taken to correct problems which have plagued that embattled department for more than a year.

Representatives of Touche-Ross, the Boston accounting firm that recently completed a thorough operational audit of the Assessing Department, made their recommendations to aldermen at a combined meeting of the Finance Committee and Revaluation Sub-Committee Monday night.

William Blumberg, speaking for Touche-Ross, said the Assessing Department needs an additional position which would handle "overall administrative responsibilities for the department."

Blumberg's suggestion would put a person in control of both the clerical and technical personnel in the department, coordinating them in a monumental effort to eliminate a backlog of work.

He said it would take almost 12,000 man hours of labor to get rid of the backlog. Emphasizing that his estimate included the department's existing staff working constantly, without breaks for vacation or sick time, Blumberg estimated the backlog of work might be done by next October or November.

Committee members differed on whether to keep the present staff, some of which is temporary, or to hire some better qualified personnel. David Wilkinson, the city's chief budget officer, was asked if he would assess the department's personnel needs before next Monday's meeting of the full Board of Aldermen.

Wilkinson has been "loaned" temporarily to the Assessing Department to fill the newly created slot as office manager. He told the aldermen he had "no interest" in staying in the Assessing Department, but hoped that he could be of some help on an interim basis.

Blumberg commented that temporary staffers "often don't have the same dedication as full time help," but he refused to criticize the personnel in the department.

Alderman Richard McGrath strongly advocated replacing some of the department's personnel.

D.C. whispers Reagan in '84 is a good bet

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

AUBURNDALE — President Ronald Reagan's former press secretary told a Republican gathering Monday night that the president will probably run for a second term and he thinks Reagan should announce his candidacy now.

"If Ronald Reagan does run, he should let it be known, unequivocally, very soon," said Lyn Nofziger.

Lyn Nofziger

"If Congress knows, they're going to be a lot more apt to do what he wants done."

Nofziger, 58, currently a consultant in Washington, D.C., addressed some 200 Republicans sporting "Reagan in '84" buttons who gathered at the Marriott Hotel. Among them were former senatorial candidate Ray Shamie, former candidate for governor John Lakian and Boston City Councillor Albert "Dapper" O'Neill. The $15 a person reception was sponsored by the Republicans for Middlesex County.

William Barnstead, the group chairman who is best known for running against House Speaker Thomas P. 'Tip' O'Neill, introduced Nofziger, also the former presidential assistant on public affairs. Barnstead described the paunchy, bearded speaker as "hopelessly sloppy" and someone "who is always making jokes and saying things that he shouldn't."

During an hour-long speech entitled "Washington Whispers," Nofziger told the crowd Reagan will have a better chance of beating other presidential contenders if he announces his campaign early. He

Workers vote Thursday

Trash pact weighed

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Public Works Department employees will vote Thursday on a new contract with the city that keeps trash collection in-house and offers 5 percent pay increases.

Without a contract for 11 months, DPW workers held an illegal two-day strike last month, that caused residents' trash to pile up and other city services to grind to a halt.

Rank and file workers can accept or reject the new agreement reached between union and administration officers after the state ordered both parties back to the bargaining table in early February.

"I'm hoping for ratification," said Daniel MacClaren, president of Local 800 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) on Monday. Local 800 represents over 350 city employees.

Mayor Theodore Mann declined comment on the tentative agreement pending the upcoming vote.

Mann tried, but failed to receive aldermanic support to send trash collection out to bid for a private contractor.

A few weeks ago, aldermen voted 17 to 7 in favor of keeping trash collection in house after months of heated debate and counter charges between aldermen and administration officials.

Voicing their opinions in the latest city census, residents rated trash collection as the best service in Newton. Of those polled, 80 percent said it is the best city service, with fire protection coming in a close second.

"The results of the survey underscore what I sensed from my own sampling of voters, that our own workers offer the city excellent service and people have confidence in them," said Chairman of the Public Facilities Committee Alderman Richard McGrath.

McGrath often led the fight to prevent trash collection from going to a private contractor.

The negotiations have been going on for so long that union leader MacClaren said he had to have time to "put it all into perspective" before he would say if he was pleased about the tentative agreement.

The agreement calls for a six-week trial period giving sanitation workers an opportunity to prove they can get the job done using fewer employees and still offer the city efficient service.

From a work force of 45 workers, the union agreed to reduce the sanitation department to 27 men. No employees will lose their jobs, but will be transferred to other city posts, said MacClaren.

If the workers pass the six-week trial, they will continue in their jobs until July 1984, according to McGrath.

Pay raises of 5 percent, retrocative to July 1982, and another 5 percent in September 1983 are offered, said MacClaren.

Aldermanic President Matthew Jefferson said he is "very happy" an agreement is near after such a long period of negotiations.

Water-sewer audit delay could mean revenue shortfall

NEWTON — The results of a long overdue audit of the Water and Sewer Department should be in a week from now, but that will be too late to avoid a possible $600,000 to $700,000 shortfall in the year's receipts.

City Comptroller Larry Marino said Monday that the beleaguered department could miss its $5.1 million target in the present city budget by almost 15 percent if it finishes up the year in the same "worst case" situation is now finds itself.

At best, Marino said, the shortfall might only amount to $60,000 to $70,000.

Water Commissioner Vern Porter documented the horror for the aldermanic Public Facilities last week.

He said delays in getting bills out were the main reason why his department was not collecting the revenues predicted in this year's budget. He said all the meters in one section of the city were read in 18 days, and it took 190 days to get the bills out.

Porter added that it used to take 90 days to get bills out under the old, completely manual system.

Private school bus cutting plan angers parents

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — About 50 private school parents angrily protested a recommendation to drastically cut back transportation to Newton private schools at Monday's School Committee meeting.

Several parents told the School Committee they were tired of paying taxes which support the schools and then learning that their child's transportation may be eliminated.

"I think it's time that I started getting something from Newton...I pay very high taxes," one man said bitterly. "I live on the north side of the city and the north side is generally getting the short end of things."

He was one of several parents who criticized the Newton schools. He said he moved to Newton for the public schools and "quickly found that I had been mistaken."

The current school budget provides transportation for about 500 children to their Newton private schools. Following a Supreme Judicial Court decision and a resultant change in the state reimbursement formula for private school transportation, Superintendent John Strand recommended eliminating the service for private school children who no longer qualify.

The court ruling states that public school systems are no longer required to provide transportation to private schools beyond what the school system would provide if a child were attending his public school.

Public schools can also stop providing transportation for private school students over age 16, the end of mandated school attendance.

If ineligible students were no longer given transportation, Support Services Director Roy Cornelius said, the schools could eliminate five buses and save $118,000 next year.

> 'We pride ourselves on being an All-American city...and what we're really saying is if you don't have your kids in the public schools, we're going to punish you.'
> Louis Songer

Cornelius said about 10 children of the current 500 would remain eligible if Strand's plan is adopted.

The School Committee did not vote on the issue Monday during their meeting at Bigelow Junior High. The issue will be voted on as part of the March 14 "straw vote" on the proposed $40 million school budget.

Ellen Daves, the parent of a Newton Catholic student, told the School Committee they were "saving money because you are not educating these (private school) children."

Another woman said the approximately $230 for transportation per private school child for next year is "less than the $3,000 it would cost to educate" each child.

Superintendent Strand said adding to the public schools some private school children would not necessarily mean an additional $3,000 per child. Many of the services are already there, Strand said.

The $3,000 is a per pupil cost for the Newton schools based on the total school budget and the number of students enrolled.

'Near-death' experience studied

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

AUBURNDALE – People often associate death with trauma and pain — except those who claim to have had a near-death experience.

Several thousand people describe their near-death experiences as "inexpressible peacefulness," during which they were separated from their bodies, experienced a world of indescribable beauty and perfection and from which they returned understanding the meaning of their lives.

"It's a very powerful experience that people talk about," said Kenneth Ring, author of "Life at Death: A Scientific Investigation of the Near-Death Experience."

Speaking to about 60 people last week at Interface, Ring said he has never had such an experience but has talked with hundreds of people who have.

"What death looks like is not what it feels like to the person experiencing it," said Ring, of the University of Connecticut, a base for the International Association for Near-Death Studies, Inc. The group has documented thousands of near-death experiences, he said.

Feelings of "tremendous and inexpressable peacefulness" often accompany the experience. Ring said one woman tried to describe her near-death experience by telling him to "take the thousand best things that ever happened to you and multiply that by a million - that might describe it."

People say that, during near-death experiences, they were separated from their bodies. They looked down at themselves from the corner of a room, often a hospital room, as doctors and nurses tried frantically to save their lives.

Even those who said they were previously fearful of death did not report being afraid while they witnessed their lifeless bodies, Ring said.

"They know it's themselves resting there but they are no longer connected," he said.

> On the near-death experience: 'Take the thousand best things that ever happened to you and multiply that by a million. That might describe it.'
> Author Kenneth Ring

Seemingly unknown to others in the room, these people can watch and listen "with great clarity" to the events that are taking place. Later, they can accurately reconstruct the activities for physicians or hospital staff, he said.

Are these reports illusions, brought on perhaps by drugs? Or is it so unusual that these patients could accurately reconstruct the scene which they allegedly witnessed while separated from their bodies? Ring said a California physician attempted to find out by interviewing a number of cardiac patients who had not reported near-death experiences. The doctor asked them to reconstruct the events that occurred while they were in the hospital. Their reports were marked by inaccuracies, Ring said. Those who reported having a near-death experience described the events with "remarkable accuracy," according to Ring.

During the near-death experience, people also report being in a tunnel of darkness where there is a sense of motion around them.

"The darkness seems to be a kind of transition," Ring said.

People are met at the end of the tunnel by an "infinite, golden and extremely beautiful light." Some said they experienced a feeling of "perfect, non-human kind of love" as they were engulfed by the light.

"They want to merge with the light. It's like somehow you've always been there. You belong

Ticket scofflaws resting easy?

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

NEWTON - It will be months before the city can identify who owes what on parking tickets, according to Richard Walsh of the Data Processing Department.

Walsh said last week the lack of adequate staff in his department was responsible for the backlog of tickets. He said he has recently decided to transfer funds for temporary staff over to a contractual services account and farm out the work that needs to be done.

The information from all the parking tickets handed out since January 1982 has to be transferred to tapes which can then be fed into the city's computer, Walsh said.

Police Captain John Bartinelli said he is pursuing parking ticket scofflaws whose errant ways go back to before January 1982.

"We are just about cleaned up on 81, and we are working on 1981. The work is being done on a piecemeal basis because of the lack of personnel," he said.

"People with tickets from 1980 had better get in here, because the fines will be doubled," Bartinelli added. He is "contemplating" going back as far as 1978 to root out scofflaws, but he admitted that he is forced to approach the problem "one year at a time."

Daley loses battle over development restrictions

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Alderman Paul K. Daley was left standing alone last week in his effort to win protection from further development of the Combined Jewish Philanthropies 28-acre campus on Winchester Street.

Two weeks ago, his colleagues unanimously approved a proposal to build 100 units of subsidized housing for the elderly. Daley, at that time, insisted the matter be reconsidered. Last Tuesday, the board rejected the reconsideration.

There were questions about the project and about future development of the CJP property which, Daley said, deserved to be answered before any final action was taken.

After weeks of meeting with the principals of the CJP proposal, Daley said his concerns about condominium conversion, property taxes and further development of the site were "not totally addressed, but reasonably addressed."

He said he wanted a letter from Ruth B. Fein, president of the CJP, made a part of the board's order of two weeks ago. Daley said he received the letter, which outlines the CJP's future intentions, around 4:30 that afternoon.

According to Fein's letter, future development of the CJP campus is effectively restricted by a condition in the board's order which stipulates that development shall not exceed 30 percent of the total land area.

Fein further reminded the aldermen that any further development will, "to the extent provided in the zoning ordinance, be subject to further application to and approval by the Board of Aldermen."

Alderman Marcy Richmond joined with Daley, for a while, in an effort to restrict further development of the CJP campus. As ward alderman for Ward 8, Richmond said she was concerned that high rise developments might soon overun the area around the Winchester Street campus.

Last week Richmond said she would like to see the board pass a non-binding resolution stating that it would be "ill-advised" for the petitioner to come before the board for further development within the next five years. She said she thought it was important for the effect of the CJP housing development to be thoroughly assessed before any other moves were made.

She described the CJP proposal as a case of "too much too soon, rather than too little too late."

When the vote came on whether or not to bring the matter before the board for reconsideration, Richmond, who could see that 12 other aldermen had already voted against Daley by the time the roll call got to her, voted against reconsideration.

Alderman Rodney Barker rose right after Daley's motion for reconsideration was defeated to suggest that Daley and Richmond could bring their resolutions before the board in the future. "I have a suggestion..," Barker said innocently enough.

"Alderman Barker, I have a suggestion for you..," a red-faced, upset Daley responded before he decided to let the matter rest.

Further debate of the CJP proposal was effectively curtailed by a voice vote of the aldermen. When President Matthew Jefferson was challenged for accepting the voice vote as the end of debate, that challenge was defeated 13 to 6.

Hiding his disappointment with the performance of his fellow aldermen, Daley said of the evening's proceedings, "It was a real 'Smurfy' night."

Girls in Louise Kiley's Scout Troop 2529 put on their masks prior to a visit.

Surrounded by clowns, the girls prefer anonimity for their entertaining trips.

Clown service joins with scouting

NEWTON CENTRE — The 15 girls in Louise Kiley's Girl Scout Troop 2529 prefer to be called by their troop number rather than their names.

These girls, all around the age of 16, get together to transform their identities in white face and clown costumes, something Kiley sees as their service to people in the Newton area.

The clowns have entertained in area nursing homes, schools and before Brownie and other Girl Scout troops. And, as Kiley noted last week, "When they put on their masks they lose their identity and take on another."

Kiley takes a religious approach to the meaning of clowning and finds it easy to use those feelings to make people happy.

"These girls are performing service to the people who are most vulnerable, people who think they are shut out from life," Kiley said of the nursing home and hospital visits by her troop. "There's a mystery in clowning. It seems magical. A clown is a bridge between what is and what might be."

"Clowning," she said last week, "is serving others, which is also what Girl Scouting is."

4 departments see big state aid bonus

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A $600,000 surplus in state aid will be distributed among the Public Works, Building, Police and Recreation Departments, according to a recent letter from Mayor Theodore D. Mann to the aldermen.

The surplus is the result of the city's presuming it would lose $800,000 in state aid and adjusting the city budget accordingly, Mann said. With the actual loss approximating $200,000, the city is left with a $600,000 dividend which has not yet been assigned.

Mann recommended the surplus funds be used for "financing critically needed improvements and maintenance projects."

Heads of departments looking forward to receiving their share of the funds appeared before the aldermanic Public Facilities Committee Wednesday night to explain their requests.

Public Works Commissioner John Sulik has requested $200,000 for the construction of sidewalks and street repairs. He explained that $50,000 would wipe out the costs of sidewalk construction, for which the city will be reimbursed by property owners and state funds.

"Candidates for street reconstruction are being evaluated with Walnut, Valentine and Woodward appearing as high priorities," Sulik said.

The Building Department has requested $222,065 "to continue the practice of correcting various building maintenance projects in city buildings.

The Recreation Department is asking for $94,000 to rehabilitate more than 22 tennis courts throughout the city. Commissioner Russell Halloran explained that some of the courts have been closed because they were in such poor condition.

Police Chief William F. Quinn has requested $19,000 "to correct the intolerable situation that exists in our juvenile/female detention area, and also the inadequate toilet facilities for female employees.

Quinn said his request, which he originally made last July, "in no way eliminates the requirement for a complete renovation of our 50-year-old structure, but these limited requirements should not be delayed or put off any longer."

A large portion of Quinn's request, $11,000, is for closed circuit t.v. monitors in the male cell blocks.

Quinn included a newspaper clipping with his request to bolster his contention that the closed circuit system should also include female cells. The clipping told of a woman who committed suicide in the Lynn Police Station while she was waiting for her children to bail her out on a drunk driving charge.

"I am advised," Quinn wrote in a letter to City Solicitor Dan Funk, "but not by good authority, that we cannot monitor the women's cell block by closed circuit t.v."

He added that he could not understand why male and female clerks and police officers can monitor male cells but not female cells "in an effort to prevent serious injury or death to the prisoners."

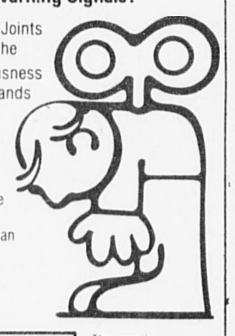

Quinn wrote Funk, "It just doesn't make sense. Our female and male clerks, and female and male police officers, are all mature adult people employed by the City of Newton Police Department."

Members of the Public Facilities Committee arranged to visit the location of the suggested improvements before giving final approval to the chief's request.

Facing eviction at the age of 93

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

WEST NEWTON — At the age of 93, Charlie Stuart enjoys a network of support services around West Newton Square the likes of which thousands of dollars and a host of governmental agencies could not match.

He is liable to lose it all on March 3, when he goes to Newton District Court to explain why he should not be evicted from the house on Webster Street he has called home for almost 30 years.

Ask anyone around the square if they know "Charlie." Many will say, "Oh yeah. The old guy who's always out walking around with his dog."

The dog, "Tippy," died last fall after 18 years as Stuart's constant companion. Now, when Stuart shows you a picture of the dog, taken many years ago on a Plum Island beach, he smiles at it and pets the frame as if the picture were the dog.

The cops on the square all know him, and they are always on the lookout for his safety and welfare.

He eats regularly at the Troubadour, on Elm Street, right around the corner from his home. George Setian, the owner, gives Stuart a good meal at a price he can easily afford. Mary Gudejko serves it to him like he is a member of her family.

"If he doesn't show up for a day, we worry about him," Setian said.

Charlie Stuart lives with several other single men in what was formerly a rooming house on Webster Street. Vin Whalen, one of his housemates, does the housekeeping and keeps the place immaculate.

There is a nice camaraderie among the men. When Stuart ambles slowly in from the ice and snow, Whalen asks him if he has been out jogging. Stuart gives another housemate a playful swat with his cap, grabs his arm and pretends to twist it up behind his back in a hammerlock. Every one laughs.

Kay Clancy rented the house on Webster Street for more than 40 years, and she sublet rooms to men like Stuart. Last fall, she died.

Right after her death, Whalen got an application for a new lease from the landlord. Before he could fill it out and send it back, an eviction notice arrived, according to Whalen.

After March 3, "you are a trespasser on the premises," the notice said.

The evictees do not know why they cannot get a lease. The evictors will not say. "I'm not going to defend the case now," landlord Augustine Bombaci, of Medford, said when asked why Stuart was being evicted.

He refused to sympathize with the old man's plight.

"He's healthier than I am," the former pediatrician said. "I'm the sick man, and I'm the only one working on that building. He's out on the street every day, and, one of these days, he's going to get hit."

Bombaci's lawyers have also refused to discuss the reasons for Stuart's eviction notice.

Stuart is hoping the court will find some way for him to keep his home. If not, his fate will be in the hands of Diana Patten, the outreach worker in the city's Human Services Department.

Stuart will not be out on the street if she has anything at all to say about it.

Her committment to solving problems like Stuart's was proven last summer when she stepped in to find housing for elderly tenants who were displaced by the Druker Company's commercial development in Newton Corner. There were many reasons why various governmental agencies designed to help people in need had their hands tied.

Charlie Stuart of West Newton

But Patten broke through the tangle of red tape and found homes for those who could not find their own.

She has been helping Stuart and his housemates since Kay Clancy died last fall. She has brought food. She has found money for rent in the Cousens Fund, which was targeted for use by people like Stuart.

Patten found him a room in Newton Corner, but the $60 per week rent was twice what he is paying now and way too much for his modest Social Security income.

She filled out applications for subsidized and senior citizens' housing, but neither of those measures will help Stuart as soon as March 4, the day after his court date.

"The kicker is, if people do have rooms to rent, they're probably illegal," Patten said. "I know there are rooming houses in the West Newton area. I just don't know where they are."

Echoing sentiments expressed recently by the Human Rights Commission, Patten said some legalities might possibly be subordinated to the overwhelming need for more affordable housing in the city.

She asked that her appeal be broadcast far and wide so she can start to build an inventory of available housing for people in situations like Stuart.

"If some one has a unit available, even if it is an illegal one, please let me know," Patten said. "I promise on a stack of Bibles not to tell...just so Charlie has a place to go."

Audit of assessors prompts scrutiny

ertia," McGrath said. "We're finally in a position to do something about the Assessing Department, and I don't want to perpetuate unqualified personnel."

Revaluation Sub-Committee Chairman Paul Coletti said he was "not that pleased about keeping the existing people," and joined McGrath and others who wanted a complete revamp of the department. He emphasized that the present staff seemed incapable of utilizing computer techniques to their full advantage.

The aldermen will decide next Monday, after hearing Wilkinson's report, how much of an assessors' request for $46,000 for more temporary staffing will be approved.

Members of the two committees approved the appropriation of $9,000 to pay for a "procedural manual" which would define, once and for all, the steps to be followed to accomplish the various tasks in the department. The exact steps to take in abatement applications, for instance, have been the source of considerable confusion in the past.

Blumberg said the manual would be ready in a month and that his firm would meet with assessors every two weeks to see that it is being adhered to. Touche-Ross representatives will also be checking to see that the backlog of work is being attended to according to a schedule which they have set up.

A committee of mayoral appointees, including representatives of Boston College School of Business, the Chamber of Commerce and systems analysts from several area computer firms will also be overseeing the implementation of the Touche-Ross recommendations.

W. Newton Square traffic plan backed

NEWTON — The Public Safety and Transportation Committee is recommending approval of a $600,000 traffic project in West Newton Square to alleviate pedestrian hazards.

"It's the most abominable square in the city," said Alderman Paul Daley at a public hearing attended by 35 residents and merchants on Monday.

The hearing was called to allow the city to present its new designs for safety improvements slated for West Newton Square.

There have been 239 accidents in the last three years in the area of West Newton Square, according to project director David Long of the city's Planning Department.

Final plans for the project must be approved by the state and the board of aldermen before construction begins.

The ultimate goal of the safety improvements is to allow people to cross the square with a higher degree of safety, according to project consultant John Kennedy.

"The improvements mean traffic will take longer to get through the square, but they should cut the accident rate by 50 percent," said Kennedy.

Merchants in the square favor the improvements and the Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce gave its approval as well.

Getting additional traffic under the new design will be Cherry Street, according to consultant Kennedy, but he could not say how much traffic would increase.

Retaining existing parking spaces in the square was the major concern of the merchants, but project director Long assured them the new design would eliminate only one space.

On reaching 100

The recent passing of the talented and colorful Eubie Blake, just short of his 100th birthday, got us to thinking about how busy most people are these days trying to fit too many things into too short a day.

Here, after all, was a man with thousands of songs to his credit and a legacy stretching almost a century.

Coincidentally we stumbled across a collection of "Sage (and contradictory) advice from centenarians" on how to reach the age of 100.

We just couldn't resist relating some of the advice from "Life Lines," the bulletin of the Committee for an Extended Lifespan.

The advice? One centenarian said you must sleep 10 to 12 hours each day. Another said never sleep more than four hours a night.

One oldster over the century mark said her secret rests in abstaining from alcohol. Naturally, another crusty centenarian recommended downing a pint of whiskey each day.

Read the Bible, one declared. Read spicy detective stories, said another.

Take steam baths, said one; a cold shower every day does the trick, said another.

Yet another centenarian said the secret to long life is to "be at peace with yourself and all men." Another old sage said the secret is to "be ornery. Have at least one good fight with somebody each day."

At least some of us can manage to cram those last two recommendations into one day each week.

Pot with a purpose

Newton State Rep. David Cohen has proposed legislation to legalize use of marijuana by cancer patients undergoing chemotherapy treatments.

The proposal, already accepted in almost half the states, would dictate that the state Dept. of Public Health set up appropriate safeguards and properly run the program.

Cohen cites a growing body of research by such authorities as the Farber Cancer Institute in Boston in which some cases of the severe side affects of chemotherapy treatment have been lessened by marijuana smoking. For some people, Cohen said, "Marijuana is so controversial that they find it hard to imagine it having a legitimate medical use. But it does."

We support this legislation with the understanding that the torment of chemotherapy, a necessary evil in many cases of cancer treatment, may be eased for many people.

We agree strongly with Cohen when he said, "It would be a great tragedy to let the solution slip through our hands."

Keeping house with Rev. Jerry

By Richard Lodge

'In view of the storm of criticism we've received from our liberal adversaries, and, in some cases, from a negative press, I think the poll shows that most Americans still admire individuals who take a stand for what is right.'

Rev. Jerry Falwell on being number 2

You could have knocked me over with a feather last week when the envelope came from the Moral Majority's office in Lynchburg, Va.

For the second year in a row none of my friends finished in the top 10 in the Good Housekeeping magazine "Most Admired Men Poll."

Understandably, with the results coming from the Moral Majority, the Reverend Jerry Falwell was beaming out from the page, second in the top 10 behind Nancy Reagan's husband, Ronald.

Billy Graham, looking stern-faced and proper, tallied enough votes from GH magazine readers to finish in third place; Pope John Paul II was fourth; and Alan Alda, the cuddly cut-up from "M.A.S.H." was fifth.

A quick analysis of the top five showed the clergy leading with three spots, politics and television one each. Or does Ronald Reagan count in the television column?

Following close on Alda's heels in number 6 was good old Bob Hope; Prince Charlie ranked number 7; Norman Vincent Peale finished in eighth; violinist Itzhak Perlman was ninth; and bubbly Phil "What-do-you-do-when-you-find-out-the-milkman-is-gay" Donahue rounded out the top 10.

This is serious business. Ron Reagan, "repeating his stellar performance of last year," according to Good Housekeeping, at the head of the list. And the Rev. Falwell in the number 2 spot.

Bob Redford finished 17th; Dick Nixon, 19th; and actor Tom "Magnum P.I." Selleck came in 23 on a precedent-setting write-in vote.

According to a press release which accompanied the MM pronouncement, Rev. Falwell was "both surprised and very pleased" to have finished number 2.

"In view of the storm of criticism we've received from our liberal adversaries, and, in some cases, from a negative press, I think the poll shows that most Americans still admire individuals who take a stand for what is right," said Falwell, president of the Moral Majority and pastor of the 19,000 member Thomas Road Baptist Church in lovely downtown Lynchburg.

The Rev. Falwell took advantage of the situation by noting that his selection by the zillions of GH readers shows at long last that "the liberal agenda has failed and Americans are ready to be led again by men and women who stand for the sanctity of human life and stable marriages and against pornography, drugs and so-called alternative lifestyles."

Nice to have proof at last, right reverend?

The poll indicated from its lack of any shaggy-headed hell-raisers or pointy-headed pro-abortionists that "the real message of these polls is that Americans are forsaking the 'do your own thing' philosophy that characterized the 1960s and most of the 70s and returning to the traditional principles and values that have worked so well for America."

There are a few questions of some import which come to mind after being favored by receipt of a copy of Rev. Falwell's latest accomplishment.

The first is how do the 19,000 members of the Thomas Road Baptist Church fit into the sanctuary? And where do they all park? Do the neighbors of the church object to having cars parked on their lawns?

Another question which comes to mind is, did all 19,000 members of Rev. Falwell's parish write in their votes for the good reverend? One can imagine "voting bees" with thousands of parishioners crammed into the church social room, scribbling out their votes for Falwell on post cards addressed to Good Housekeeping.

Remarks about Rev. Falwell's "liberal adversaries" and "negative press" may not endear the preacher from Thomas Road to many in the news business. And yes, I should probably be ashamed of myself taking potshots at a man of the cloth who drops this page of good news in my lap with a smile.

Trying to find a greater meaning in a poll showing a right-wing television preacher, a TV talk show host and the president as the most popular folks in America is certainly a hard task.

But no harder perhaps, than trying to find a parking space on Thomas Road come Easter Sunday.

Marking time

Playing the field

By Mark White

'In 1976 I couldn't stomach Jimmy Carter so I went for Milton Shapp. That's right, Milton Shapp and don't give me a hard time. By the way, I wonder what ever happened to Milt...'

Who are you supporting for president? What do you mean it's too early to make up your mind?

What do you mean you don't know who is running? The Democratic honchos in Massachusetts don't care.

On April 8, 1983 there will be a convention in Springfield and on that date many of us are going to be asked to cast a vote for President of the United States.

Now I was fortunate to be elected a delegate to the Democratic Issues Convention and for that I am grateful. But the problem is that the last order of business is a presidential preference poll. They put it last, one can assume, to guarantee all the delegates stay until the end of the convention.

So what do you do? Frankly I was all set to work for Sen. Kennedy again but then Teddy withdrew and many of us were left without a candidate.

So many people started looking around for an alternative and we found another individual we could support who manifested our positions on the issues, Rep. Morris Udall.

I even heard that my friends Congressmen Barney Frank and Jim Shannon had signed up for Udall. The momentum was clear.

But, alas, it was not to be. Mo decided not to run and once again I was out in the cold without a candidate.

I'm worried if I decide on another candidate, and he withdraws, my emotional stability will crack. Presidential elections have always been difficult for me. In 1972 I bakced Mayor John Linsay of New York. I was even pledged as a delegate to him. He withdrew before the primary.

In 1976 I couldn't stomach Jimmy Carter so I went for Milton Shapp. That's right, Milton Shapp and don't give me a hard time. By the way, I wonder what ever happened to Milt...

In 1980 like everyone else, I supported Ted Kennedy. At least he made it to the convention.

And now I have to choose again. What are the choices?

Senator John Glenn: Remember his dynamic speaking ability at the 1980 convention? Any more dynamic and we'd have all fallen asleep and awakened to a test pattern. But he did send me a nice telegram on Saturday.

Then there's former Vice-president Walter Mondale. Good candidate but it's not chic to back a frontrunner.

Senator Alan Cranston? Excellent voting record. Bright. An honorable senator. A good candidate, if he didn't look like such a stiff.

Senator Gary Hart? Too slick. Remember how he managed George McGovern's 1972 campaign? Somehow I can't warm up to looking at bumper stickers in 1985 that read "Don't blame me; I voted for Hart."

Former Governor Reuben Askew? Obviously a well-known name in the grand tradition of Milton Shapp. Who is this guy? What does he look like? Does he know what he looks like?

Senator Ernest Hollings. Okay, place your bets. How many votes do you think a South Carolina senator is going to get from a convention of Massachusetts Democrats?

Senator Dale Bumpers. With a name like that he has a lot going for him.

So choose your candidates, folks. A year before the election, totally ignorant of most of the accomplishments and positions of most of these candidates, totally unaware of their campaign styles, we have to choose a standard bearer.

Hmmm. I did like that telegram, John.

Clarifies points in recent story about abortion

To the editor;

I would like to clarify several points in the article entitled "Abortion rights battle" (Graphic, Feb. 23).

The constitutional amendment, as passed by the legislature, states, "The General Court may regulate or prohibit abortion and may regulate or prohibit private or public funding of abortion or the provision of services or facilities therfor."

As this language clearly indicates, the implications of the amendment are much farther reaching than simply restricting public funding for abortions.

Should the federal Constitution be amended (and anti-abortion amendments are indeed pending before Congress) or should the United States Supreme Court overturn previous decisions protecting reproductive freedom, Massachusetts could move immediately - after passage of the state amendment in 1984 to outlaw all abortions.

Equally as important is the fact that regardless of any federal action or inaction, passage of the amendment would leave Massachusetts citizens with no recourse in state courts against any of the myriad of restrictions which could be placed on the provision of abortion services.

The issue of public funding for abortions and poor women's access to abortions is of course a very important one.

To imply that the constitutional amendment would only affect public funding, as Massachusetts Citizens for Life would have one believe, does a grave disservice to the people to whom I referred in my quote the majority of Massachusetts citizens who believe that the decision to have or not have an abortion is a private one.

Anyone who is interested in working with a coalition of pro-choice groups against the amendment may call my office, 722-2090, for further information on how to get involved.

Takes issue with action on Adelman

To the editor;

(The following is a letter to Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Charles Percy.)

Dear Senator:

I deplore your performance in relation to the hearings on Kenneth Adelman's nomination. The enclosed Wall Street Journal (Feb. 24, 1983) editorial appears to fit your action beyond a reasonable doubt.

Your latest threat of a filibuster in spite of your dislike of the technique certainly smacks of an attempt at national headline grabbing.

Truly, senator, with your background I had expected you to perform more like a statesman than a politician with his eye on the White House. Perhaps if you acted more like the statesman, the White House would become more available to you.

'Worst' library competition suggested

To the editor;

(The following is an open letter from a Milford Library trustee to Michael Lipof, a member of the Newton Board of Library Trustees.)

Dear Mr. Lipof:

Comments attributed to you concerning the main library at Newton Corner have just come to my attention via a newsclip from the News Tribune of January 28. If I understand the story correctly you deem the Newton Corner library to be "the worst library building in the state." Please, come to Milford!

The Milford Town Library opened in Memorial Hall - a Civil War memorial - on March 8, 1886, nearly 97 years ago, with 2000 square feet of space and it has been there ever since.

Currently, with a valiant staff of five, it is attempting to survive and to serve the public within the same original dimensions and in spite of rising circulation figures and an increase in registered library users.

On August 30, 1858, a far-sighted adventure was launched and it was named the Milford Town Library and subsequently it was encouraged in its efforts by the many Irish and Italian immigrants that came to Milford to work in its quarries, shoe factories and mills. They, in turn, encouraged their children to an education and thereby a means to leave the occupations of their fathers.

But it has been exactly these future, successful generations that have chosen to ignore and abandon the Milford Town Library to the point where I cannot agree with your statements that the WORST library in the Commonwealth is in Newton when I see it every day here in Milford.

Therefore, considering that Library Incentive Grants from the Board of Library Commissioners seldom find their way back to the use of the local trustees, perhaps we could encourage the commissioners to sponsor a statewide contest each year to find the WORST library in the Commonwealth.

First prize could be $5000 or $10,000 to be awarded directly to the winning library for use by the trustees to attempt to move said winner from the WORST category (what a dubious distinction to attain in 1983 in the educated Commonwealth, in order to improve.)

Nominations would be made by the staff of the Library Board of Commissioners after receiving recommendations from the central, eastern and western regional systems.

Too, any citizen of the Commonwealth could nominate a single library in the worst library category provided that they care a card-carrying member of said library and can provide a notarized statement of harassment, persecution or poor service.

Judges would be the governor, the chairman of the Board of Library Commissioners and perhaps one harassed patron from each of the nominated towns and cities.

It's an idea to consider but for now, with all due respect, if you want to see the WORST library in the Commonwealth, please come to Milford!

Paul Curran
Trustee
Milford Town Library

New library is needed now

To the editor;

Once the trash crisis and temper tantrums have subsided at City Hall I hope the mayor and aldermen will give the library a little consideration. Newton urgently needs a new main library, as every committee and commission to study the problem in decades has recommended.

My personal choice would be a new structure at the corner of Homer and Walnut across from City Hall. Not only would a new library at this site serve as a showcase for the community, with easy access and ample parking, its location at the boundary between the north and south sides would symbolize our committment to a unified city.

By selling inefficiently used branch property and by using some of the city's unused bond authorization the cost to the taxpayer could be minimized.

If our mayor and aldermen decide that even this is unaffordable, refurbishment of existing city buildings should be considered.

One way or another our elected officials should act now, because whatever the cost, it will be greater later.

Villages are forced to accept

To the editor;

In the discussion of why some sections of the city feel alienated one factor should be given the paramount importance. The perception is strong in some villages (not all on the North side!) that they are deprived of benefits and forced to accept things that the rest of the city will not.

A classic example of this is coming before the Board of Aldermen.

Continental Cablevision is seeking permission to raise its tower in Upper Falls from 60 feet to 150 feet. Many Upper Falls residents oppose the obvious visual impact of yet another tower on this area.

Still others are concerned about the possible health hazards of even a small amount of additional microwaves being aimed at this area which is already among the highest in microwave readings in the Greater Boston area.

The reason for the request is a trivial, possibly temporary, addition to cable service in Newton, not to mention Needham and perhaps even Wellesley.

This issue thus boils down to the question of whether or not the residents of Upper Falls should be forced to accept a tangible, blatant reduction in the quality of their environment so that a miniscule addition to cable services for private subscribers in Newton and Needham can be made.

I would hope that the individuals recently quoted in the press for their concerns about division in the city would seize this opportunity to state that no one area should have to accept a visual blight like the tower addition for such a trivial benefit to other residents of the city.

Such a statement would be an excellent first step toward healing the wounds described in the recent report.

Miserable revaluation attempt

To the editor;

(The following is an open letter to Alderman Paul E. Coletti, chairman of the Aldermanic Revaluation Subcommittee)

It is no secret that the city of Newton and in particular the Board of Aldermen Revaluation Committee failed miserably in its attempt to fairly revaluate Newton properties and made a mockery of the entire democratic process in its blatant refusal to hear the voice of Newton taxpayers.

In view of this fiasco and the agreed incompetence exhibited by Finnegan and his group, one would at least think that the thousands of applications for abatement would be given a fair review and acted upon in a more equitable way, or in order to spare us the trouble and expense of h ving to go to the Appellate Tax Board for relief. Again, we were rejected out of hand.

There is no question that there are thousands of Newton taxpayers who feel, as I do, that it is a disgrace and a humiliation for us to see our city officials such as yourself who are supposed to represent out interests, instead act with such absolu te disregard for us.

In selfishly ignoring what must be the greatest outcry you have ever seen from the residents of this city, you have done more to destroy our trust and confidence in you and your goverenment than you can possibly imagine.

I hope you won't forget that, since I can promise you that we certainly will not.

Because the responsibility for the delays could be shared by the Water/Sewer, Data Processing and Treasury Departments, the aldermen said they would need to talk to all the department heads involved before attempting to solve the problem.

Committee Chairman Richard McGrath commented to Porter, "Before we reorganized the department, we only lost $30,000 to $40,000 a year. Now, we're getting into hundreds of thousands."

Committee member Elaine Gentile commented, "I'd bet it would be closer to a half million."

Porter said the change from manual to remote meters was far from complete in the city. He could give no reason why 4,000 remote meters that were supposed to be installed by city crews were never done.

When pressed on the status of the city-wide changeover, he told the aldermen, "Some of the mistakes that were made are incomprehensible."

Now, with his department's staff reduced by "five or six persons in the last couple of years," Porter complained that lack of adequate staff seriously reduced his ability to make the difficult transition from manual to remote meters.

The person Porter had thought would facilitate the transition quit two years ago, he told the aldermen. He added that he had "begged (the administration) on my hands and knees" for more personnel without success. Presently, he has two staffers coming in on Saturdays to sort out the bills, he said.

Richard Walsh, head of the Data Processing Department, commented that one member of Porter's staff was doing virtually all the work on billing. "She should be locked in a room," Walsh said jokingly. "She's the only one with the answers." He suggested that additional, temporary staffing would solve many of the Water/Sewer Department's problems.

Near-death experiences scrutinized

there," Ring explained.

Some people report moving into a second, "transcendental" stage of light where "everything is enhanced in beauty." Others said they were reunited with loved ones who have died. Finally, there is a sense of "a voice or a presence," with which there is "telepathic" communication.

"Communication is crystal clear at this stage," Ring said. The person having the experience is asked whether he or she wants to "stay or go back." Initially people want to stay but they choose to return, sometimes apprehensively, when they realize that there is "work" to be done or husbands, wives, children or other loved ones to care for.

Ring said it was sometimes agony for people to stay alive, especially for those who had been suffering with a long-term illness.

Ring said people typically report there was a "message" and that people learn there are reasons for them to go on living. They see their lives pass before them and sometimes get a look into their futures.

"You certainly have a message by time it's over," said Ellen Stoia, a 49-year-old Chestnut Hill resident. Stoia spoke briefly about her near-death experience 10 years ago.

Stoia, who has suffered for many years with stomach ulcers, said she chose not to die because her children, husband and an ill sister needed her. Stoia said she decided to live even though she previewed some of her future "which didn't look very good."

A film entitled "Business with God," which featured conversations with two women who discussed their near-death experiences, was also presented.

Ring said only a small percentage of those who come close to death report having a NDE. No one claims to know for certain why thousands of people claim to have near-death experiences while others who have come close to death have no such recollections. But Ring surmises that the "messa[illegible]" have something to do with it. He said he thinks people with near-death experiences need to know that there is a meaning for or purpose to their lives.

Ring once queried a colleague, who is researching the subject, about why only a small percentage of people have the near-death experience. The physician responded, "Ken, I haven't got a clue."

Aldermen want closer look over mayoral appointments

NEWTON — The aldermen decided last week they should scrutinize mayoral appointments to city boards more closely.

They sent the Planning and Development Board appointment of Robert Swett, an Auburndale resident who works for a Boston development firm, back to the aldermanic Administration and Planning committee for another review.

That committee approved his appointment the previous week.

Aldermen who recommended that greater scrutiny be applied to board appointees made it perfectly clear their action was no reflection on Swett's qualifications, but they thought the board might become "lopsided" with developers.

Mention was made of one local developer's recent appointment to the Conservation Commission. That appointment, according to alderman Rodney Barker, was offset by the simultaneous appointment of a Newton Conservator to the commission. Barker criticized the aldermen for allowing appointments "to slip by us."

Alderman Richard McGrath said he would like to see an advocate of low-income housing appointed to the Planning and Development Board. "There seems to be a heavy influence of development people on these boards," McGrath said.

He emphasized the aldermen's action was "no reflection on the individual. I don't want this action to even hint that there is a problem on a personal basis. But the board should be looking at these appointments more carefully."

Alderman Lane Sofman, who chaired the committee that approved Swett's appointment, joined fellow committee member Sondra Shick in assuring the aldermen Swett would be a welcome addition to the Planning and Development Board.

He added that Swett's experience in judging the economic feasibility of a development would be useful to the city.

Swett, who works for Boston Properties, a large commercial and industrial developer, told Sofman last week, "I think I can be helpful to the board. If I can't, I'll leave."

Cookie sale highlight of week

Girl Scout Week

A good-humored Mayor Theodore D. Mann went through the Girl Scout oath after signing a a proclamation designating March 5 to March 13 as Girl Scout Week in Newton.

NEWTON — In Newton, Nancy Grissom has a demanding but rewarding job that keeps her busy through the winter months; she's the service unit cookie chairman for the 1983 Girl Scout Cookie Sale at Patriots' Trail Girl Scout Council, serving in this capacity for about 10 years.

She undertakes this job as a volunteer, demonstrating her belief in Girl Scouting as a worthwhile organization and her knowledge that the annual Cookie Sale is a major fundraiser for the Council and troops.

According to Grissom, it is a tough job to continue to merit the faith placed in one by thousands of volunteers and girls, but Patriots' Trail G.S. Council meets the challenge by continuing to provide a strong extra-curricular program for all school-age girls in the Boston area.

The annual Cookie Sale helps enable the Council to continue to meet its own high standards in serving girls. Proceeds from the Cookie Sale are used in a variety of ways, including providing financial aid for girls to attend camp and wider-opportunies events, funding expanded programs to introduce girls to career options and continue informal educational and recreational activities, and maintaining camp facilities at optimum levels.

Grisson reminds local residents that their support of the Cookie Sale is vital to the continuation of the Girl Scout program for girls in Newton.

Local Troop cookie managers join her in urging the public to support the sale: Eleanor Brayman-Brownie Troop 1350, Cindy Warf-Brownie Troop 3019, Dot Norcross-Brownie Troop 3022, Gail Wynkoop-Junior Troop 2600, Joan Sheehy-Brownie/Junior Troop 2329, Paula Carey-Junior Troop 2621, Judy Notartomaso and Janice Muzi-Brownie Troop 2334, Sue Muise-Junior Troop 2435, Barbara Gassett-Cadette Troop 2395, Judy Weltz-Junior Troop 2620, Jeri Shaw and Nancy White-Junior Troop 3017, Judy Tobin-Brownie Troop 2333, Joanne Lowre-Brownie Troop 2583, Grace Richards-Junior Troop 2326, Elaine Arntz-Junior Troop 2996, Mary Morse-Cadette Troop 3032, Peggy Baseman-Brownie Troop 2829, Carol Nagel and Lynda Snider-Junior Troop 2819, Linda McGovern-Junior Troop 2529, and Shannon McGoldrick-Junior Troop 3014.

Newton residents who have not been contacted by a Girl Scout taking cookie orders door-to-door can get more information and order cookies by calling 964-2647 in Auburndale, 244-0084 in North Newton, 244-6f809 in Waban-Newton Uppr Falls, 965-0483 in Chestnut Hill, 964-0536 Newton Upper Falls/Newton Highlands, 244-0668 West Newton/Newtonville.

Photos portray life of Jews in Soviet Union

BROOKLINE — "Portraits in Exile: Jewish Life in the Soviet Union," featuring photographer Richard Sobol's renderings of the family of Anatoly Shcharansky, Jessica Katz, numerous "refuseniks," and studies of synagogue life will open Sunday, March 20 at 3:00 p.m. at Hebrew College in Brookline.

Sobol, whose works are syndicated world-wide by Sipa-Black Star, one of the largest international photo agencies, spent 10 weeks in the Soviet Union on three occasions photographing various modes of Jewish life.

In addition to the family of Shcharansky, who has been confined to Chistopol Prison in the Urals since 1980, the exhibit will include pictures of synagogue life in the Soviet Union. Another moving study is the portrait of a Communist Party - decorated soldier who was ultimately stripped of his World War II medals for refusing to stop his son's "Jewish activities."

That Sobol's pictures came safely out of the Soviet Union is itself a "minor miracle," according to Sobol's recount. On advice of friends and journalists in the U.S.S.R. and partly because he has been followed by KGB agents, he decided not to run the risk of removing his rolls of film from the country.

Six months later, however, the film appeared in the office of a U.S. congressman in Washington, thanks to the Herculean efforts of a number of "refuseniks" who spirited it out of Russia.

Sobol, who is currently collaborating on a book with Elie Wiesel, has traveled extensively through Europe and the Mideast and has worked on assignments for Time, Newsweek, People, Playboy and Paris Match magazines.

The Sobol exhibit, which is open Sundays through Thursdays through May 4, will overlap with Hebrew College's Jack and Helena Gordon Arts Festival, which opens Sunday, April 24, and features as its theme "Russian Jewish Artists."

Shalom Sisterhood planning 'guest day'

WEST NEWTON — Members of churches and temples in Newton and surrounding areas have been invited by the Sisterhood of Temple Shalom in Newton, 175 Temple St., West Newton, to attend "Guest Day" at the Temple on Wednesday, March 9 at 1 p.m.

The entertainment will be provided by MUSE (Music Serving the Elderly in Nursing Homes).

MUSE was founded nine years ago by Paul Wiggin, who recognized the healing power of music and its importance to the institutionalized elderly. The original two nursing homes have now grown to over two hundred and fifty. MUSE singers are professional musicians especially trained for the MUSE program.

By funding the Temple Shalom program, the Sisterhood becomes a sponsor for a performance in a nursing home.

The program will feature solos by Sandra Evans, mezzo soprano and prize winning pianist, and Paul Wiggin, tenor soloist. Mr. Wiggin, president and director of MUSE, is a graduate of Longy School of Music and the New England Conservatory of Music.

Rabbi Murray I. Rothman, spiritual leader of Temple Shalom, will bring greetings to the assembly. Mrs. Terry Bard, president of the Sisterhood, will introduce the speaker. A reception will preceed the program.

Prize winners

Cambridge School of Weston senior Ben Rosenberg, son of Marvin and Lilli Rosenberg of Newton, won a Gold Key Award in the Graphic Design Division of the Boston Globe Scholastic Art Awards recently for his work "Vote Democratic." "Black Coffee Pot" by David Hess, a Cambridge School senior, also won a Gold Key Award in the Pottery Division. Hess is the son of Dr. Betsey S. Williams of Auburndale.

Temple Reyim presents 'Love of the Sabbath'

NEWTON — "The Love of the Sabbath," a program of songs and readings evoking Shabbes observances and moods will be presented as part of the late Friday evening service at Temple Reyim, March 4 at 8:15 p.m.

Sung by Cantor Martin Robbins, the program will express the ceremonies and thoughts of the day–from lighting the Sabbath candles to putting out the Havdalah candle on Saturday evening.

The Yiddish songs will include a pensive childhood reminiscence of the Friday evening table. There will also be a yam-bam tune with Hungarian flavor, a cantorial solo, and a poignant song referring to the coming of the Messiah as the Sabbath ends.

The readings will be taken from Abraham Joshua Heschel's book, The Sabbath. Writing about the importance of sacred moments, Rabbi Heschel commented: "Six days a week we live under the tryanny of things of space; on the Sabbath we try to become attuned to holiness in time."

The public is invited to join in Sabbath worship and to attend on Oneg Shabbat after the services.

Cohen bill backs pot in cancer fight

BOSTON — Legislation sponsored by Rep. David B. Cohen (D-Newton) to allow use of marijuana in treating cancer patients undergoing chemotherapy recently received a favorable report from the Legislative Committee on Health Care.

Among other persons testifying in support of the measure at a recent public hearing were a Harvard Medical School professor and a clinial pharmacologist who have conducted several studies on the subject at the Farber Cancer Institute.

In urging passage of the legislation, the Newton lawmaker said, "It is unusual that the Legislature is presented with an issue which impacts so directly upon who will live and who will die. But that's what is at stake in your consideration of the issue."

Marijuana and THC, the active ingredient in marijuana, are effective in treating the extremely painful side-effects of cancer chemotherapy. The Department of Public Health, in conjunction with appropriate federal agencies, would set up any safeguards it deemed necessary to properly institute a program.

"This is a carefully thought out proposal, backed by a growing body of experimental data, much of which has been developed here in Boston at the Farber Cancer Institute," Cohen said in a press release on the issue. "Due to modern research, many forms of cancer, which were once fatal, are now treatable through the use of chemotherapy. But the treatment is not without its costs. It can inflict a terrible toll upon individuals who undergo it."

The nausea and vomiting associated with it are so servere that as many as 5-10 percent of all chemotherapy patients abandon treatment even though they know they will die without it, Cohen said. Many others suffer terribly, he added.

Marijuana alleviates those symptoms better than anything else medical science has yet to come up with. In one study, 80 percent of those treated reported a reduction in nausea after using marijuana or THC, Cohen said in a press release.

"I suppose that my job in convincing people to support this bill would be much easier it it were aspirin or cough medicine that turned out to be the great cancer fighter," he said. "Because for some, marijuana is so controversial that they find it hard to imagine it having a legitimate medical use. But it does.

"There are many substances which when used in one fashion can benefit society, but when used in another can cause great suffering," the Newton Democrat said. "Radiation is one. Morphine is another. In the right hands it can relieve pain in sick and dying patients. In the wrong hands it can lead to addiction and ruin lives. Marijuana is like that. When used in a medical context it enables seriously ill cancer patients to undergo life saving chemotherapy. When used in a street setting it is enormously controversial."

"The most rewarding part of this issue is knowing that there are those who are alive today because they were able to use THC in their chemotherapy," Cohen said. The most tragic part of the issue is knowing that there are those cancer patients who have died because they were unaware or unable to obtain it. The most frustrating part is knowing that a legislative solution is within our grasp. It would be a great tragedy to let the solution slip through our hands."

Board to boost insurance fund

NEWTON — Money to pay for employee health insurance is in short supply, but the aldermen appropriated $500,000 to fund the city and to prevent employees' claims from being sent back to them.

"If it's a runaway situation we ought to know why," said Alderman Richard Bullwinkle on Tuesday, addressing the problem of the city's Blue Cross and Blue Shield insurance account being exhausted by a large number of employee claims.

The School Department and the city were infused with $250,000 each to fund rising employee claims and increase costs, otherwise the insurance company would not honor bills submitted to them, according to Alderman Paul Coletti.

The request for additional money fueled a short debate addressing the question of whether more affordable health insurance programs are available to the city.

"Other plans restrict where an employee can go for services, but we are aware of what's available and it's certainly cheaper," said Coletti.

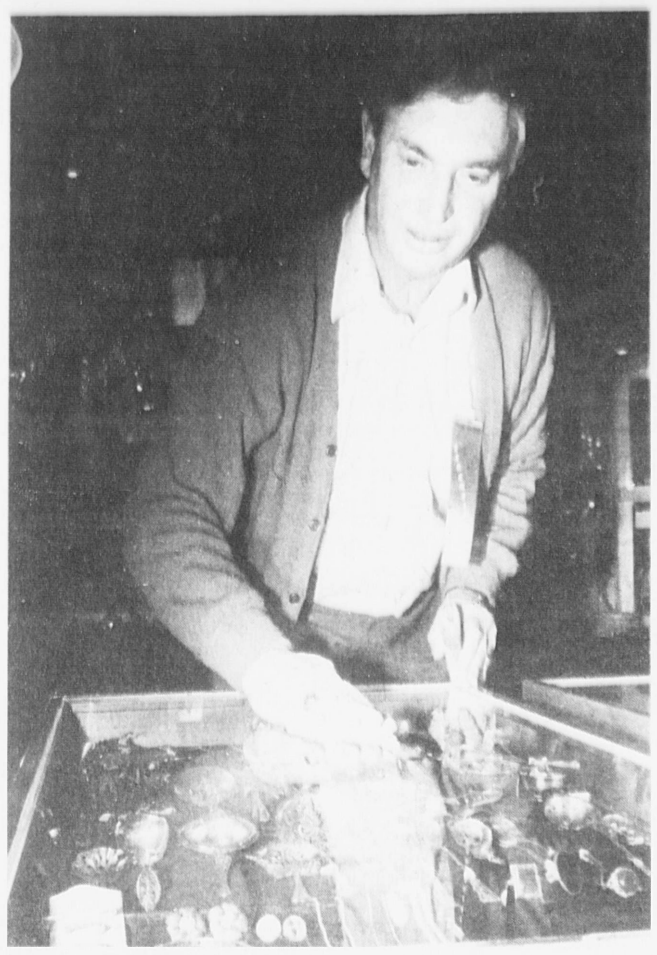

This year $2.5 million was appropriated to pay for health insurance premiums, but from November to January claims have run higher than planned at about $300,000 a month, according to Coletti.

Higher rates charged by the insurance company to the city account for part of the cash shortfall, according to Coletti.

Bullwinkle said he wants a cost analysis of the insurance accounts, because "a half million dollars is a lot of money."

Second Church will present noted opera 'Noye's Fludde'

WEST NEWTON — "Noye's Fludde," a one-hour opera by Benjamin Britten, will be presented at the Second Church of West Newton on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, March 11-13. Hours will be Friday at 8 p.m.; Saturday at 2 p.m. and Sunday at 10 a.m.

The opera is a setting of the Noah story taken from the 15th century Chester Miracle Play cycle. Britten has written a score which uses the combined talents of professional and amateur musicians, about 100 in all.

The leading roles of Noah and Mrs. Noah are played by adult singers while roles of Noah's sons and daughters-in-law are portrayed by children. The animals in the Ark are played by a children's chorus.

The orchestra accompanying the opera has a core of professional players assisted by amateur string players and recorders. In the final tableau a handbell choir is added to the orchestral accompaniment. The performance will be conducted by Second Church Musical Director David Carrier.

Working with him will be Ellen Goodwin, producer-director, and Rachel Sheridan, assistant producer-director.

Tickets for the Friday and Saturday performances may be ordered from the church office or purchased at the door. Tickets are $4 for adults and $2 for children under 12.

Appointment unrest increases

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON — While Congress debates presidential appointments, the aldermen want more say in who serves on citizen committees and some board members are challenging the mayor's choices.

On the increase is aldermanic dissatisfation with Mayor Theodore Mann's nominations of citizens to serve on voluntary committees and the aldermen have drafted new rules that need state approval.

The draft legislation also requiring approval by the aldermen, will give them active approval power, as opposed to their current passive stance.

Under passive approval a nomination by the mayor takes effect if the aldermen fail to take any action within 60 days. The new rule forces affirmative action by the aldermen by making them vote on a citizen choosen by the mayor, before the nomination goes into effect.

"It doesn't make any difference either way to me," said Mayor Mann recently.

But not all the aldermen show the same indifference to the proposal.

"Increasingly, I'm coming to believe the Board of Aldermen is taking on too many detailed jobs and gets itself bogged down," said Alderman Verne Vance, a member of the Legislative and Rules Committee.

Vance takes a narrow view regarding appointments. He believes the rule should not include all appointments by the mayor. "Every member of the Beautification Committee, the Fence Viewers and Historical Commissions, don't need active approval," said Vance.

Three recent appointments to citizen commissions, Allen Green, Robert Swett and Frank Wright, brought the whole issue to a head, stated Vance.

Alderman Rodney Barker recently criticized the Conservation Commission decision and said, "They slipped by us."

Part of the problem with passive approval is they can go through with everyone sleeping by not having to act on it, said Vance.

The draft legislation calls for a majoirty vote of the alderman of all mayoral appointments to: commissions, committees, councils, boards or agencies.

In keeping with the Newton's "strong arm" mayoral powers as written in the city charter, the new rule does not apply to city department heads, the Board of Assessors or city officers.

Challenging the mayor's choice to fill a position on the Horace Cousens Industrial Fund trust, vacated by Jane Pitt, is Alderman Sondra Schick, who objects to the lack of a social service background of Mann's appointment.

The upcoming debate whether to appoint Robert W. Tennant, son of Alderman Robert L. Tennant, to the Horace Cousens Industrial Fund trust may illustrate how "bogged down in details" the aldermen can become and possibly nullify the concept of active approval for all mayoral appointments to citizen committees.

By Stephen Capoccia

WEST NEWTON — To the surprise of many town officials someone left the front door of the boarded-up West Newton branch library open last week making it a possible target for vandals.

A Newton Graphic reporter gathering information about the 60-year-old former branch library on Chestnut Street discovered the front door ajar on Thursday.

Despite citizens' protests the building was mothballed by the city over two years ago for budgetary reasons.

City Building Commissioner James Cameron, in charge of Newton's surplus buildings, said he was surprised when notified about the open front door. Cameron added he appreciated being told and sent someone right over to lock it up again.

"I'm trying to find out how, why or when the building got left open," said Cameron. "We check the building on a regular basis, once or twice a week on a routine basis."

The building commissioner said he did not know who was in the building last, adding, "It shouldn't be unlocked."

Library Director Virginia Tashjian expressed surprise and concern over the open door but said she no longer has jurisdiction over the building.

"Somebody didn't do what they were supposed to do," said Alderman Richard Bullwinkle commenting on the open front door.

The building showed no immediate signs of vandalism, with only a few piles trash inside and the floors scarred from shelves being dismantled and moved to the Davis School on Waltham Street.

Oak shelving had been taken off the walls and used in other branches around the city, according to Tashjian.

An outline on the battered floor shows where the front desk used to be and the two marble fireplaces on the main floor were the only items left unscathed.

In the basement which once housed the children's library was scattered debris and the tile floor showed signs of cracking.

The old branch, built in 1926 with citizen's money and dedicated to the memory of 15 residents killed in World War I, is in the midst of a controversy between local residents and the city.

Over 700 residents signed a petition, prior to its closing, to keep it open, but the city citing budget concerns, had it closed and its contents removed to the Davis School.

For now the library is in limbo. The city hopes to lease it, but can find no takers. The aldermanic Human Service Committee recommended in January to stall its final decision on the branch's fate, pending a move by residents to come up with a plan to resurrect the library.

Once residents have been assured the library trustees will accept private funds raised by citizens to reopen and operate the building, fundraising will begin, stated West Newton residents Eugene Cronin at the last meeting of the Human Services Committee.

Chiropractic for Health

by Dr. David G. Rutman, Chiropractor

SNEEZING

A strong sneezze can bring about more back injury than almost any other type of trauma. Consider what happened to the Governor of Colorado on January 3, 1983. A sneeze can cause a forecful bend of the upper body. Resisting a sneeze stops the upper body's natural forward motion. The result can be a powerful muscle contraction that can cause a painful spinal misalignment. We recommend that you do not resist the natural impulse to sneeze. Simply relax your body and make no attempt to block the sneeze. Of course, consideration for others in the proximity would have you cover your nose and mouth with a handkerchief.

The pain and discomfort resulting from such simple as well as more complex body movements is truly nothing to "sneeze at." Often times, with prompt and proven chiropractic applications, relief can be forthcoming. If you experience such discomfort, we urge you to call DR. DAVID G. RUTMAN, CHIROPRACTOR, 4593 Washington St., Roslindale. Let us analyze your needs and suggest the approach most likely to provide the relief you desire. Tel. 323-5022. VISA & MasterCard accepted. Hours by appt. including 3 eves.

CHIRO TIP:
The seat of your car should be inclined slightly back for improved lower back support.

Nofziger: Things looking up in D.C.

added that he thinks Reagan is the only Republican who can be elected to the presidency in 1984.

"You have to have a guy who can be elected," Nofziger said.

Nofziger, confident that Reagan will run again, said, "He's not the kind of man to leave a job half finished."

Nofziger described a president's relationship to Congress as one of "rewards and punishments," and said, "If they (Congress) know you're leaving in two years, there is nothing to punish them for."

Nofziger said Reagan has waited to announce his candidacy because "that's his style." He told reporters earlier that Reagan should have announced his candidacy "yesterday."

Officials said the gathering was neither an official Reagan fundraiser nor a regular meeting for the group. Some described the event simply as an opportunity for Republicans "to get together." But Barnstead said he requested that Nofziger address the group because the former press secretary is a strong Reagan supporter.

Nofziger urged Republicans to support the president and was critical of party members who criticize Reagan. Nofziger said the president is "the best friend" conservatives have had in the White House for several decades.

In order to be successful in the next election the Republicans should take a "grassroots" approach to politics, Nofziger said. They need to "go door to door and meet with people" rather than depend on elaborate campaigns to win elections, he said.

"The Republicans lost in '82 because they forgot that. That's where we've got to go. As we head into 1984 we have to keep (the grassroots approach) in mind," Nofziger said.

Nofziger, who has known Reagan for 18 years, was applauded several times throughout his speech, during which he spoke with reverence about the president, describing him as "too nice a man" who "doesn't get mad soon enough." Reagan is "reasserting his leadership," he said.

Nofziger's speech was marked by jabs at certain Democratic leaders, Congress ("We have enough laws. I'd be content if Congress just passed the budget and went home.") and the Washington Post ("my favorite whipping boy").

Nofziger, sporting a "Mickey Mouse" neck tie and puffing on a cigar, surprised no one when he took shots at at Senator Edward Kennedy and Speaker "Tip" O'Neill.

"I'm sorry Ted isn't running (for president). I dearly would have loved to have come up here and attack him," he said. "I don't think you win elections by being nice. You have to call a spade a spade and a Kennedy a Kennedy."

Nofziger said Tip O'Neill "has never been on our side. He never will be. He'll do whatever he can to destroy this administration. We might not be able to beat him but we can make him wish that he lost."

Bus cut plan angers parents

Another private school parent, Lou Songer, said, "What you're telling us tonight is that in the $40 million you can't find that $118,000."

"Everyone understands that you want to save money," Songer stressed, "the question is on whose backs do you want to save it?"

Songer suggested that the Newton schools receive federal entitlements based on the total school-aged population in Newton rather than actual public school enrollment.

"It seems to me that once you accept money on the basis of all the children in this city, then you have a responsibility to get all of those kids safely to school," he argued.

"We pride ourselves on being an All-American City...and what we're really saying is if you don't have your kids in the public schools, we're going to punish you," Songer said.

School Committeeman Robert Ricles voiced support for eliminating private school transportation, but stressed that he was not supporting the plan as a means of bringing back private school children.

Ricles said his "top priority" is to "provide excellence for the students who are here" in public school.

Committee member Ann Berwick said arguments presented at the hearing did not persuade her to foot the bill for private school children given the changes in state reimbursement.

"As a parent who drives two children to school...I fully understand the difficulties involved," Berwick said.

But she added, "My motivation is purely financial" in supporting the superintendent's recommendations.

South quintet ends with a bang

NEWTON — For the Newton South basketball team Thursday night's 84-66 demolition of Plymouth-Carver was a fitting ending for a superb regular season.

The 18-1 Lions used the home game as a tuneup for next week's state playoff action but the game had more significance to the Plymouth-Carver, as the Old Colony League entry went in to the game needing a victory to secure a tourney berth.

The visitors' visions of playoff action faded quickly, as the Lions jumped out to a 27-12 first quarter lead. For Newton, 5-10 forward Mike Oglesby provided all the offense necessary. The senior was successful on all seven of his first quarter shots, enroute to a 25 point (11 for 12 shooting) night.

After a second quarter in which they shot only 25 percent, the Lions officially ended the Blue Eagles' season in the third stanza. Oglesby hit three more in a row and Steve Anglin was good for 12 points. The finish came during a 10-second span midway through the period, when Oglesby hit a slam dunk and a three-point play seconds later to give the Lions a 49-29 lead.

Although Oglesby's blistering effort placed him in center stage, Anglin came through with his usual--for him--production of 25 points, 11 rebounds and 11 blocks. Meatchie Russell added 13 assists and seven steals.

Jamie Andrew led Plymouth-Carver with 18 points. Dennis Veiga and Glen Fernandez tossed in 11 apiece.

The state tournament begins next Tuesday, with seeds and pairings to be announced over the weekend. Newton South has a good shot at an opening-round bye, which would leave it idle until next Thursday.

Watertown High's Mike Pendleton hit for a career-high 25 points, but that was about the only bright apot for the Red Raiders, who dropped a 67-54 Middlesex League decision at Belmont Thursday night.

Watertown had a chance to win its season finale, as it trailed only 41-37 going into the final frame. But Belmont's junior forward Jeff Boyden caught fire, picking up nine of his 21 points in the quarter to help Belmont pull away.

Red Raider Coach Dave Born attributed the fourth-quater lapse to weak play off the defensive boards. "They got the offensive rebounds and the easy shots," he said. "And we weren't helping out on defense."

Born also cited the foul trouble of point guard Mark McHugh, who had to sit out most of the third quarter with four fouls.

Pendleton, a junior, reached his career-high total with 11 for 14 shooting, while center Mark Fierri pulled down 12 rebounds in a strong effort.

The Red Radiers finish the season at 5-13 in league play, 5-15 overall.

The St. Patrick's of Watertown basketball team dug itself into a hole that was just too deep, as a second-half rally fell just short in a 52-50 loss at Beaver Country Day Thursday night.

The Knights fell behind early and trailed 34-17 at halftime.

But with senior center Rod Greene, playing in his final game, leading the way with 22 second-half points, St. Pat's came roaring back. By the end of the third quarter, the Beaver lead was down to nine.

But St. Patrick's wasn't finished. With just 19 seconds left, John Huliston's jumper brought the Knights to within four, 52-48. Ten second later, Tim O'Connell's steal and layup narrowed the gap to just a bucket, and when a Beaver player stepped on the baseline while trying to get the ball inbounds, the Knights had their chance.

Joe Sullivan had the shot, but it rolled off the rim as the buzzer sounded.

South guard Tracy Hairston

Brookline eliminates Tigers

By Steve Tiberi
Staff Writer

BROOKLINE — The Newton North boys' basketball team came within two key turnovers of upsetting champion Brookline Wednesday night in the second-round of the Suburban League Playoff Tournament.

The Tigers were trailing, 56-54, but had the ball. Joe Lemar and Fred Hill came up with back-to-back steals and Brookline was off to a 71-68 victory over Newton North.

The loss ended the Tiger season with a 9-8 record overall. Newton North edged Waltham, 46-45, in the first round of the tourney to earn the right to play Brookline. Cambridge will play at Brookline Friday night to determine the tourney winner.

After trailing by seven points in the first quarter, Newton North slowed clawed its way back into the contest. The Tigers cut the lead to four at half and by the end of the third quarter North held a 50-49 lead.

Brookline's top scorers Hill (game-high 28 points) and Lemar (26 points) were being shut down by the aggressive, overplaying North defense. The Tigers used the cold Brookline shooting to gain a 54-53 lead with five minutes to play.

North center Eric Fortune gave the Tigers their final lead of the game with some outstanding work on the offensive board. He stayed with his shot until he dropped it in.

Brookline got the ball to Hill, who missed his shot, but grabbed the rebound. Hill sank the short jumper in the lane and he was fouled. A deadly shooter from the free throw line, Hill completed the three-point play and Brookline was back on top, 56-54.

The Tigers had a chance to tie, but Fortune missed the front end of a one-and-one. Brookline's Hill was fouled and he also missed the front end of a one-and-one. Hill was 12 of 14 from the free throw line, but his miss left the door open for North to come back.

The Tigers brought the ball down carefully. Using great anticipation, Brookline's Lemar stole a pass at the top of the key and roared in for a layup to put Brookline up by four, 58-54, with 3:53 left.

The Tigers came back down and set up for a shot. North guard John Humphrey was at the top of the key and he had a gap to the hoop. Humphrey took it, but Hill came out of nowehere to steal the ball. Brookline ended up with Lemar at the line and he canned both free tosses for a 60-54 lead.

Mark Coppola, who tossed in a team-leading 16 points, threw in one of his patented bombs from the corner to bring the Tigers back to within four points. Unfortunately, Lemar answered answered with a 15-foot bank shot.

"That's why Brookline won the league title," said Newton North coach Jerry Phillips. "They have talented players, who come through when they have to. We got some tremendous performances tonight and the team played well. But, everytime we'd get something going Hill or Lemar would sink a big shot."

Lemar and Hill combined to score 54 of the 71 Brookline points. No other Brookline player would score more than seven points. The Tigers employed a much more balanced scoring attack with five players in double figures.

"Those two turnovers late in the fourth quarter really hurt," said Phillips. "We were doing what we wanted to do on offense, but they just made two great plays."

Newton North came out smoking to start the third quarter. Fortune was on fire scoring the first four points of the period to bring Newton North even at 37-37. He also blocked a shot by Hill at on defense. Newton North outscored Brookline, 17-12, in the third period.

"We wanted to come out strong in the second half," said Phillips. "Last time we played we had a seven-point lead at the half and we knew how important it was to get a good start in the third period. The players did their job, but we just couldn't break out to any kind of lead."

Struggling Brookline relied on the outside shooting of Hill and Lemar to stay in the game. The duo scored 10 of the team's 12 points in the quarter. Humphrey, who scored 13 points, played a strong third period. He played a big part in breaking the Brookline press. The senior guard also collected pair of pretty coast-to-coast baskets.

The Tigers were strong on the boards. John Coppola, Duffy Plunkett, Jim Berrigan and Bruce Corwin were giving Brookline just one shot at the hoop all night.

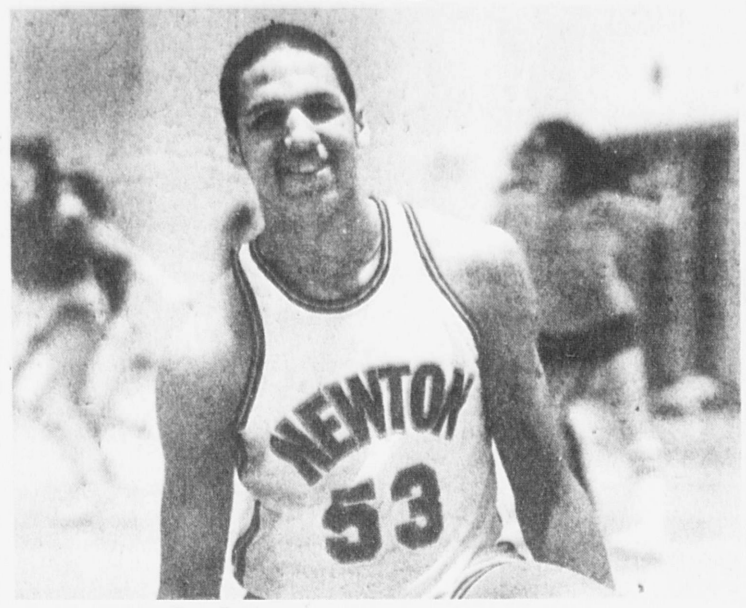

Senior swingman Ennio Manto played one of his finest games of the year. He scored six of his 10 points in the second quarter with some pretty drives to the basket. Sophomore forward Greg Lee stood out in the fourth quarter for the Tigers. He hit a big turnaround jumper to keep Newton North within four late in the game.

BROOKLINE(71)*Hill 8-12-28; Lemar 11-4-26; Tzimoraggas 3-0-6; Huggins 2-3-7; Corbin 1-0-2; Mathieson 1-0-2. Tot. 26-19-71.

PeeWee AA reaches finals

QUINCY — Despite a grueling schedule that featured 10 games in as many days, the Newton PeeWee AA team reached the finals of the Quincy Kiwanis International Youth Hockey Tournament before bowing to host Quincy, 5-2, Sunday at the Quincy Youth Arena.

The final game was the second of the day for both teams, as each won on Sunday morning to reach the final.

Newton got the first goal of the game from Will Bachner early in the first period, but a Quincy goal two minutes later knotted the game.

Quincy went ahead on a goal three minutes into the second frame, but Bachner scored again to tie the game three minutes later.

The game remained tied into the third period, when Newton was handed a golden opportunity in the form of a power play early in the stanza. The effort backfired, however, as Quincy's Paul MacDonald broke the game open with two shorthanded goals 26 seconds apart.

To reach the finals, Newton had beaten the Seahawks, a collection of South Shore players, 4-3, in a come-from-behind effort.

The Seahwaks got the game's first goal in the first period, but Bachner struck again two minutes later for the deadlock. When the Seahwaks went ahead in the second stanza, it was Steven Silk's turn to tie things up.

Third period goals by Jay Cappello and Lance Connerney clinched the berth in the final for Newton.

In tournament action Friday, Silk picked up a pair of second period goals to propel Newton to a 6-1 triumph over Brookline.

Bachner and Peter Menges scored early in the third frame to put the game away, with empty net goals by Bachner and Cappello accounting for the final margin of victory.

Newton had defeated Wilmington, 5-3, Thursday afternoon in opening round tournament action.

To keep pace with the tough schedule ahead, Newton had added four new players for this game, Tom DeMaio, Paul Fay, Danny Murphy and George Maxcey, and all four helped Newton reach the tourney finals.

Lance Connerney picked up the first Newton goal, followed by DeMaio, David Frechette, Steven Silk and Connerney again, on an acrobatic shot from in front of the Wilmington goal.

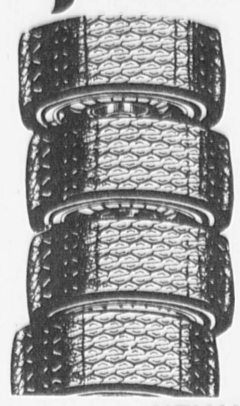

In the midst of the tournament activity, Newton played one Middlesex League game, dropping a 4-3 decision to league-leading Natick Saturday at Burlington.

Natick scored twice in the opening period, but Newton answered right back each time. A Silk goal tied the game the first time, followed by one from David Frechette.

After a scoreless second period, the two team traded goals, with Cappello knotting the score at three at 4:46 of the final frame. But Natick picked up the game-winner just eight seconds later, as it was working on one of six power play opportunities it had on the night.

The week of activity left Newton with a 28-15-6 overall record. After a well-deserved rest, Newton will return to the ice Thursday night at the Fessenden Rink.

Assessing audit, 'large job cut out'

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Comments from aldermen and the mayor on the outside audit of the Assessing Department agree on one point: the office is in disarray, but seeing eye-to-eye on how to cure the office of its ills is up for debate.

"The preliminary report I have seen indicates we have a large job cut- out for us," said Mayor Theodore Mann on Wednesday commenting on the final draft audit by the firm of Touche Ross.

The firm's 72-page report listed findings of huge backlogs, clerical errors, a lack of management direction and a failure to share information with other city departments and the Assessing Department.

How large a job the city has "cut out for itself" to get the department in shape for the coming revaluation this Spring is anyone's guess, but the time to correct and update entries into the city's computer is counted in the thousands of hours.

A huge backlog from data entry items incorrectly or not logged into the department's computer, representing thousands of hours of office time, should be updated before the 1984 revaluation process begins, says the report.

To help implement the report, the mayor said he appointed a citizen's commission made up of "experts in the field."

Chairman of the Subcommittee on Revaluation Paul Coletti questioned the jurisdiction of a select citizen's committee appointed by the mayor.

"Why Touche Ross isn't putting together a plan to salvage the (assessing department) operation presents a problem to me," said Coletti on Tuesday. The firm was not contracted to come up with a plan to implement its findings, according to the mayor's financial officer David Wilkinson.

Mann says the aldermen will have the opportunity to work with the citizen's committee to come up with a remedy.

Alderman Richard McGrath said on Wednesday for the a year and-a-half the problems in the assessing office have been "covered-up" by the administration.

"There's been a cover-up of the operation for a year and-a-half by the administration because they did not want to go through the embarrassment," said McGrath.

McGrath added the mayor's financial officer Wilkinson has been working to "put out the fire in the assessing department to keep it from becoming visible from the public."

In response to the charge of a "cover-up" by McGrath, Mayor Mann said, "When something is obviously not going well, that in no way represents a cover-up."

Mann added the problems have been a matter of public information and the audit firm was brought in "to help get the (assessing) department's act together."

What forced the mayor to reveal the problem by allowing an audit of the department, an audit which was quickly completed in about a month, is the department kept coming before the aldermen asking for additional money to pay for extra staffing, according to McGrath.

The assessing office is looking for another $46,000 to pay for extra staffing and last December the aldermen granted them $67,000 for the same purpose.

Chaos in the assessing department is not necessarily the fault of Chairman of the Board of Assessors Robert Palmer, but is mostly due to the high turnover of personnel in the department and the need for modern business practices, said Alderman Ethel Sheehan, a member of the aldermanic Subcommitee on Revaluation.

McGrath agreed with Sheehan's view saying the assessor's have been in a tough spot, being told by the administration to keep the problems quiet and at the same time having criticism leveled at them by numerous citizens.

A copy of the final draft audit, that cost the city aproximately $10,000, was obtained by the News-Tribune and the report is slated for discussion at a joint meeting of the Finance Committee and Subcommittee on Revaluation Committee on February 28, according to Alderman Coletti.

Phillip Hallie presents Feinberg Mem. Lecture

BOSTON — "Nazis, Jews and Goodness" is the subject of the first Rose Feinberg Memorial Lecture, to be delivered by Professor Phillip P. Hallie, Griffin Professor of Philosophy and Humanities at Wesleyan University, on March 11 at 8:30 p.m. at Temple Israel, Boston.

Louise Freedman of Newton, chairperson of Temple Israel's Continuing Education Committee which arranged the lecture, says that Professor Hallie's talk will probe the Nazi phenomenon, its policy toward Jews and the reaction of the people of the village of Le Chambon in Southern France.

These experiences are the basis for his book, "Lest Innocent Blood Be Shed," which will soon be made into a motion picture directed by Carl Forman. A sit-down Oneg Shabbat and question and answer period will follow the lecture.

A follow-up panel will address the Christian, communal and personal responses to the Holocaust on Sunday, March 13 from 10 a.m. to noon.

The public is invited to these events at Temple Israel, which is located at Longwood Avenue and Plymouth Street, Boston.

Late bus starts for north side schools

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A late activity bus enjoyed by Newton South High and Brown Junior High students for more than seven years will now become available to north side secondary schools.

Up until last week Brown and South have had a late bus coming everyday at 5:15 p.m. The bus was used by athletes and students participating in after-school activities.

At Newton North High the latest bus comes at 2:45 p.m. on Tuesday afternoons. Otherwise, the buses generally pick up North students at 2:30 p.m. each day.

Buses at Day, Bigelow and Warren Junior Highs come when school lets out, although the schedule varies daily among the three northside junior highs. The latest bus time at these schools is about 2:45 p.m. or 3 p.m.

According to School Committee Chairperson Nancy Mann, the School Committee voted unanimously to have late activity buses at all secondary schools when committee members learned "there was a late activity bus for South and Brown and not for any other place."

"We do believe, you've heard it over and over again, in equity," Mann stressed.

Support Services Director Roy Cornelius said the two late buses were going to South and Brown and no other schools when he first came on the job about seven years ago.

"The claim was that when it was done it was a bus that would have shown up at the regular time at these two schools," Cornelius said he was told. "I'm not sure whether I believe that."

Cornelius said Newton has "never really had late activity buses" at its secondary schools with the exception of South and Brown.

Cornelius said South and Brown had two buses (one at 4:15 p.m. and one at 5:15 p.m.) when he first came to Newton. When Newton went to the two-mile-limit for bus service about two years ago, Cornelius said late bus service to South and Brown was consolidated into one bus coming at 5:15 p.m.

The bus currently picks up students at Brown at 5:15 p.m. and then arrives at South at 5:25 p.m.

Cornelius has devised a plan whereby the School Department will be able to provide buses to all secondary schools for the remainder of this year and for next year with no additional cost to the system.

Under the current contract with Commonwealth Coach, the Newton schools have 22 buses in their fleet which are available for up to six hours a day at a rate, Cornelius explained.

The Newton schools can Schedule bus runs within the flat rate contract for up to two hours each morning and a maximum of four hours in the afternoon.

Cornelius said he was able to squeeze another route into the afternoon schedule without going beyond the terms of the contract. The late buses will cost the bus company more money, Cornelius said, and that increase might be reflected in the cost of a new contract when the current one expires after next year.

Starting Monday, a bus will stop each day at North High at 4 p.m. and reach Day Jr. High at 4:15 p.m. Stops will be at the intersection of River and Lexington, Lexington and Commonwealth, and Commonwealth and Washington.

A second bus will stop at the same times at North and Day, but will drop students off at the corner of Fuller and Chestnut, and at the Hamilton School. A third North High bus will also come at 4 p.m. and will stop at Waverly and Tremont, and at Commonwealth and Manet.

The bus for Bigelow will arrive at 4:15 p.m. and make one stop at the intersection of Walnut and Homer Streets. For the remainder of this year only, a bus will now stop at 4:30 p.m. at Warren Jr. High and drop students off at the Hamilton School.

The bus schedule at South and Brown will remain the same with pick-up at Brown at 5:15 p.m. and at 5:25 p.m. at South.

Stops will be made at Oak and Eliot, Beacon and Woodward, Beacon and Varick, Beacon and Beethoven, and Walnut and Carthay Circle.

Paper wins state ruling over release of some police records

NEWTON — The Secretary of State has ruled in favor of a local tabloid publishing company and determined that police records requested by the company are public information.

Tabloid Newspaper Publishers Inc., which publishes the Tab, had filed suit against Newton Police Chief William Quinn charging he violated the Freedom of Information Act by refusing to give the company specific crime data. The newspaper had requested statistics for specific areas in Newton and a listing of stolen goods.

The suit was filed last month in Middlesex Superior Court against Quinn and the city of Newton.

In a four-page letter from Supervisor of Public Records James W. Igoe the attorney general's office will be notified if the city does not make the information public.

Newton City Solicitor Daniel Funk said the city disagrees with the finding and is working on a settlement with the company. Funk said the Tab requested crime statistics according to police patrol areas. Funk said Chief Quinn refused to release the information because it would hinder crime prevention.

The city is offering the tabloid crime statistics for each village in Newton, rather than patrol areas, and a list of stolen goods which does not reveal from where the goods were stolen, Funk said.

The deputy secretary's letter states that information is exempt from the laws governing public information if it should "prejudice the possibility of effective law enforcement."

The letter said Newton police monthly computer printouts "are not a confidential investigative technique. Instead they can be characterized as a statistical measure designed for administrative convenience."

However in recent interviews both Quinn and Tab editor Preston Gralla stated specifically that the company requested statistics for individual villages.

Gralla, who said he was pleased with the decision, said the company wants crime statistics for each village in order to print a crime map similar to one it published detailing crime activity in Cambridge. Cambridge police gave the publication individual crime statistics for Harvard Square, Central Square and East Cambridge.

Chief Quinn said the department compiles crime data according to patrol areas, not by village, and refused to compile village statistics for the publication.

Quinn said mapping crime according to villages is useless to the police.

"It means nothing to us. The computers could do it but it doesn't mean anything," Quinn stated.

Gralla said the company is seeking the data "because it's public information."

"Citizens have the right to know that information. The law is designed so that citizens have the right to that information," Gralla said.

Quinn said the department "has nothing to hide." Daily police activity is listed in log and available to the public in the main lobby of police headquarters in West Newton Square, he said.

The log lists only the nature and location of police activity. However the police journal, a separate computer printout, details crime activity.

Police officials each day supply a News Tribune and Newton Graphic reporter with information from the journal.

Gralla said the Tab does not have the manpower to send a reporter to police headquarters each day or the space to publish a log of police activity.

Aquinas offering 'New Directions'

NEWTON — Aquinas Junior College, Newton, through its Center for Continuing Education announces the spring offering of New Directions. The day and evening programs will begin in February and March.

This back-to-work workshop is for women who need to update or acquire skills. This day program is a six week offering combining the skill of typewriting and the procedures and communication skills needed in an office.

Upon the completion of New Directions I the participants receive certificates. Some women take part-time or full-time employment. Others continue their education.

New Directions II commences March 15. This eight-week workshop is held two nights a week. This program assists business women who are under-employed or wish to make a career change. The typing skill is improved and instruction is given in office procedures and interviewing skills.

Both programs have limited enrollment. This allows for individualized instruction.

Women wishing to enter the programs should do so as soon as possible. Registrations are received on a first come, first serve basis. Further information may be obtained by telephoning 244-0089 or 244-8134.

CHESTNUT HILL — A Wakefield man was uninjured after an armed robber struck him in the head and ripped a long fur coat of him as he walked on Boylston Street last Wednesday police said.

According to police, the man had just left a Boylston Street beauty salon and walking along Boylston Street about 7:30 p.m. when he was approached from behind by a black male.

Police said the suspect, holding an automatic hand gun, placed it at the victim's head and struck him. The robber tore off the man's full-length muskrat coat, estimated to cost $3,500 and fled from the scene in a white car, possibly a Vega.

The suspect was described by police as about six feet tall, 180 pounds, with short hair and a dark complexion. He was wearing jeans and a calf-length leather coat.

A police officer discovered the man inside his Toyota about 1 a.m. and alerted an ambulance which transported him to Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

Two hours later a police officer interviewed the victim, who said he was with a 20-year-old white female whom he had met earlier in the evening. The victim told police he did not remember how he was knocked unconscious but that $50 in cash and his ring and watch had been stolen, police said.

Committee tackles issue of school lice prevention

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Some parents may remember the days when kids with head lice had their heads shaved and doused with kerosene to kill the irritating pests.

While that is no longer the recommended treatment, a committee of city officials and parents are finding a host of obstacles to ridding Newton elementary schools of the problem.

Problems include parents who feel lice are a stigma and are ashamed to report a case to parents who view lice and their eggs or nits as a mere nuisance and are unaware of how easily lice spread.

According to several parents and Newton Health Commissioner Bernice Joyal, reported cases of head lice among Newton youngsters has increased dramatically this year.

Joyal said 382 cases were reported during all of last year, while 297 cases were reported in just the first half of the current school year.

The committee chaired by Ald. Cynthia Creem met for the first time Wednesday night at Newton City Hall. The impetus for forming the committee came largely from a group of Oak Hill Elementary parents who formed an organization called Parents Against Lice (PAL).

PAL estimates there may be as many as 1,600 cases a year in Newton among elementary children, their parents and siblings.

PAL is especially concerned about frequent use of chemical treatments to kill head lice. The treatments, which come in both over-the-counter preparations and as prescriptions, contain a pesticide, lindane, which PAL founders warn should be used with extreme caution.

After testimony from PAL's Debbie Altschuler and Leslie Kenney before the Aldermanic Human Service Committee, the subcommittee was established to explore solutions.

Members include Joyal, Joan York of the Health Department, Carol Stapleton of the Recreation Department, John Romanowski, a pharmacist and member of the Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce, Ald. Carol Ann Shea, and Rhonda Housman, a parent.

Altschuler and Kenney are also members of the subcommittee. Both the School Commitee representative James Mnookin and a representative from the PTA Council missed the first meeting.

In its first meeting, the committee decided to investigate reinstituting the school policy of four years ago: keep kids out of school until there are no longer any eggs or nits visible on a child's scalp.

Altschuler favored this approach, but Commissioner Joyal warned of a "parent uprising."

While such a policy may seem a reasonable part of an all-out war on head lice, Creem recalled "many irate" parents over just such a policy four and five years ago when the lice problem was rampant in the schools.

The current policy in Newton is to send children home when live eggs or lice are found and to allow them to return once they have been treated with a lindane preparation. The problem, however, is that the eggs, even if they are dead, will still be on a child's scalp if they are not carefully combed out by parents.

While both Joyal and PAL representatives Altschuler and Kenney feel live eggs sometimes remain after treatment. Follow-up to see if live eggs remain is crucial, Kenney said, but is often not done properly in the schools.

Joyal said she would advocate the policy of keeping kids out of school until all eggs are gone if PTA's and the School Committee would support it.

The subcommittee will also explore ways to better circulate information on proper use of treatments and to make parents feel responsible for reporting all cases.

PAL has evidence of poor standards for labeling the treatments and wants the schools to upgrade their warnings on improper use of the treatments.

As an example of the danger, PAL says the pesticide can be absorbed through the skin and overzealous parents should not under any circumstances leave the treatment on a child's scalp longer than prescribed. Another special warning is for pregnant women. Pregnant women treating their child's scalp should wear rubber gloves, the group warns.

Nuclear activist Jean Holladay

No nukes; no regrets

Grandmother faces court date

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON CENTRE — Jean Holladay of Newton said she was like most people before she became a nuclear disarmament activist two years ago.

"Like most people, I hadn't paid attention," said Holladay, 53, who last November was arrested and charged in connection with a blood-pouring, hammer-wielding protest at the Trident missile construction site in Connecticut.

Holladay, wife of The Rev. William Holladay, a teacher at the Andover-Newton Theological Seminary in Newton Centre, said the turning point came when she traveled to Connecticut to watch the launching of a Trident missile.

"It was powerful to watch it go out - much different from seeing it in a book," said Holladay, a Newton resident for 11 years.

Last November Holladay and five others entered the Electric Boat shipyard in Groton, Ct., in the early morning to wield hammers and pour blood down a Trident submarine missile hatch.

Dissident differs

NEWTONVILLE — Yuri Tuvim laughs when he hears "concerned citizens" talk about a verifiable nuclear weapons freeze.

A Soviet Jewish dissident who came to this country seven years ago, Tuvim says most Americans are "ignorant" of what it's like to live inside Russia.

"It's a closed society," Tuvim said last week. "It's a controlled society. Even the Russians can't go where they want. To think the mafia running the country would let any outsider check on their nuclear weapons is ridiculous."

Big buck$ due you?

BOSTON — The state treasurer last week released the names of 42,000 Massachusetts residents, including over 1100 names in this area, who are due more than $17 million in abandoned accounts.

Under the state's unclaimed money law bank accounts, insurance proceeds, uncashed gift certificates, payroll checks, customer overpayments and the like that have gone untouched for at least five years are deemed to be abandoned. All such accounts are to be reported to the State Treasurer Robert Q. Crane, who then tries to locate the people named on the accounts.

Last year, Crane returned more than $18 million of the $35 million in reported abandoned accounts to the rightful owners or legal heirs.

Crane said "We have had to assume the role that rightfully belongs to banks, insurance companies and other institutions. It is apparent that less than a sincere effort is being made by some of these institutions to find the owners.

Novel idea not a dream

By Tom Murphy

NEWTON — Irish immigrants who found their destiny in America by way of Prince Edward Island furnish the elements for a sweeping sage of three generations in the just-published novel of Newton native James F. Murphy Jr.

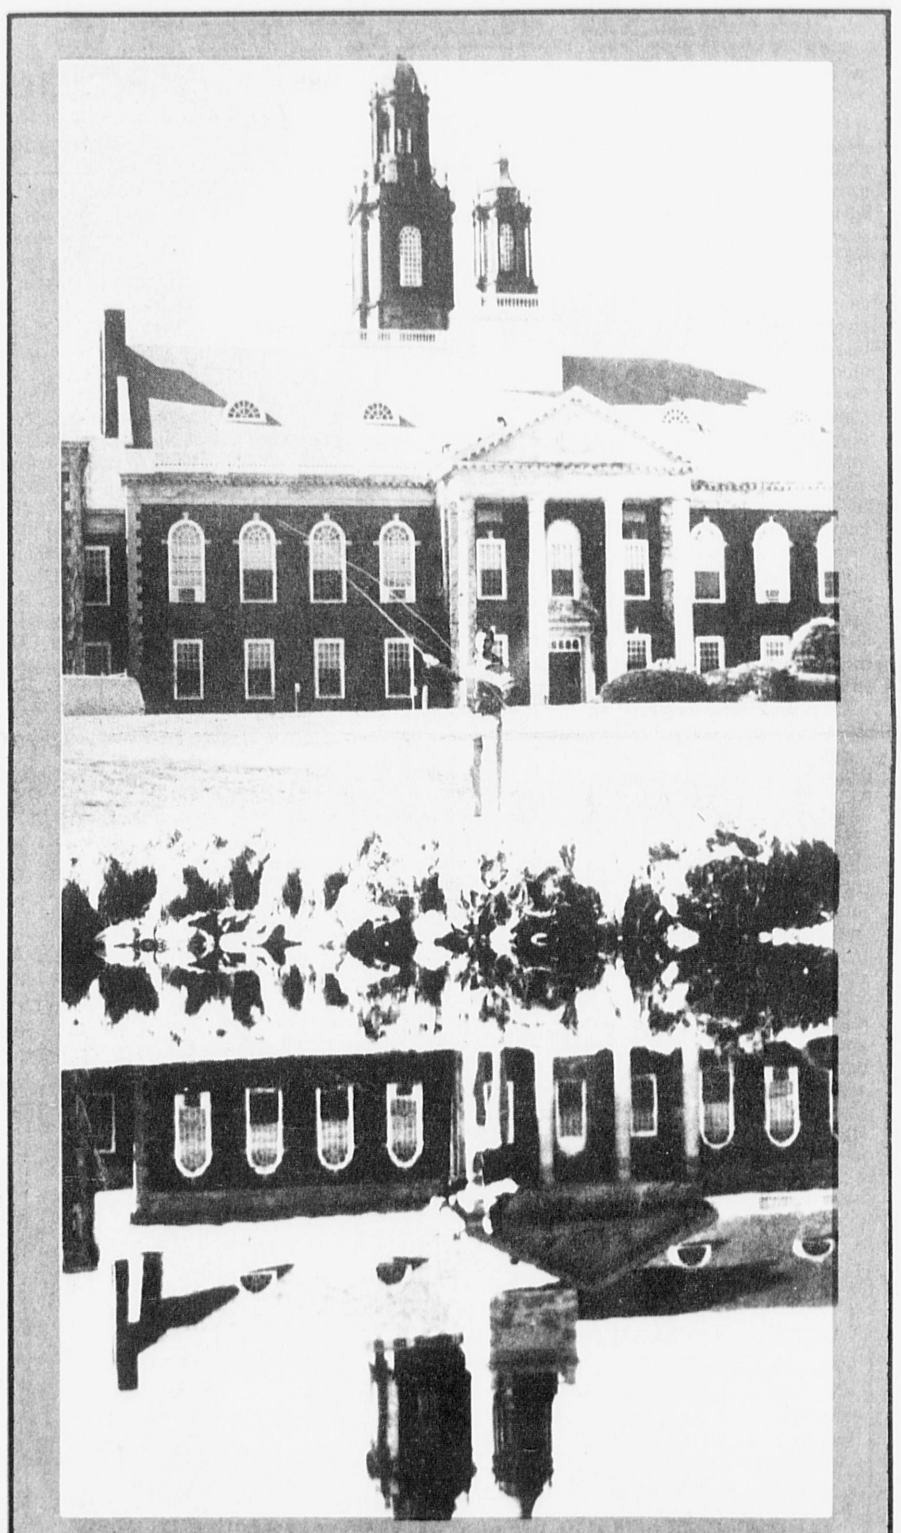

"They Were Dreamers" follows the adventures of the McMahons who struggled to establish the life and identity for themselves in the turbulence of the 19th century.

The Murphy book is a sequel to "The Mill," in which the writer, a lecturer and avid student of Irish history used the city of Lowell as the prototype environment for the efforts of first generation settlers to survive in a factory town.

Born in 1932, Jim Murphy graduated from Our Lady's High School. He received a bachelor's degree in English from Boston College, a masters in education from Framingham State University and a master in arts in English literature from Northeastern.

Murphy also studied at Yeats Poetry School in Sligo, Ireland, and has taken courses at King's College in Aberdeen, Scotland. He lived in Scotland from 1965-66 and in Ireland for long periods of time from 1959 to 1980. In addition, he has made many trips to Canada, especially Prince Edward Island and as a result, brings firsthand knowledge to "They Were Dreamers."

Rejects reward

Honest man a real gem

WEST NEWTON — When 16-year-old Yeh Weijan found a bag brimming with gold necklaces and diamonds on a bus last week there was no question about what should be done.

As he said after turning the bag filled with some $35,000 worth of jewelry over to police, his parents had taught him to be honest.

Weijan, of Auburndale, refused a reward from the jewelry repairman who lost the gems because the jewelry did not belong to him.

"If I wanted a reward, I would have kept the whole bag," Weijan said.

The teenager was traveling on an MBTA bus at 5 p.m., heading east on Washington Street, when he noticed a cloth bag resting on a nearby seat. Out of curiosity Weijan picked up the bag thinking that it contained food. He was surprised to find it was full of gold necklaces, diamonds and a $3,000 watch.

"It seemed so expensive," said Weijan, a Newton North High School sophomore.

Weijan got off the bus in West Newton Square and approached Newton Police Patrolman George Borey who was directing traffic in the square. Police soon traced the gems to Caruso's Jewelers in Braintree and contacted owner Paul Caruso.

Caruso said a Newton man, whose identity he declined to reveal, was taking the jewelry to his home for repairs. Caruso said that when police called him Friday, he had not known the repairman had lost the jewels.

"I didn't have time to get nervous," Caruso said.

Weijan said the Newton man who lost the bag of gems offered him a cash reward, but the teen declined the offer.

Weijan speaks little English and his comments were interpreted through a journalist with the Taiwan Central News Agency. Born and raised in Taiwan, Weijan moved to Auburndale three months ago when his diplomat father was transferred to Boston.

Yeh Weijan

Weijan's father, Yeh Kang Chiang, works for Taiwan's Coordination Council for American Affairs in Boston. His mother, Hsiu Lan, is a homemaker. Weijan also has five brothers.

"My father and mother always taught me to be honest. The jewelry did not belong to me," he said.

Weijan noted proudly that the police praised him for being an honest man.

No strike planned by DPW

NEWTON — After dumping the city's latest contract offer by a nearly 2 to 1 margin last week, Department of Public Works employees are expected to keep on the job and off the picket line, said their union president.

Asked if any strikes are likely, union president Daniel MacClaren said, "No, I don't see why we would."

Group takes plans into neighborhood hands

NEWTON CORNER — A group of Newton Corner residents are taking the need for community improvements into their own hands with plans to raise $300,000 for beautification and recreational facilities at Farlow Park.

The city of Newton Community Development Program recently completed a master design plan, at a cost of $100,000, for the park project behind the Eliot Church on Centre Street. The city's community developement program has already funded the intallation of replicas of electric gas fixtures, cast-iron benches and a path linking Farlow and Chaffin Parks.

Further recommended improvements which local citizens hope to fund include installing Victorian-style benches and trash recptacles and planting shrubs and trees with tree marks and historic markings.

It recommends creating granite edging along the pathways, restoring an old cast-iron bridge and reactivating a water fountain. A bandstand for community events, birdhouses and improvements to childrens' recreational areas are also recommended for the park, which is the center of the village's historic district.

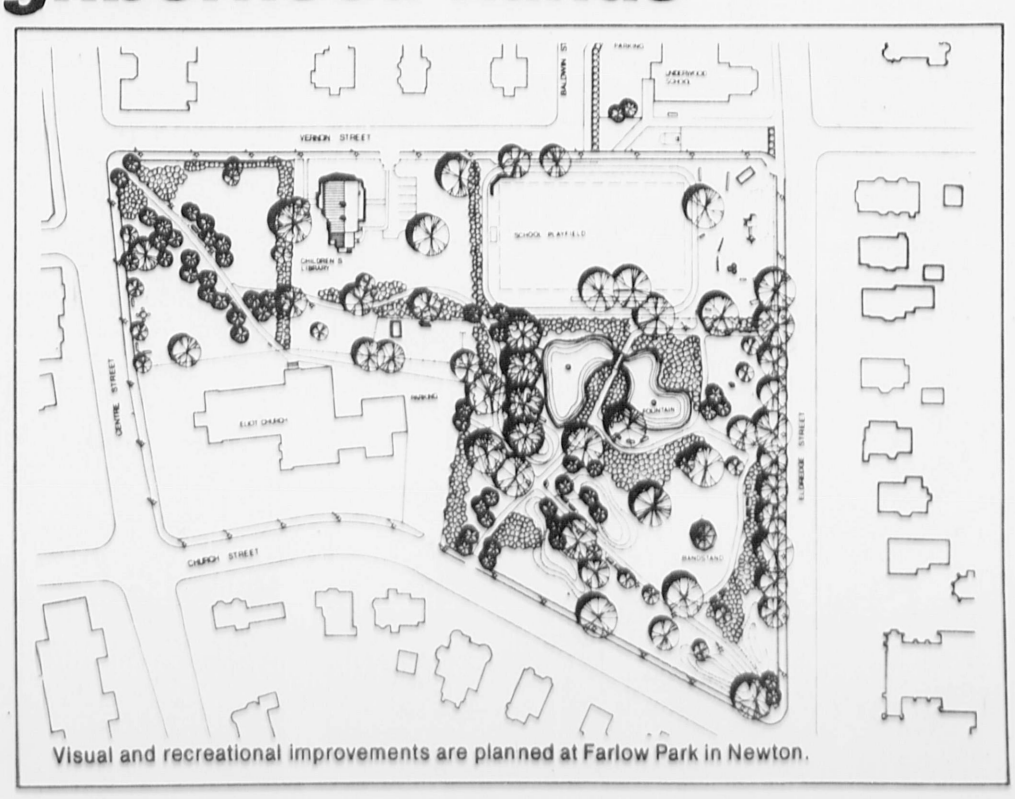

A committee called "Friends of Farlow Park" plans to raise the money to follow through with the plans through various fund-raising projects and private and corporate contributions. The committee plans to meet sometime in late March, according Peter Smith, a committee member.

Smith said none of funds has been raised and no definite fund-raising plans have been set.

"The whole concept of this project is to improve the quality of life," said Smith, an architect with Childs, Bertman, Tseckares and Casendino, Inc., firm which designed the plans.

Smith said the committee

2,300 expected in parade

JAMAICA PLAIN — The third annual Vietnam Veterans Day Parade will wind its way from Jackson Square to St. Thomas Aquinas Church, Sunday, March 27.

The theme of this year's parade will be "Remembering is not enough, POW's and MIA's."

The organizers of the parade expect at least 2,300 marchers will participate with the U.S. Marine Corps, the U.S. Navy and the U.S. Army all sending color guards or bands for the event.

Local police and fire departments will also participate in the march.

The parade, which will draw participants from as far away as Worcester, began three years ago with 900 marchers and nearly doubled the second year to 1,600 marchers.

Jamaica Plain has been chosen for the march because the first Vietnam Veterans post in the state was chartered there.

The Jamaica Plain post was the first not to be connected with one of the other veteran organizations, such as the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The U.S pulled out of Viet Nam on March 29, 1975.

Jack Cuddy, one of the parade organizers, said all war post organizations from Worcester to ting such city services as trash collection, road work and sewer-line maintenance.

The rank and file members voted 196 to 102 on Thursday to reject a pact that included a 5-percent pay raise, the chance to prove they can collect rubbish as well as a private contractor and additional health insurance coverage.

In negotiations with the city for a year and without a new contract since July, the union and the city logged more than 100 hours of talk to come up with the latest contract offer, according to the administration.

Speaking about the many hours that have gone into negotiating with the city, union president MacClaren said, "It's been a trying time and these things are never easy." He expects the next step in negotiations to go on normally.

Mandatory-overtime clauses and other attempts by the administration to insert more management-rights policies into the union contracts have led to numerious skirmishes between the union and the administration.

In February the union held an illegal two-day strike, temporarily causing trash to pile up and other city services to be curtailed. The State Labor Relations Board odered the union back to work and the city back to the negotiation table, ending the two-day strike in February.

A sore point between the city and the union is Mayor Theodore Mann's push for putting city trash pick up in the hands of a private contractor.

The aldermen voted 17 to 7 last month against the mayor's move. Mann believed the private contractor would save the city money and wanted to disperse the 45 men in the sanitation staff to other city departments.

The latest contract offer had a provision for a Sanitation Department of 27 men at a higher rate of pay and was most competitive with the private trash firm, according to Mann.

A streamlined Sanitation Department would be allowed to prove itself during a six-week trial and then the city would determine if it wanted to continue the service.

The next step in the negotiations calls for a "fact-finding" process, which allows each side to present evidence that supports its current position.

MacClaren said he expects this process to go smoothly.

Mayor criticized on 'vacation' timing

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — School Committee Chairperson Nancy Mann sharply criticized the timing of Mayor Theodore Mann's "vacation" in Taiwan as "irresponsible" in light of his statements to her that he intends to cut the school budget.

The mayor is off to Taiwan as part of a delegation of eight U.S. mayors selected for a 10-day mission. In an interview before leaving, Mann said he hoped to encourage trade between Taiwan and Newton as well as study how municipal government operates in the eastern country.

The mayor said his trip will be extended to nearly three weeks for a vacation with his wife.

The extension means he will miss the public hearing on the proposed $40.5 million school budget, the "straw" vote and the final March 23 vote of the School Committee.

Chairperson Mann lashed out at the mayor for choosing this time to take a vacation and miss the hearing and votes.

"I am very upset about that," she said sharply. "I think it's irresponsible if he plans to cut the budget."

"And he didn't even have a representative here" during Monday's meeting, she complained.

As an ex-officio member of the School Committee, the mayor has participated in previous years in school budget votes and normally has a representative at budget meetings in his absence.

"He has told me that he would cut the budget," she said.

"Now he has not been specific about the amount, although he keeps holding to that damn 'target' figure (of a $253,000 hike over last year)," she said hotly.

Superintendent John Strand's proposed budget calls for a total increase of nearly $1.2 million, of which negotiated 5.5-percent teacher salary increases account for roughly $400,000.

As the result of a Leominster court decision, the mayor now has power to cut the proposed school budget before submitting it to aldermen. Aldermen can make further cuts. They can vote resolutions asking for increases, but are powerless to restore funds themselves.

Before leaving for Taiwan, the mayor again made his feelings known on the school budget in the form of a three-page letter to Chairperson Mann.

"I do not have to belabor the fact that I am and always have been a devoted supporter of quality public school education..." the mayor's letter began.

The mayor's letter only indirectly threatens to cut the proposed budget to his "target" level if the School Committee is unwilling to do it.

"To increase the school budget in the face of declining enrollment, while at the same time, because of that action, requiring cuts in other municipal departments, would be imprudent, counterproductive, and, in most cases, impossible," the mayor's letter stated.

"The fact is that there is no escaping the responsibilities of my office, and those include the political fallout that is bound to occur – but I sought the office and was duly elected to carry out those responsibilities," the letter stated.

"Presently, in my judgement, without exceeding the budgetary guidelines, the quality of education and other public services in Newton need not be diminished at this time," he said.

When asked her interpretation of the letter, Nancy Mann said, "I don't understand that letter. I think it's a very confused letter.

"It confuses me," she stressed.

The School Committee Chairperson said she reads "significant support" from the committee to approve new spending for programs and improvements proposed by Strand.

The mayor cannot "hold to that arbitrary (target) figure" if he is away from deliberations on the proposed budget increases, she said.

Mann said she intends to air her criticisms of the mayor's absence at the public hearing on the school budget.

Boston have been contacted and asked to participate.

The organizers are also appealing to the general public to donate to the parade by sending a contribution to Vietnam Veterans Memorial Day Committee, c/o Vietnam Veterans of Mass., Room 19A, Mass. State House, Boston, Ma. 02133.

Gov. Michael Dukakis has been asked to participate but has given no indication of whether he will attend, according to Cuddy.

The members of the Parade Committee are: Denise O'Brien, Roslindale; Jeff Boehm, Roslindale; John Kelly, Hyde Park; Jack Cuddy, Roslindale; George Driscoll, Roslindale; Ken FitzPatrick, Dorchester; James M. presently has five members but needs a minimum of 15 people. He said the committee will plan and facilitate fund-raising efforts and be concerned with the construction and ongoing maintenance and security of the park.

"We need anyone who is interested and willing to attend monthly meetings," Smith said.

The committee will also include PTA representatives from the nearby Underwood School and representative from local churches, Smith said.

"It's a joint committee. We want a broad coverage of all the people affected," he said.

The committee members are particularly concerned with maintaining the improvements and security through proper lighting and keeping bushes trimmed.

Smith said the group will also address plans to coordinate improvements to the Boys and Girls Library in Newton Corner, which is not included in the Farlow Park plan.

Anyone interested in working with Friends of Farlow Park should contact Smith at 262-4354.

Mayor heads for Taiwan

NEWTON — Mayor Theodore Mann is off to Taiwan in hopes of encouraging trade between the city and the eastern country and to see how they run their municipal government.

Selected by the U.S Conference of Mayors, Mann is one of eight U.S. mayors to go on the trip which lasts 10 days. The mayor will also take some vacation time and extend the trip, with his wife, to nearly three weeks.

The trip will keep Mann away from the School Committee budget vote on March 23, but he has already had his input, he stated.

Grandmother faces charges

Holladay and the other protesters with the Atlantic Life Community, were arrested and jailed shortly after the incident. Charged with first degree criminal mischief they were held for five weeks on bail then released without bail on Dec. 23. The protesters are scheduled to appear in New London Superior Court on April 5.

"It was a symbolic method," said Holladay, the mother of four grown children and grandmother of a nine-month-old baby, "I hope it has an effect."

Holladay conceded the November incident at the Trident site was an unusual protest method, in that they wielded hammers and poured blood down the missile, but she claims the methods bore Biblical significance.

"It was Biblical. It wasn't vandalism," she said, referring to the book of Isaiah.

"He will wield authority over the nations and adjudicate between many peoples; These will hammer their swords into plowshares, their spares into sickles. Nation will not lift sword against nation, there will be no war training for war."

Recalling the day she watched the Trident launching Holladay said, "If we weren't there when it went out, they would have assumed it was going out with the approval of the citizenry."

Holladay, who preaches at the Eliot Church in Newton, has been jailed twice in connection with other disarmament protests. She was once jailed for several days after a Vietnam War protest. She said she faces a charge of civil disobedience in the state Supreme Court for passing out disarmament material last year at the Draper Company in Cambridge.

The possibility of being arrested and jailed again will not stop Holladay from participating in future protests, she said. Last Tuesday Holladay was to have protested at the AVCO company sight in Wilmington which could receive an MX missile contract.

Holladay lives with her husband on the seminary campus and devotes much of her time to planning and participating in "vigils" at missile-design and construction sights. The vigils include prayer readings and leafleting, she said.

It is significant, Holladay said, that vigils are held on religious holy days, such as Good Friday, and on the anniversaries marking the days bombs were dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki "to make the connection between the holocaust that could come from the nuclear devastation, which would involve the deaths of so many." She said one Trident missile is equivalent to "2,040 Hiroshimas."

Holladay said she and other disarmament activists are planning a vigil on Good Friday at the Draper Labs.

"I do it as a matter of faith. As God's children, we can't make nuclear weapons," she said, "I think it's a scandal. We have 40,000 children who die every year from malnutrition and all we do is buy more weapons."

A former nurse at Human Resourse Institute, a psychiatric hospital in Brookline, Holladay said she also had worked with a religious group among the poor in South America.

Holladay now works with a number of disarmament groups including Newton Action for Nuclear Disarmament and Ailanthus, a Boston-based group. She said she expected to leave for Connecticut last Thursday to "make connections" there with other activist organizations and plan other vigils.

"I would say in numbers the vigils are growing. People are attending even during cold weather," she said.

Holladay, who said she would be "delighted" by a weapons freeze, is not involved with government lobbying or protests in the Capitol. But she favors those methods because, "I think we need to do every possible thing."

"I'm more involved with vigiling at weapon sites," Holladay said, adding that, "They're continuing to build Tridents. The 'Ohio' is fully armed at sea. Two more are ready to go and four others are being built."

Takin' the T

Neither rain nor sleet and all of that keep public forum organizers Jody Young (from left), Mayor's Advisory Committee on Transportation chair; Doris Shaines, chair of the League of Women Voters Transportation Study; and Newton LWV president Sandy Butzel from a ride on the Green Line.

League plans 'T' forum

NONANTUM — Newton transit riders will have the chance to voice their concerns about MBTA service problems when "T" officials meet with the League of Women Voters and Mayor's Advisory Committee on Transportation Wednesday, March 16.

The forum, chaired by Mayor Theodore Mann, will start at 7:30 p.m. at American Legion Post 440, 296 California Street. The building is accessible to the handicapped.

"We've notified close to 60 organizations and groups throughout the city about this meeting," said Jody Young, chair of the Mayor's Advisory Committee. "We're inviting them to give their views on Newton's public transporation."

Representing the "T" will be Alan Castaline, director of service planning, and Lewjean Holmes, executive director of the MBTA Advisory Board. Pat Jordan, chief railroad services officer, will coordinate MBTA responses to the public.

Other areas slated for discussion will include Green Line fares and parking; plans for additional cars and maintenance; bus service scheduling, particularly in relation to connections with express lines; and T information services and communication with the public.

League of Women Voters transportation study chair Doris Shaines said league members feel "that this is an appropriate time for an assessment of Newton's service" by the T.

For information about the public forum call 244-4467.

Eviction compromise reached

NEWTON — A balance was struck between what is legal and what is humane in Newton District Court Thursday and four men who faced eviction from their Webster Street home can stay until the summer.

Judge Monte G. Basbas told the landlord's attorney, Robert Blumsack, that he had a right to put the men on the street for missing rent payments and living without a lease.

He also said, "It would be a very coldhearted guy who would do that. We still have some winter months ahead of us."

The landlord contended Vin Whalen and 93-year-old Charlie Stuart, who, between them, have lived at 60 Webster St. for more than 44 years, were "trespassers on the property." The woman who sublet rooms for 40 years to the present tenants died last fall. According to the landlord, her death terminated the lease.

While court arguments between the Blumsack and the two Boston College law students acting as attorneys for the tenants established the shaky ground under the tenant's case, Basbas insisted, "Justice must be tempered with compassion." He offered to meet with the attorneys to work out "a reasonable, compassionate and equitable settlement."

Blumsack said, in a conference in the judge's chambers, that he was "willing to work things out."

The compromise requires overdue rent be paid by the end of March, that future rent be paid on time and that Whalen, Stuart and the other tenants move out when the original lease runs out July 1.

Ironically enough, the city's Outreach Worker Diana Patten showed up after the court session to inform Stuart she had found him a room at the YMCA when it looked like he might be evicted. Stuart said he would probably make the move.

Assessing assist voted by board

NEWTON — The Board of Aldermen Monday night approved another $9,000 to pay for temporary staffers in the city's Assessing Department.

The approval came after a report by the Chief Budget Officer David Wilkinson that he found the temporary staff well qualified to clean up the backlog of paperwork that has been bogging down the department's operations.

Wilkinson emphasized, during a special meeting with the aldermanic Revaluation Sub-Committee, that his scrutiny of the department's staff was limited to temporary personnel.

Aldermen who originally proposed that Wilkinson examine the staffing needs of the department also emphasized that their concerns were only with the qualifications of the temporary staff.

Chief Assessor Robert Palmer explained that only $1,000 per week was needed to maintain the present temporary staff; but he said he needed more money for extra personnel.

Implementing a recommendation from a recent Touch Ross audit of the assessors, which suggested that a person be hired to take care of all the administrative duties within the department, was cited as a major objective for Palmer and Wilkinson at the moment.

Wilkinson is now "on loan" from the Executive Department to oversee the implementation of all the auditor's recommendations. He estimated the $9,000 approved by the aldermen might see the department through the next three weeks, after which time he should have a clearer picture of its exact staffing needs.

Further discussion of departmental changes recommended in the recent audit will take place at this Thursday night's meeting of the Revaluation Sub-Committee, 7:45 p.m. in City Hall.

Pay hike proposal sent to FinCom

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A proposal to raise the pay of the mayor and the Board of Aldermen has been sent back to the Finance Committee, where at least one resident said he would put it to the test it missed at a recent public hearing.

Vincent Fillipone, in the course of several furious outbursts during Monday night's meeting of the full board, told aldermen he was appalled at their attempts to force the proposed pay raises on the city's taxpayers.

Only four residents appeared at last Thursday's public hearing on the pay hike proposal. Fillipone did not attend. He had previously appealed to the board to change the date of the hearing because he and other taxpayers who opposed the raises would be out of town on that date.

President of the Board of Aldermen Matthew Jefferson said he was concerned that the board was being asked to delay its business "for one person." He added, "This happens too many times on this board. I resent that people are saying we are jamming this down their throats."

Jefferson has already said he favored the pay hike and that the aldermen deserved the same monetary consideration as other city workers who are asking for raises.

Alderman Richard McGrath responded to several outbursts from Fillipone by telling him he was "out of order."

Alderman Lane Sofman contended it was the board's responsibility to allow as much citizen input as possible on the proposed pay raise because "it's such a sensitive subject."

When the aldermen voted that the proposal be sent back to the Finance Committee, Chairman Edward Richmond said that members of the public will be heard at the next meeting as long as they adhere to the rules of the committee.

The Fincom will meet next Monday night, Mar. 14, at City Hall.

The proposed hikes would take effect next term. They would raise the mayoral salary from $37,500 to $58,000, and hike the aldermen's salaries from $1,800 to $3,000.

Senate rule reform is long overdue

The state legislature's Special Committee on Senate Rules Reform is currently pondering rules changes which would guarantee that certain public business sees the light of day.

Senator Jack Backman, a Democrat who represents Newton and Brookline, testified in favor of the legislation last week, saying the rules overhaul would "restore democracy, accountability and public trust" in the state Senate.

The need for such rules changes could not be more paramount. Among the measures Backman and others have advocated are the election of Senate minority and majority leaders and committee chairman by secret ballot (to eliminate the potential for pressure from above before a roll call), fixed budgets on all Senate staffs and an end to the late night sessions for which the state Senate and Bully Bulger have become famous.

This is certainly not the first time such rules changes have been proposed. But as Backman noted, "One of the most important debates of the last session, the discussion of capital punishment, took place after midnight."

We have all read too often the tales of legislative abuse and secrecy. The time has come to open up the process. We trust we will not have to advocate the same thing this time next year.

Assessors' rocky road

The final draft of an audit of Assessing Department practices obtained last week indicates at least a few things that a lot of Newton taxpayers already knew.

The report, paid for by the city, cited clerical errors, lack of management direction and poor communication between the assessors and other City Hall offices.

This revaluation situation has left a bad taste in many homeowners' mouths and they deserve better service for their tax dollars. The assessors must put things in order and the mayor and Board of Aldermen should give them the funds, the staff and the support to make things straight.

Chief Assessor Robert Palmer has been taking the heat for over a year during the revaluation fiasco. With the process set to be done again this year it is time to get things rolling smoothly at long last.

Newton Graphic Opinions

Days gone by

A photograph of "The Working Boys' Home" from the 1907 issue of "The Mirror of Newton: Past and Present" published by the Newton Federation of Women's Clubs shows some of the boys outside the home, which at the time was an orphanage sponsored by the Xaverian Brothers. Over the years the orphanage was phased out and the brothers kept the property as an instructional facility for those entering the priesthood. The building is now part of the 28-acre site of the Jewish Community Campus, a multi-community facility being built by the Combined Jewish Philanthropies of Boston. The group hopes to construct 100 units of elderly housing on the land.

Graphically speaking

By the book, madam; a case of stage fright

The definitive work

Having challenged the move of the West Newton branch library from Chestnut Street to the Davis School for three years, resident Eugene Cronin thinks he knows as much about the issue as anyone.

Said Cronin: "Someday I'm going to write a book about the controversy and put it in the library."

Soon to be a major motion picture.

Backman is honored

Senator Jack Backman (D-Newton, Brookline) was among 17 Massachusetts lawmakers honored recently at a special gathering sponsored by the Massachusetts Citizens Against the Death Penalty.

The event, in the Parker House Press Room, was used to herald the "innovative new directions" the anti-death penalty organization plans in again starting a campaign to repeal the law.

The group, which had been known as the Mass. Campaign Against Restoration of the Death Penalty until the legislature adopted a death penalty statute in December, plans a court challenge to test provisions of the law.

An energetic youngster

Bigelow Junior High eighth grader Tony Antonellis was named the winner in the Boston Edison "Saving energy in a student's world" poster contest.

The competition was set up to encourage students to be more energy-conscious at school, work and play.

Tony took first place in the fifth-eighth grade category for which he'll receive $75 and a winner's certificate. Daniel Sweany is Tony's teacher at Bigelow.

He deserves a break

James A. Miller of Auburndale wears many hats, as they say.

Miller, who only recently completed a term as president of the Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce, has also finished up a 13-year stint as a member of the Newton Housing authority.

A planning and development consultant with offices in Newton, Miller was first named to the authority in 1970 by then-Gov. Frank Sargent. He was reappointed by successive governors since that time but did not seek reappointment when his most recent term expired.

During his recent two-year term as chairman the Beaconwood family housing and Echo Ridge elderly and family housing developments were planned and developed.

Judge 'Jovial' Basbas?

District Court Judge Monte Basbas recently heard from a group of Scottish lawyers who had visited the Newton court house last October.

The 60 lawyers from the Law Society of Scotland and their families had toured the judicial systems in New York and Boston and concluded their tour with an early morning visit to Newton District Court.

In an article published in the Scottish law society's journal, Judge Basbas is described as "a large, jovial man." It states that the group was "greatly impressed by the patience displayed by (Basbas)" during an arraignment proceeding.

The group, which stayed at the Marriott Hotel in Auburndale, was also impressed by Bostonians' "calm, Edinburgh-style courtesy" and the frequency with which they heard "Have a nice day," and "You're welcome.

"The most charming incident of the whole visit," according to the article, was when Basbas had his picture taken with a four-year-old Scottish boy, aptly dressed in a traditional kilt. The photograph was taken by a reporter during a coffee and Danish reception for the group. The photo was forwarded to the the group in Scotland, where, we hear, it is to be printed in a society publication.

Man with the stage fright

Norman Colb, the Newton school's assistant superintendent of program, who last week accepted a job for July as the new superintendent of the Mamaroneck, N.Y., school system, is already learning about the really big decisions which can make or break a superintendent, popularity-wise.

Colb admitted he "played hookey" last week and made the trek to Mamaroneck for an interview with the area's cable television station.

"It scared me to death," Colb joked at the Saturday School Committee meeting.

"The first thing they wanted to know was how many inches of snow it would take before I called off school," he said as the audience erupted into laughter. "I absolutely went mute.

"They called the previous superintendent 'the Canadian' and said 'The Canadian never called off school," Colb said.

"Right down to the basics," Superintendent John Strand remarked on Colb's interview.

We do it by the book here

Thursday night's public hearing on proposed pay raises for the aldermen and mayor was certainly not well attended by either board members or the public.

But when one of the four members of the public in attendance figured she'd get a closer look at the workings of city government, and took one of the vacant aldermanic seats, Finance Committee Chairman Edward Richmond played by the book.

With less than a quorum of aldermen and only a handful of citizens Richmond goodnaturedly admonished the woman and told her she must return to the spectators' area.

"The rules of the board do not permit you to sit there during the meeting," Richmond said firmly. And that, as they say, was that.

A coat of many colors

At one point during last week's hearing on aldermanic pay raises Alderman Robert Tennant took the floor as the only speaker, pro or con, (he was for a raise for the mayor; against one for aldermen). The elder statesman noted that board members are "called many things."

FinCom Chairman Ed Richmond, hoisting the gavel for the public hearing, asked Tennant "did you say we are called many things or we are called to do many things?"

To which Tennant quipped, "both."

Brits broadcast North

Newton North High's legendary asbestos problems put the school in something of a negative international spotlight last week, if only briefly.

WGBH-TV aired a British documentary on the diseases prompted by exposure to asbestos fibers and there, for a few seconds, were the smiling students of Newton North, standing outside the school.

The production focused mainly on the deaths of former asbestos workers in England and this country but the narrator noted the $1 million spent locally to remove the toxic fibers from parts of North High.

During last year's phase of the clean up The Graphic chronicled allegations by workers at the site that safety precautions left something to be desired. City officials, however, pronounced everything in order at that time.

Asbestos revisited

While the problem of asbestos toxicity is on our minds, a recent scare over asbestos contamination in the Middlesex County Courthouse in Cambridge seems to have been only that — a scare.

A press release from the County Commissioners' office said tests revealed "there was no present danger of asbestos contamination in the courthouse atmosphere."

During the heyday of asbestos as a reputed insulator and fire retardant material asbestos was sprayed around steel beams through the structure.

The commissioners' problems with asbestos may not be over, however, since they were notified of a potential problem with the material in the Middlesex County Hospital. The commission plans to seek proposals from experts in the field to determine if there are any health hazards posed by the asbestos presence.

Stay tuned.

Letters

Why can't city help tenants?

To the editor;

I am writing this letter as a protest against activities of real estate owners in relation to senior citizens. Please read this.

As a senior citizen — age over 80 years — I have been compelled during the past four years to move from a rental apartment on three occasions because of conversion to condos.

When 280 Boylston St., Chestnut Hill, went condo an ill Mrs. Freedman and I were compelled to move. We took a rental at 250 Hammond Pond where we were promised "no condos for 10 years."

You are familiar with what happened there. In less than two years, the change took place. Mrs. Freedman now gone, I looked for a place to live. Feeling fortunate because of a long standing friendship with the owners and a promise that "under no circumstances would our Wyco rentals go condo for many years," I rented one of the apartments available at 86 Boylston St., Chestnut Hill.

Now the repetitive situation has appeared. Within two years of residence, I find the new owners going condo.

The new owners are particularly money greedy and are asking $90,000 up for old buildings all in need of multiple repair, out of door parking which is particularly unpleasant for two reasons — our winter weather and complete lack of any security.

There is only one bathroom even in two bedroom units — the bathroom is very small, about six feet by six feet, badly planned with inadequate space.

The doors, walls, ceilings all need work. The negatives values are numerous — no air conditioning — no lobbies — meeting rooms — saunes — exercise room — swimming pools or tennis courts and no security.

For these old units the asking price for condo conversions is dramatically out of line. Now if we do not wish to convert, these ghouls threaten to raise our rents an obscene 35 percent!

Why cannot Newton be as progressive as Cambridge and Brookline in protecting tenants from such greed?

And I ask why cannot Newton contribute in some way in making the few years left to us more pleasant and less traumatic?

Harold J. Freedman, M.D.

Reader cites 'sick society'

To the editor;

Shortly after World War II it was reported that the hideous Nazi fiend Himmler was known to tiptoe through his living room after arriving home late at night so as not to disturb his beloved caged bird.

Recently, Justice Blackman, who handed down the infamous Rose vs. Wade verdict in 1973 (15 million innocent babies have been slaughtered in the womb since that date) was quoted in the secular press as casually making the comparison that the surgical procedure for reproductive killing (abortion) might well be compared to the lancing of a boil.

Nobel Award winner Franci Crick spoke as follows: "No newborn infant should be declared human until it had passed certain tests regarding its genetic endowment and if it failed these tests, it must forfeit the right to live."

Father Paul Marx, S.J. the profound pro-lifer puts the modern American Holocaust so starkly, "Abortion, infanticide, euthanasia and senilicide are four walls of the same coffin."

The sickness of our nation can be measured by its pretense that sin and crime are acceptable, even respectable.

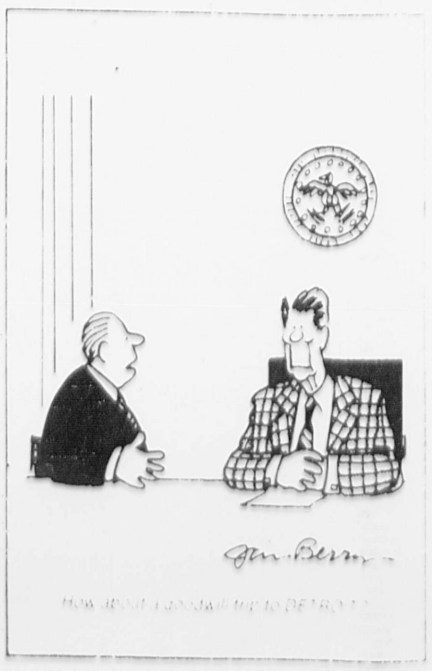

When the history of our society is written, the judgment will be on Christianity for good or ill. May the authors not be sitting in the ashes of another Rome.

Soviet dissident says arms freeze misguided

This week a resolution backing a verifiable nuclear weapons freeze with the Soviet Union goes before Congress, with anti-nuke representatives from Newton and surrounding communities heading to Washington to lobby for the freeze.

Yet Tuvim terms one of the most outspoken freeze backers, Dr. Helen Caldicott of Newton, emotional and even "hysterical" in her opposition to nuclear arms. Tuvim has debated Caldicott on several occasions.

Tuvim, 52, graduated at the top of his class in mechanical engineering but because he is a Jew, he was sent by the committee in charge of job placement to a small town in the middle of Russia. For the first time, he said, he experienced discrimination in a career-shaking way.

When Nikita Khrushchev came to power after the Stalin era, Soviet authorities relaxed their grip on the people and Tuvim took advantage of the change to take a job in Moscow. There, he began to brood over politics, justice and freedom. He began to mix with the dissident authors who were speaking out at the time, he said last week.

Tuvim's marriage was not doing well, he said, so he decided to leave Russia even when it meant leaving his wife and son behind.

He arranged to have a fictitious aunt invite him to Israel. Once in Vienna, he persuaded Jewish officials to let him try to get to America and after six months in Rome, he obtained a visa.

He now lives in Newtonville and works as an engineer in Milford.

He speaks wherever he can, including area high schools, trying to educate Americans about "the Communist system."

He says, "I don't like your 'I don't care' attitude. I don't like you being consumers and not citizens. I don't like your uninvolvement in politics."

At times, Americans are hard to understand, he said. At times they pay little attention to Russian ways. Yet when he circulated a petition backing an Olympic boycott after Afghanistan was invaded, many he approached asked whether the Russian KGB secret police might obtain their names.

On the issue of nuclear war Tuvim says he thinks such a war with the Soviets is unlikely as long as the US keeps its nuclear arsenal up to date and its conventional armies in place.

"The Russians prefer subversion, exploiting internal conflicts, using small advances such as Afghanistan, Cuba and other gradual moves against the United States," he said.

Where the nuclear freeze movement hurts this country, Tuvim said, is that "it sends a signal of appeasement. Russians look on it as a weakness."

Novelist traces Irish-Canadian roots

A Falmouth resident for many years, Murphy has returned to BC to teach creative writing. He will be the toastmaster at the Anniversity Alumni Breakfast on Laetare, Sunday, March 13. His oldest daughter Nina is a junior at BC and works as associate editor of the school newspaper "The Heights."

Author James Murphy Jr.

Much has been written about the Irish-American ordeal following the great immigration wave which followed Ireland's potato famine in the 1840s, but little about the Irish who came to the Canadian provinces in large numbers even earlier in the 19th century.

Author Murphy provides an insight into this historial phase. Many descendants live in the Newton-Waltham area, drawn to this section by opportunities for factory work. Waltham's largest ethnic group is of Canadian-American ancestry.

Murphy's wife is the former Margaret A. Matthews, a member of one of West Newton's most widely known families, while the author's own roots are also in the community. His parents recently celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary. Mrs. Murphy's brothers are attorney William P. Matthews, a former alderman, and John L. Matthews, a leading real estate business owner.

Margaret Matthews Murphy's mother was born on Prince Edward Island.

Jim Murphy's career as an educator is extensive, with experience as a teacher at junior and senior high scholls for 23 years and work as an associate professor of English at the Massachusetts Maritime Academy to his credit.

Library Journal has praised his latest novel, saying that it "Nicely blends adventure and romance with a sympathetic and realistic portrait of Irish suffering in the homeland and the building of community spirit among immigrants in a new country."

And Publishers Weekly noted: "Broad in scope... an interesting depiction of the Irish who found Canada's land like home."

The central theme of the novel involves a granddaughter of patriarch Brendan McMahon named Kate who fulfills the family dream by leaving the island and seeking her fortune in the United States.

(Tom Murphy is senior editor of The News Tribune, a sister publication of The Newton Graphic. He is not of the same Murphy family as the novelist.)

City clerical union agrees to contract

NEWTON — City Hall Associates, representing mainly clerical employees in City Hall, is the first municipal union to approve a contract offer by the city.

Voting by a margin of 5 to 1, union members last week approved a contract offering higher educational benefits and a 5-percent pay hike with an option for 5 percent a year from July, provided the city has the funds, according to union president Murdoch Fraser.

"This represents a vote of confidence for the hours our executive gave to the contract talks," said Fraser.

The administration signed the contract Friday afternoon and officials said they were pleased the members approved the pact and believed it was the best offer given the financial constraints of Proposition 2½. Eight other city unions lack new contracts.

Employees of the School Department signed new contracts with the School Committee earlier this year, leaving only municipal workers without new contracts.

Other workers the union represents are employed in the library, police and fire stations, the housing authority and recreation department leaders, according to Fraser. In all, the union includes 220 members.

The vote was 124 to 25 to accept and the union had a 70 percent turnout, said president Fraser.

In February, the rank and file membership voted by a narrow margin to stay on the job and not to support the then striking public works employees.

Another Great Reason to live in Newton.
The Gables.
Newton has it all. The best in suburban living along with the urban delights of fine nearby shopping and easy access to the cultural, financial and business activities of Boston.
Now Newton has something more: The Gables—an exceptional group of two and three bedroom attached single family homes on a beautiful rolling meadow edged with trees, directly adjoining the Charles River Country Club.
There are five distinctive floor plans featuring the kind of spacious living usually found only in older, now impractical, homes. The larger of these offers up to 3100 square feet . . . even the least expensive two bedroom home has 1900 square feet.
Every home has its own attached two-car garage with direct indoor access. There are beautiful, very private courtyard areas. All have a full basement. The private clubhouse with its soaring cathedral ceiling looks out on a delightful sunning area, swimming pool and two tennis courts.
Prices range from $265,000 to $400,000. Furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5 at the junction of Parker and Dedham Streets in Newton, or phone (617) 969-0200 for an appointment.

Energy saving program begins

NEWTON — With the stock market setting records almost daily, residents may want a local investment tip that promises a 30 percent return on their money.

Heating up local interest was the unveiling last week of a citywide attic insulation program, the first in the state, to cut the cost of installation to the homeowner nearly in half, according to Newton Commission on Energy Chairman Robert Sandman.

"Why conserve now, as long as we have the happy days of OPEC in disarray you may ask," Mary Beth Bentleman of the state's energy office asked.

Conservatin is better than money in the bank, offering a 30 percent return on investment, she told a group of city officials and reporters.

A team effort of Newton citizens and businesses launched the first attic insulation progrm in the Commonwealth. The program is administered by Mass-Save and the Newton Housewarming group. Boston Edison plans to offer 15 percent rebates, up to $120, on the cost of installing attic insulation in Waltham and Newton, said Paul Shea, assistant manager of energy services at Boston Edison.

Participants in the team effort, besides the city and Edison, include Boston Gas, State Rep. David Cohen, Senator Paul Tsongas and numerous church and citizen groups.

The program is open to all Newton homeowners who file an application by March 31, according to Muriel Hurovitz of Newton Housewarming.

Hurovitz said she believes at least 50 percent of the city's homes have six or more inches of attic insulation. Her goal, she said in the City Hall press conference last week, is to bring the other 50 percent up to the same energy saving standards.

"We are morally obligated to all homeowners who meet the March 31 deadline even if we run out of funding," she said. She would not give the total budget available to the group.

Mayor Theodore Mann told the group Newton would not be trapped by the false sense of security by current low oil prices.

State Rep. Cohen noted the finite nature of oil, adding that every step should be taken to "save the precious commodity."

As a former alderman Cohen was credited with setting up many of Newton's energy-conservation programs. A statement by Sen. Tsongas noted Newton's effort and said it will serve as a model of what can be done with limited federal funding.

Those interested in applying can call 552-7057 for details.

Look at Cuban religion in society topic of Eliot talk

NEWTON — An eyewitness to church activities in Cuba says the church as an institution has a definite chance in Castro's country.

John Nickerson of the Andover Newton Theological School will speak at Eliot Church, 474 Centre Street, on Sunday, March 13 at 11 a.m. giving a detailed first-hand account of his recent trip to Cuba.

Nickerson, an Andover Newton senior, took part in a United Church of Christ study of churches and seminaries on the island from Jan. 7-21.

The Catholic and Protestant churches are not a major force in Cuban life, Nickerson said, estimating that some 5 percent of the population is active in church affairs. Surprisingly, he said, this low incidence of religious observance predates the Castro revolution.

Freedom of religion is guaranteed in the Cuban constitution, he said, noting that his study group found no evidence of suppression or persecution on religious grounds.

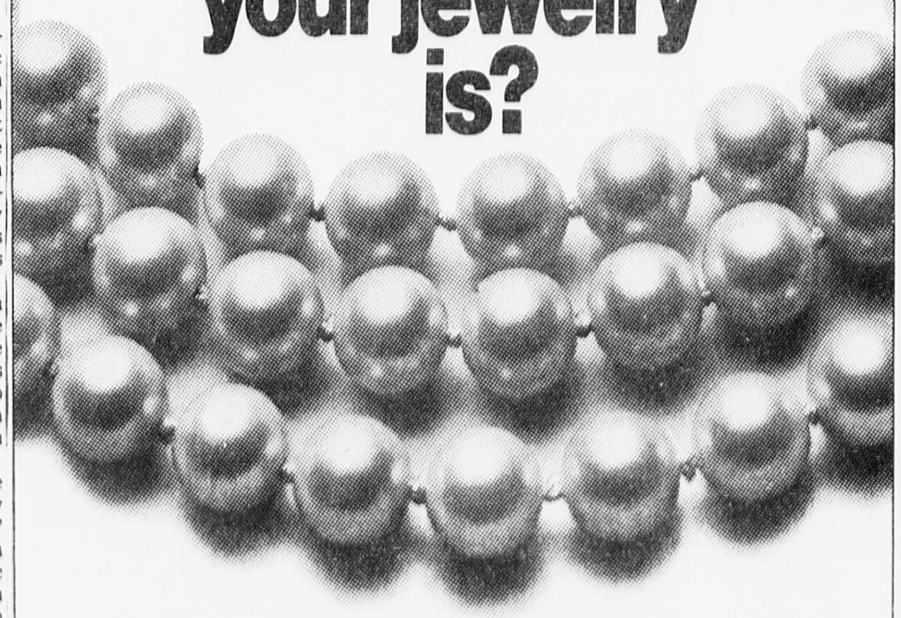

"Before Castro, the church's main ministry was education," Nickerson said. "When the schools went public the churches lost out. In the years since then they've been struggling to find a viable role for themselves."

The concept of "a ministry of the laity" seems to be taking hold in Cuba, the theological student said last week. He cited multiple examples of doctors, nurses and teachers who are practicing Christians and full participants in Cuban state affairs.

"These people are involved in being prophetic to their faith and the revolution," Nickerson said. "I guess I had a stereotyped image that Communist countries were basically atheistic. In Cuba, it simply isn't so. The church is small but it is vibrant. Cubans don't see a dichotomy between church and state."

For more information on Nickerson's upcoming talk call the church at 244-3639.

Mishkan Tefila forum to host Klezmer Conservatory

CHESTNUT HILL — Harriet and Steve Buchbinder, presidents of Congregation Mishkan Tefila Forum, announce that an ensemble from the Klezmer Conservatory Band will highlight a family musical program to be held on March 20 at 7:15 p.m. at the synagogue.

The dance floor will be set up for those who wish to actively participate in this spirited evening.

Klezmer music originated in the shtetls of Eastern Europe and was based on folk melodies and contorial singing. Wandering musicians played this soulful, lively music at weddings and other festive occasions.

At the turn of the century, immigrants brough klezmer music to America where it was influenced by vaudeville and jazz. After its heyday in the 20's and 30's, klezmer's popularity wanted in the 40's due to assimilation.

In recent years, a resurgence in popularity has been caused by second generation Jews literally taking klezmer "out of the closet."

The Klezmer Conservatory Band is at the forefront of this revival and its performances have been widely acclaimed. This exuberant, soulful sound expresses an American age for people of all generations.

Phyllis and Kenneth Blotner are chairman of the concert committee which includes Judi and Alan Altman, Zena and Ilya Ballin, Sandy and Ed Cohen, Sara Feldman, Laurie and David Feinberg, Betty Goldberg, Judy and Richard Kagan and Maxine and Mitchell Selig.

Mall owners sue city over increase in assessment

By Gary Dorion
Middlesex County News Service

CAMBRIDGE — The trustees of Chestnut Hill Trust, who hold title to much of the Chestnut Hill Mall property, filed suit against the Newton Assessors claiming they were discriminated against when the city raised the valuation of its property by $4 million for fiscal 1982.

Filed in Middlesex Superior Court by trustees Julian Cohen and Daniel E. Rothenberg, the suit claims assessors illegally imposed an additional $145,160 tax on the trust under what trustees allege is an unconstitutional legislative act. Signed in Nov. 1982 by former Gov. Edward King, the passage of the bill in question allowed communities to impose taxes retroactively for prpoerty previously omitted from the tax list.

Assistant Newton City Solicitor Ouida Young said last week the thrust of the suit filed by the trust is an "attack on the legislation itself." She noted the city has taken the position that the increased assessment of $4 million to the trust for fiscal 1982 was "legitimate" and "correct."

The increase of $145,160 in taxes was made retroactively due to an error discovered during an abatement process involving an adjoining property ownmer, Federated Department Stores, Inc. The latter owns three parcels at the Chestnut Hill Mall. Young indicated that, initially, Federated Department Stores was erroneously assessed the additional $4 million instead of upping the valuation of the property held by Chestnut Hill Trust.

Young said the city filed special legislation for an "omitted" assessment in the trrust's case because assessors did not meet the Department of Revenue's June 20 deadline for petitioning. Newton revalued its real estate over an 18-month period and the city was not certified by the Department of Revenue until May 1982, according to Young.

The suit noted that, prior to issuing the trust an additional tax for fiscal 1982 based on the new assessment, the assessors abated the assessed value of the property held by Federated Department Stores, Inc. That abatement was in the amount of $4 million, the amount the trust was reassessed for.

The error derived from the apparent confusion over who actually held some of the mall property, which is entirely owned by either Chestnut Hill Trust or Federated Department Stores.

According to court records, the trust has thus far refused to pay the increased taxes of $145,160 and is asking the court to declare the new tax illegal and unauthorized as well as unconstitutional because it is discriminitory and it violates due process, having been impose retroactively.

City is expected to file its official answer to the complaint within one or two weeks.

Manet Rd. station up for sale

Housing rehab deadline near

NEWTON — The Massachusetts Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD) and the City of Newton's Department of Planning and Development announced that currently available funding for the Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation Housing Program will be coming to an end in the City of Newton shortly. Interested owners are urged to apply for the units as soon as possible.

Under the Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation Program, which is funded by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, owners can rehabilitate any number of rental housing units which are not substandard or have major building systems or components repaired or replaced.

The cost of this work, which must total at least $1,000 per housing unit, may be financed by a local lending institution, by the owner, by a source available to the owner, or by one of the City of Newton's housing programs that are available to eligible owners and properties.

The two major local programs, that may be utilized in conjunction with the Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation Program, include the Newton Housing Rehabilitation Fund and the Housing Development Support Pool. The E.O.C.D., which administers the Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation Program in Newton, does not make rehabilitation loans or grants, but will assist owners to obtain the necessary financing.

After required rehabilitation work has been completed, the E.O.C.D. and the owner execute a contract which establishes a rent for the unit(s) that will cover rehabilitation costs, meet monthly operating expenses, and allow a reasonable profit on the owner's investment.

For a period of 15 years, the owner will rent the rehabilitated unit(s) to eligible low income tenants, who will pay approximately 30 percent of their monthly income toward the rent. The E.O.C.D. will pay the remainder of the rent directly to the owner. The initial occupant of a rehabilitated unit may be the owner's present eligible tenant.

After rehabilitation, the monthly rent (including utilities) cannot exceed the following maximum rents: Efficiency Apartment - $382, 1 bedroom - $435, 2 bedrooms - $520, 3 bedrooms - $605, 4 bedrooms - $685, 5 bedrooms - $788. In addition, an increase in these rent levels of approximately 7 percent has been proposed and may be put into effect shortly.

Newton property owners desiring additional information regarding the program should contact John Manzia, Massachusetts Executive Office of Communities and Development, Bureau of Rental Assistance, Saltonstall Building, 14th Floor, 100 Cambridge St., Boston, 02202, 727-5884.

Cellist Leslie Parnas performs with the NSO

OAK HILL — "He is one of the most outstanding cellists of our time," wrote Pablo Casals of cellist Leslie Parnas, who is the Celebrated Artist of the Newton Symphony Orchestra's 1982-83 season.

Parnas appears with the NSO March 12, under the direction of Conductor Ronald Knudsen, at Brown Junior High, Newton, 8 p.m. He will perform the Dvorak Cello Concerto, on a program which includes the Tchaikovsky "Pathetique" Symphony.

Leslie Parnas was nurtured by two of the most famous cellist of our century, Pablo Casals and Gregor Piatigorsky. Piatigorsky was his teacher at Curtis Institute of Music, and Casals was his mentor during Parnas' frequent appearances at the Casals Festival in Prades and Puerto Rico.

Although Parnas was well-known to the musical world, and already had won numerous awards including the coveted Prix Pabo Casals in Paris at the 1957 International Cello Competiton, it was in 1962 that he achieved international fame and recognition as a major prize winner in the celebrated Tchaikovsky Competition.

After this triumph in Moscow, he became much in demand as a soloist throughout the United States and Europe, remaining extremely popular in Russia where he has toured six times since Parnas said of his cello diplomacy in Russia, "When I play music, it is not only an example of emotional freedom, it is also a message for peace."

The Newton Symphony Orchestra is honored to present Parnas as its Celebrated Artist this year. As a participant in this annual NSO program, now in its fifth year, Parnas joins such internationally known artists as Malcolm Frager, Gary Graffman, Joseph Silverstein, Julius Baker and Constance Keene, all of whom have not only appeared as soloists with the orchestra, but have alos conduced an NSO-sponsored Master Class for students in Eastern Massachusetts.

Parnas' Chamber Music Master Class will be at the All Newton Music School, 321 Chestnut St., Newton, Saturday, March 12 from 9 a.m. to noon.

Tickets to the NSO concert on March 12, are $8 and are available by reservations or at the door. Call 965-2555 for information.

Chiropractic for Health
by Dr. David G. Rutman, Chiropractor
THE GOOD HANDS PEOPLE
Chiropractors use their hands to deliver exquisitely precise force in a predetermined direction to a specific body area of the patient. Adjustment techniques are usually modified to take into account the patient's age, height, weight and sex. Manipulation is a melding of art and science during which chiropractors bring into play their knowledge, experience and "feel" for the particular body at hand. It takes very little force to move a bone. By using proper leverage techniques, and correct positioning, chiropractors can make an adjustment using only their fingers. For this reason, a chiropractor does not need to be large and forceful but knowledgable and sensitive.
Chiropractic is a drugless, knifeless and natural approach to meeting the needs of the body. Misalignments of the spinal system and interruption upon the nerve network results in "mal-function" at most any point in the body. Experienced application to the source of the problem serves to correct such interference and misalignment and restore a state of total well-being. DR. DAVID G. RUTMAN, CHIROPRACTOR, 4593 Washington St., Roslindale, is available to serve your chiropractic needs. Tel. 323-5022. VISA & MasterCard accepted. Hours by appt. including 3 eves. a week.
CHIRO TIP:
A chiropractic adjustment does not need to be followed by a slight cracking sound to be effective.

Branch bank closings eyed

NEWTON - Pioneer Financial, a cooperative bank, applied in January to the Commissioner of Banks for permission to close three branches within the Newton and Natick areas.

The branches selected for closing were shown to have overlapping market areas with other branches or were insufficient market shares, according to bank officials.

If approved by the commissioner the branches to be closed would include West Newton, 1308 Washington Street; Newton Lower Falls, 2276 Washington Street; and in Natick, at 220 North Main Street.

Pioneer Financial officials suggested that customers who hold accounts at the offices which may close could bank in Newtonville, Waban and Waltham' if they hold accounts at the West Newton Branch. Customers with Lower Falls branch accounts could bank at the Newtonville or Waban branches.

Library hosts Sally Matia works

NEWTON CORNER — Drawings by Sally W. Matia are featured in the Newton Free Library Gallery, 414 Centre Street, Newton Corner through March 31.

What is fascinating about the paper sculptures is not only the shapes, but the process. Matia says, "People think the paint is applied after the pieces are made. In fact, the color is part of the paper process. The colored pulps merge together while drying in the plaster mold. After it dries, I pull the paper shapes from the molds."

In "The Mitten Collage", Matia made casts of real mittens. Using soft variations of desert colors, pinks, beiges, blues, yellows, and lavendars, Matia approaches the layout and design of a work such as "The Mitten Collage" as an abstract painting. She feels the final design transcends the pattern of the mittens.

In her work Matia often used objects that people discard or don't consider objects of beauty. She tries to make them, as in the mittens, or in her use of sticks and boxes, something else.

In the series "Large Box with Sticks" Matia draws on large sheets of hand-made colored paper. There's a massiveness in the work and a certain exciting speed in the line. It's an everyday container, a box, but something is happening....there's a surprise...shapes are tipping over or springing out.

She received a B.F.A. from the University of Cincinnati and has taught at the Shady Hill School, Danforth Museum School and Fayerweather Street School.

Matia's work has been in many exhibitions including shows at The Thomas Segal Gallery in Boston, The DeCordova Museum, The Danforth Museum and The Botolph Gallery.

Main Library hours are Monday-Thursday 9-9; Friday 9-6; Saturday 9-5; and Sunday 1-4. Call 552-7145 for further information.

Reading surge ousts Tiger six

By Steve Tiberi
Staff Writer

ANDOVER — Don't dwell on the final game of the Newton North hockey team. The Tigers ran into an explosive, high-powered Reading squad and were on the short end of a 6-1 score Friday night at the S. Peter Volpe Skating Rink on the campus of Merrimack College.

The loss bumped Newton North from the MIAA Division I Hockey Tournament. Reading will go on to face Matignon, Monday night at the Boston Garden.

That'll be it for the negative aspects of the season. The 1982-83 Tigers went from winning four games to earning a 12-5-3 record overall and an 8-2-2 mark to capture the Suburban League crown. It was also Newton's first trip to the tourney since 1978.

The Tigers opened tourney competition by checking Everett into the ice for a 5-1 victory on Wednesday night. They came back with just one full day's rest, while Reading drew a bye in the preliminary round.

"We aren't making exuses," said Newton North coach Don Crowley, "but they were a rested team. The Everett game took a lot out of the team. Reading came out ready to play and they just wore us down with greater depth."

The key to Newton North's victory over Everett was its ability to bottle up the Crimson Tide in their own end. The Tigers would never allow Everett to establish any consistent offense. When Everett managed a shot, Tiger goalie Steve MacKay was right on the spot.

Against Reading, however, the Tigers were being held up in their own end for great stretches of time. The Red Rockets wouldn't allow Newton North to get into it's checking game and eventually got scoring opportunities. Reading poured 35 shots on the Newton goal and MacKay did a tremendous job of keeping the Tigers in the game for the first two periods.

"They never gave us a chance," said Crowley. "They're a very, very strong skating team. I was happy with the way the team hung in there, but their overall balance took its toll.

"I'm not upset," said Crowley "Sure, I'm disappointed we lost 6-1, but this team had a great year. They won just four games last year and they've turned it right around. This team should be proud of themselves and their achievements."

Reading dominated Newton North throughout the first period. The Red Rockets weren't able to poke one home for most of the frame. MacKay made several brilliant stops as Reading outshot Newton North, 11-2, in the opening period.

The junior netminder frustrated Reading shooters with his quickness and tremendous concentration. Twice, MacKay stopped Reading drives, despite being screened. North's best chance of the opening frame came with less than three minutes to go. Tom Ryan broke free over the blue line and drilled a shot on Reading's Bill Thomson, who flashed his stick hand pad to make the save.

The Rockets charged back and scored with just 28 seconds to go in the period. Jud Graham drilled a shot from the point and MacKay stopped the high shot with his glove. Reading's Brian Smith was camped outside the crease and he tapped the puck in.

North's best offensive spurt of the game came in the opening five minutes of the period. The Tigers were on the power play and they outshot Reading, 5-1. Defenseman Paul Boudreau had an open shot, but he hit the post.

Chris Pachus had the puck in front and got two whacks at scoring. He couldn't lift the puck over the fallen Thomson, who managed to tie it up. Reading began to resume control of the game with a hustling second goal.

Jud Graham soared behind the Newton North net to pick up a loose puck, while Steve Smith alerty skated in front. Graham passed to Smith, who quickly backhanded the puck under the pads of MacKay to give Reading a 2-0 lead.

Reading scored later in the period, but the goal was disallowed. The Referee ruled Jon Vedder was in the crease when he tipped in the rebound of a shot. It seemed North gathered momentum and Reading took a penalty to end the second period. The Tigers would start the third period on the power play.

The Tigers were trying to set up a play at the blue line. The puck skipped pass the point men and Reading's Graham zoomed in alone on a breakaway. He scored to put the Rockets on top, 3-0. The goal was the first of four Reading would put on the board in the final period.

Greg Muse, Geof Adams and Vedder would also score for Reading. North's score came on a well executed passing play.

Tim Marchand started it with a crisp pass to Ryan, who was flying down the right side. Ryan spotted

Chris Pachus

Pachus on his left and drilled a pass over. Pachus wasted little time redirecting the pass to the short side for a bang-bang score with one minute to play in the game.

The summary:

Score by periods:

Newton North guard Mark Coppola

2 Tigers Suburban hoop 'Stars

Newton North senior guard Mark Coppola heads the list of five area players selected to the 18-player Suburban League All-Star Basketball team recently by the coaches.

Coppola was the lone local player to make the five-man first team. Brookline's Fred Hill (the league MVP) and Joe Lemar were on the first team with Brockton's Henry McCourt and Frank Kotopolous.

Waltham High senior guard Darren Marcou was selected to the second team. It is the second straight year for the talented Hawk. Tiger backcourter John Humphrey was also chosen to second team.

The Hawks also placed junior center Dave MacDonald and junior forward Doug Hoffer on the eight-man third team.

The All-Stars:

MARK COPPOLA — One of the top scorers in the Suburban League, Coppola evovled into an established off-guard. His deadly bombs from the corners were murder on the zone defenses of the league. Opposing teams were forced to pay special attention to Coppola's ability to get free away from the ball and stick the jumper. Coppola was in double figures in ever Newton North game this season averaging 16 points per contest. His top scoring performance was a 28-point performance against Newton South. As a junior, he had shown flashes of brilliance, but he came into his own his senior year. "John became a better ballplayer this season because his confidence increased," said Newton North coach Jerry Phillips. "He was a good player last season, but he matured into a consistent force this season. We could always count on Mark and he came through for us at many different times during the course of the season. He went to work during the offseason and he improved his game measurably. He and John Humprhey are great examples of how much even good players can improve if they work at it." Mark is still undecided on which college he will attend.

DARREN MARCOU — "Just a great athlete," is how Waltham High coach Len Sorin describes Marcou. A member of last year's state finalist team, Marcou was asked to do more this season. He not only had to put the ball in the hoop. He was also had to run the offense. "Darren had to carry a much greater load this season," said Sorin. "He did a fine job leading the team. He was our only experienced player this season and he started out a little banged up from the football season. As the season wore on, his ankle healed up and his play improved. He could handle the ball against all kinds of pressure and also put a lot of pressure on the opposing guards." Darren averaged 12 points per game this season, but he also dished off quite a bit. He was adept at spreading out the opposing defense and picking them apart with passes. His top scoring effort was a 20-point game against Cambridge Rindge and Latin. Darren is also a topflight Suburban League shortstop and one of the few true three-sport athletes remaining. He is still undecided about which college he will attend.

JOHN HUMPHREY — The floor general of the Newton North offense. John Humphrey piloted the offense with his penetrating style and solid outside jumper. John was given the ball this year and he was also a co-captain. He led by example popping in 12 points per game and dedicating his performance to a winning effort. "John was a dedicated player," said Phillips. "He wanted to win so much that he would sacrfice his own statistics for the team. He's got a great outside shot and can put the ball in the hole, but he controlled his shooting to set up our offense. He had a free hand at penetrating to the hoop. If he got inside and the shot was there, we had enough confidence in John's ability to let him decide. He came to every practice and every game with the same level of intensity. He and Mark made up one of the best backcourts in the league. He was a captain that led by example on the floor." John's top scoring performance was a 24-point game against North Quincy.

DAVE MACDONALD — Fresh from the junior varsity, Dave MacDonald's effect on the Waltham basketball was felt right in the first game of the season. MacDonald made his presence felt with an 18-point performance against Somerville. The 6-5, going on 6-6, center possesses a unique ability to hit the oustide jumper. He has a soft touch from the perimeter and he just has to work a little harder to become a dominant force in the league. "Dave has a nice attitude and is at the head of his class academically," said Sorin. "Those are factors in Dave's favor. Depending on how hard he works in the offseason, Dave could be a top performer next season. Receiving this type of notoreity as a junior is a tribute to Dave's play. As a junior, he lacked consistency, but he should come back a more mature player his senior season. He knows what it takes to get through a Suburban League season and that experience can only make him a better player next season."

DOUG HOFFER — In the final seven games of the season, Doug Hoffer established himself as a star of the future in the league. He hit double figures in six of the seven games and began to assert himself on the floor. Hoffer is a talented player. He has a soft touch from the corner, but at 6-3, 220 he can also take it inside for power drives. In the final game of the season against North Quincy, Hoffer bulled in for two key drives to turn the game around. Each time he hit the shot and was fouled for three-point plays. Hoffer's top effort was a 25-point effort against North Quincy earlier in the season. "Doug got off to a slow start," said Sorin. "He was a late bloomer, but once he realized how good he could be in the league, he started to play with some confidence. A junior, Hoffer and MacDonald figure to be a tough, one-two combination next season. "I hate to look ahead," Sorin revealed, "But I can't help getting excited when I think of the possibilities. Doug developed into a consistent player and we began counting on him in the final half of the year." Hoffer also plays soccer and will compete in spring track.

BC's Tracy Brooks gets soccer award

Tracy Brooks, a member of the Boston College women's soccer team, has been selected to the 1982 NCAA/McDonald's All-America Soccer Team.

Brooks was awarded a certificate and special patch by Barbara Sydney, community relations representative for McDonald's of Newton at a Boston College soccer banquet held last month at the Steak Place in Newton. Although Brooks' selection was announced on Jan. 14 at the NSCAA annual convention in Orlando, Fla., the news came as a surprise to both her and her family at the banquet.

"All of us at McDonald's in Newton are delighted that one of our local players is bringing home this national honor," said Sydney. "Her outstanding contributions to Boston College have made this community very proud."

Mike LaVigne, Boston College coach responsible for Tracy's nomination, emthusiastically agreed. "Tracy Brooks is, without a doubt, one of the finest soccer players in New England. I am comfident she will continue to make great contributions to the sport."

For more than 40 years, the 3,000 member National Soccer Coaches Association of America has named an All-America Team. This marks the second year that McDonald's has co-sponsored the program.

Mackey, Coppola spark Boys' Club

NEWTON — Brian Mackey scored 21 points and Ronnie Coppola added 15 to lead the Boys Club to a 55-33 victory over Upper Falls in Newton Pony League basketball action at Warren Junior High Friday night.

Paul Linnehan paced Upper Falls with 10 points.

In other Pony League action, the Myrtle Tigers dropped Hawthorn, 42-37. Andy Lockwood led the winners with 16, while Shaun Lotts added 11. Mike Ryan and Eddie O'Brien scored 10 apiece for Hawthorn.

South quintet gains semi-finals

NEWTON — The popular notion is tournament games get tougher as you advance. For anyone that witnessed the Newton South-Hyde Park basketball war, that's a little hard to imagine.

The Lions and the Blue Stars went at in a classic up-and-down grudge match for four quarters Saturday afternoon in the quarterfinal round of the MIAA Divsion II South Sectional Tournament at the Newton South Gym.

When the final buzzer sounded, the Lions had won going away. Newton South took an eight-point deficit to start the fourth quarter and turned it into a 65-55 triumph to move into the semi-final round.

Newton South will face Dennis-Yarmouth Wednesday night, 7 p.m., at Braintree.

It's hard to conceive Newton South facing a quicker or more aggressive opponent. Hyde Park managed to disrupt South's offensive game and was able to successfully run on the Lions for three quarters and build up an eight-point bulge, 44-36, going into the final frame. Newton South scored just eight points in the third quarter.

"It was a game of streaks," said Newton South coach Joe Killilea, "and we had our streak in the fourth quarter. Hyde Park is as good a team as we'll play in the tourney and this win will help our confidence. The big thing for us in this game was our big men began to get into the game."

Down by eight, the Lions needed to get back into the game fast and that's just what they did. Senior forward Charlie Sullivan canned a jumper from the corner and followed that by stealing an inbounds pass and canning another jumper from almost the exact same spot on the floor.

Within 25 seconds, the Lions were within four points. Hyde Park spread out the offense and went into a stall. The strategy backfired when Meatchie Russell stole the ball and went in for the layup to bring South to within two points.

Hyde Park continued the stall tactic and worked the clock down to 5:59 before guard Ken Whitehead drove to the hoop. His shot missed and Russell was there to pick up the rebound. More importantly, Hyde Park's center and primary rebounding threat Craig Smalls climbed up Meatchie's back and was called for his fifth foul.

The Lions tied it on the other end when Gene Lindsey hit a turnaround jumper from the baseline. Hyde Park grabbed the lead back on two free throws by Charlie Porter. The Blue Stars spent quite a bit of time at the line in the second half scoring 16 of 26 points from the charity stripe.

Newton South's newly discovered guard sensation Sean Sims came through with a big steal and a fast break hoop to tie the game for the Lions, but Hyde Park's Roger Burke sank a basket to put Hyde Park ahead, 48-46, with five minutes to play.

Scott Anglin and Meacthie Russell then showed why they are the team leaders and two of the best players in the area. They simply took control of the final five minutes of the game. Anglin scored 10 of his game-high 23 points in that span, while Meatchie was at his best coordinating the offense.

Anglin tied the score at 48-48 with a short jumper. Meatchie then stole the ball and went all the way to put South ahead for the duration. Hyde Park's Whitehead got one point back by hitting one of two from the free throw line.

Russell put the Lions up by three points with a jumper, but Hyde Park drew to within one point on layup by Gus Gabriel. Anglin put the Lions back on top by three with another inside bucket.

"People think that the ball just goes into Scott and he puts it in," said Killilea. "He really has to work to get the ball in low and he was being double covered most of the game by Hyde Park. He just did a super job in the fourth quarter of getting the ball where he wanted it."

Hyde Park came right back with two free throws from Porter to stay within one point, 54-53, with 3:12 to go.

Russell and Anglin combined for a beautiful passing play to get Anglin two free throws. Russell drove the lane and hit Anglin with a behind-the-back pass. Anglin was clobbered by three guys when he went up for the hoop. Scott sank both free throws and Newton South had its three-point bulge, 58-53, with 2:13 to play. Hyde Park would score just two points the rest of the way.

Anglin, who had an off day scoring wise against Stoughton, was back in full stride. He hit 23 points, collected 12 rebounds and blocked seven shots. Meatchie had 17 points (some big jumpers throughout the game) and seven assists. Evan Kushner and Lindsey also played a fine game underneath for Newton South.

The summary:

NEWTON SOUTH(65)-Scott Anglin 8-7-23; Russell 8-1-17; Oglesby 1-0-2; Sims 1-2-4; Kushner 2-2-6; Lindsey 2-1-5; Hairston 2-0-4; Sullivan 2-0-4. Tot. 26-13-65.

HYDE PARK(55)-Gabriel 5-2-12; Burke 3-6-12; Porter 3-8-14; Smalls 4-2-10; Whitehead 1-1-3; Brown 2-0-4. Tot. 18-19-55.

Strand pushes challenge

Says bright kids need new program

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

Helen Randolph speaks

Leonard Gentile studies

Norman Colb considers

NEWTON — Many parents' concern that Newton could do more to challenge bright elementary school children led Superintendent John Strand Saturday to recommend a new pull-out program for exceptional children.

Although he feels Newton's elementary teachers are as a whole the best he has ever worked with, Strand said, "I sincerely believe that a significant number of kids in those schools could achieve more than they are now."

His $40.5 million school budget proposal targets new spending to improve teaching of bright children through a "pilot" expansion of the current Newton Advanced Challenge (NAC) program in four of Newton's 17 elementary schools with the aim of going citywide.

During Saturday's budget meeting at the Education Center, Strand presented his first detailed recommendation for expanding NAC. His plan included taking bright children from their regular classes for two hours a week of separate instruction with a member of the NAC staff.

While all School Committee members at the meeting were eager to do more for Newton's "gifted and talented" students, the majority rejected outright the idea of a "pull-out program."

Committee member Susan Silbey warned that such a program would create the impression that "Newton is a system for bright kids" and for special needs kids, but not for kids "in the middle."

"Now there is no child that will not benefit from some special attention," Silbey stressed.

Ann Berwick said schools already have "an enormous effect on children's self-image." "I don't want to be in the business of telling kids they're ordinary," she said, referring to the way other children could react to being left out of the special instruction.

Only committee members Marcia Mitchell and Leonard Gentile were in favor of Strand's proposal for a pull-out program.

In his budget proposal, Strand wants to expand the NAC staff to five positions at a cost of $126,600. The NAC program currently has 2.5 federally funded staff positions, but that money will dry up next year.

Another $14,000 is proposed for instructional materials, workshops for teachers and summer-curriculum development for NAC.

Strand recommended beginning the expanded program in four elementary schools next year. Some of the NAC staff would devote time to improving regular classroom teaching to raise expectations for all children and two positions would be used to initiate a formal pull-out program.

Although Gentile said he was aware of problems with identifying children, he nevertheless supported Strand's idea for separate instruction.

"Our present NAC program isn't doing the job," Gentile said.

The current NAC program develops units of instruction which are geared to academically challenge children of all ability levels within the same classroom setting. The NAC staff also holds workshops with teachers on how to use the units.

"Make no mistake about it, the message that will get out is that the same old program is around," Gentile warned opponents of the pull-out program.

"One thing that has always amazed me since I've been on this committee," Gentile stressed, "is that we're supposedly a liberal School Committee...yet sometimes I see us as so archaic."

"I wish that we could be a little more progressive on some of these kinds of things," he urged.

Committee member Marcia Mitchell felt the rejection of a pull-out program would be misread by parents as a weak commitment to improve programs for gifted students.

Responding to the negative reaction of most committee members, Strand said he would come back with a revised plan for expanding NAC which would not involve a pull-out program.

But, he emphasized, "I think you have to understand that depending on the particular community and school...there are principals and teachers under tremendous pressure to have pull-outs of one kind or another."

Superintendent Strand makes a point during meeting.

Kurzweil reading machine donated to Carroll Center

NEWTON — A Kurzweil reading machine was recently donated to Carroll Center for the Blind.

The Kurzweil reading machine, contains a computer-like keyboard for controlling the machine's functions, a speaker for the machine's voice to be heard and the electronics and camera section to receive the printed material to be read.

Any printed material can be read aloud by the machine simply by laying the material face down over the section containing the camera after preparing the machine's keyboard. Glass shattered, officer's eye injured

NEWTON — A patrolman is recovering this week from cuts he suffered when a Newton man he helped arrest kicked out a police car window, sending glass shards into his right eye, police said.

Ptl. Thomas J. McCarthy also suffered a cut forehead when he was hit by flying pieces of the shattered window.

William F. Vachon, 26, of 39 School St. faced arraignment in District Court on charges of assault and battery on a police officer, malicious destruction of property and disorderly conduct as a result of the incident, police said.

According to police, McCarthy was on patrol when he saw Vachon, who is 6 feet 1 and weighs 220 pounds, pushing a woman and yelling at her.

McCarthy broke up the disturbance but Vachon then entered a nearby establishment and had to be removed, police said.

Four other police arrived and helped handcuff Vachon. But after he was put in a police cruiser, he kicked out the right rear window, sending glass flying into McCarthy's face, according to police.

McCarthy was treated at Newton-Wellesley Hospital but was unable to return to duty, police reported.

'Phantom printer' feted by City Hall

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Charlie Lennon, "the phantom printer of City Hall," was toasted and roasted at a retirement party where more than 100 city officials and employees showed their appreciation for his 30 years of ser ice to the Garden City.

The crowd filled the ballroom of American Legion Post 440 for the gala occasion that some veterans of the retirement party circuit called the most upbeat in recent memory.

Much of the credit for the size of the crowd and the festive spirit of the occasion was given to Lennon's wife, Grace, who is the assistant city clerk.

Lennon began working in the city's Engineering Department in 1953, printing drawings and other paperwork on an ancient mimeograph machine. Several million copies later, he had some better equipment and a job description that included doing most of the day-to-day printing for everyone in City Hall.

He was called "the phantom printer," because, as many speakers testified at the dinner, no one ever saw him except in the cafeteria and no one ever knew where his office was.

"He was moved from one department to another, and he never got out of the basement," Newton Police Lt. Charles Feeley commented. "During these years, Charlie didn't know who he worked for and he could care less."

Feeley, a veteran master of ceremonies with more than 100 retirement parties to his credit, kept the ceremonies lively and libelous with his spicey patter. He commented that many retirement parties are sad, but that Lennon's had "the best spirit" of any he had attended.

More than one partygoer wondered, for a moment, who might possibly do the honors at Feeley's own retirement party, which should be coming up in a couple of years.

Feeley praised Lennon for his grace under pressure, saying, "He never lost his cool and he never missed a deadline." He presented Lennon with a jar full of marbles, which, he said, were "all the marbles he had when he came in."

His sentiments and obvious affection were echoed by the speakers that followed him.

Citations were read from Rep. Joseph DeNucci and Middlesex County Sheriff Edward Henneberry.

President of the Board of Aldermen Matthew Jefferson cited Lennon for solving so many problems in City Hall. He praised him for holding the trust and confidence of five chief executives during his three-dacade tenure.

Jefferson, guessing that Lennon might be wondering what he would do with his time during retirement, said, "Relax, there will be plenty of lawns to mow."

Mayor Theodore D. Mann praised Lennon for his uncanny ability to slip between the cracks at City Hall for so long. "We can trace the growth of the city by the growth of your department," Mann said. "And Touche-Ross (the auditors presently scrutinizing two city departments) never even heard of you."

Murdock Fraser, representing the City Hall employees, gave Lennon a color tv so he will not be lonely when the aldermen keep his wife working through the night.

Fraser said Lennon originally gave him the idea to run for president of the City Hall Associates. He added that Lennon's counsel was crucial, especially during recent labor-management disputes. "You can blame Charlie Lennon for what's happened over the last couple of months," Fraser said with a big grin.

After the presentation ceremonies were over, a magician appeared to entertain the crowd and deliver a special message to Lennon on the eve of his retirement: "The older the fiddle, the sweeter the tune. May you make music for many a moon."

Tennant stands alone during pay raise hearing

NEWTON — If it is true that silence means assent, then the proposed pay raises for the mayor and aldermen won overwhelming approval from the city's taxpayers last week.

Alderman Robert L. Tennant was the only one to speak, pro or con, on the proposal at a public hearing held in the aldermanic chambers Thursday night.

Aldermen outnumbered citizens by about four to one at the 15-minute hearing. Several aldermen who showed up late missed the proceedings altogether.

The proposed hikes would bring the mayor's salary up to $58,000 from $37,500 and increase the aldermen's pay to $3,000 a year from $1,800.

Tennant said that, as an "elder" on the board, he could remember past years when the aldermanic chambers were filled with "good, intelligent, highly qualified men were willing to work for nothing." He said he felt aldermen should serve out of a sense of civic duty.

Aldermen received no compensation for their efforts until 1976, when they approved a $1,200-per-year salary. That wage was raised to $1,800 two years later, in 1978.

The mayor's salary should be raised, according to Tennant. "We should triple the mayor's salary for the time he puts into his job," he said.

Edward Richmond, chairman of the Finance Committee that held the hearing, said the lack of citizen input indicated the pay raise was a "non-issue."

He said the lack of citizens at the hearing, instead of indicating apathy, proved residents in general had confidence the city was being run right.

Faulty wiring caused blaze

CHESTNUT HILL — Fires officials determined that faulty electrical wiring was the cause of a two-alarm blaze that swept through the third floor of a 25-room Hammond Street home one morning last week.

The occupants, Peter Gill, his 92-year-old father, Gill's wife Jane Copass and two house guests who were all sleeping when the fire started were not injured.

The blaze was reported about 5:17 a.m. at 263 Hammond Street. Eight Newton fire companies with Fire Chief Edward Reilly and a Brookline fire comany responded to the scene.

Smoke and flames poured through the third floor windows when the firefighters arrived. The second alarm was struck immediately, officials said.

The fire started on the third floor, extended upward and burst through the roof. It caused extensive damage to the front portion of the third floor in the three-story, brick structure.

Gill, 62, said they had been sleeping on the second floor when the fire started. He said he awoke to the smell of smoke, searched the house and saw smoke in the basement. They fled from the house before discovering that the fire was on the third floor, he said.

"When we went outside the fire department was already there," Copass said, "They were very responsive. They worked hard and fast."

Firefighter Brian McCabe was reported injured and treated by the Newton city physician for an arm injury.

Key school aide leaving for N.Y.

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — One of Superintendent John Strand's key administrators, Norman Colb, will be leaving Newton for a job as superintendent of a New York school system.

Colb, 39, was selected in a 5-1 vote Tuesday night by the school board for the Mamaroneck Union Free School District, a district of 4,400 students which encompasses Mamaroneck and Larchmont, N.Y.

Currently Assistant Superintendent of Program at a salary of approximately $44,000, Colb will earn $58,000 plus a $2,000 conveyance when he takes over in Mamaroneck on July 1.

Colb was ecstatic Wednesday over his appointment, but said he would leave Newton with some sadness.

"It's a wonderful opportunity and I feel priveledged to have the opportunity to be a superintendent, but at the same time I leave Newton with a sense of real regret," said Colb.

"I feel an enormous debt of gratitude that I've been able to work under (Superintendent) John Strand and Aaron Fink, two superb superintendents, and to have worked with professional educators of such high caliber," Colb, a Newtonville resident, said.

Aaron Fink was superintendent prior to Strand.

Colb came to Newton five years ago as the assistant superintendent of program working eight years as director of English and language arts for the Brookline schools.

Colb said his new school district is "right next to Scarsdale and Pelham."

Oddly enough, former superintendent Fink came to Newton from the Scarsdale schools and Strand left his post as superintendent of the Pelham schools to come to Newton.

Superintendent Strand said Wednesday he wished Colb "all the best" on his new job, but said he had been "counting on Norman in the new administration."

Strand has proposed a reorganization for the central school administration and said Wednesday he had planned to have Colb assume the role of assistant superintendent for curriculum and instruction.

"It's a loss for us. That's one of the things that happens when you have strong people," Strand said.

Strand said he did not know what impact Colb's leaving would have on the reassignment of central administrators under his reorganization proposal. Strand's proposal eliminates three positions.

"I really haven't given it any thought," he said.

"It's a heck of a good school system," Strand said of the Mamaroneck and Larchmont system.

Colb said he will spend his April school vacation visiting with school principals and staff in Marmaroneck. He first learned of the opening when he was contacted by a consultant hired by the Mamaroneck schools and invited to apply for the job.

Prior to his appointment, members of the Mamaroneck School Board visited Newton and met with about 12 people, including Strand, and School Committee members Nancy Mann and Susan Silbey.

Hospice plan hits legal obstacle

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The wording of a state law meant to regulate the construction of hospitals has presented a temporary roadblock in the Hospice of the Good Shepherd's effort to occupy the old Claflin School.

The General Laws stipulate that no license shall be issued for the establishment of a hospital in any building that was not originally constructed for that purpose.

Laureeann Gerstenlauer, overseer of the Claflin/ Hospice project, called the statutory obstacle a "legislative technicality," and said it would not hold the project up if the wording of the law can be changed in April.

The problem stems from the state's lack of a provision for licensing hospices in the first place, according to Gerstenlauer. She said a hospice comes closest to a "special hospital" in the eyes of the state.

While several other states have conceived licensing procedures especially tailored for hospices, Gerstenlauer guessed that Massachusetts would not see such legislation for another 18 months.

Her request that the Board of Aldermen submit a home-rule petition to the state Legislature will be taken up at a meeting of the full board tonight. She said she would like to get the petition into the Legislature in time to be considered by a working committee on health care which begins on April 4.

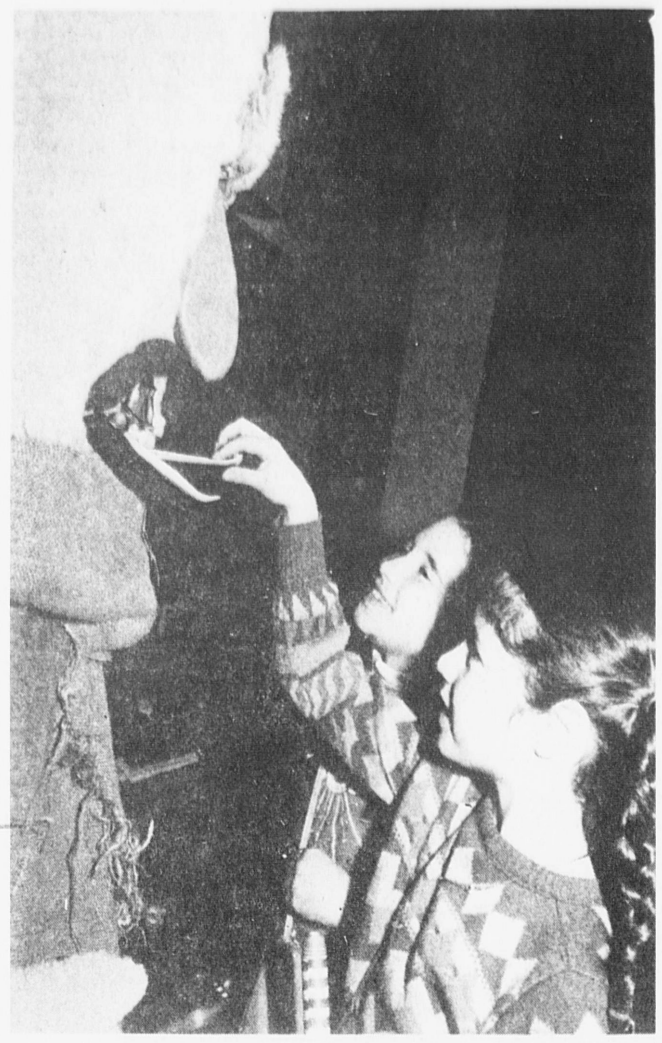

In a letter to Alderman Rodney Barker, chairman of the Human Services Committee, Gerstenlauer said that all other phases of the hospice project are "doing well."

She said that 27 associates of the hospice, working on a capital fundraising effort, have elicited approximately $30,000 in private donations and $40,000 in grants. She added that the hospice has an additional $665,000 in grants pending.

"The banks have reviewed our mortgage proposal and are both very impressed and willing to help out," she said. "Everything appears to be 'go' at this time, but everything also hinges on the passage of this legislation."

Grstenlauer also pointed out that a federal Hospice Medicare Reimbursement Act, recently signed into law and effective as of this coming November, will make terminal-care benefits available to all persons over the age of 65.

He estimated that the Hospice of the Good Shepherd might open its doors in November, 1984.

Music program for toddlers

WEST NEWTON — "Music for Toddlers & Parents" is a first adventure in music and play, planned at the All Newton Music School. The program provides a unique opportunity for toddlers (ages 18 months - 2.9 years) to participate in a pre-nursery music group with their parents.

Through songs and rhymes, creative movement, storytelling, musical instruments to play, and play materials, the class offers an enjoyable social and learning experience. The program will consist of 15, 45 minute sessions.

Classes are starting soon at the All Newton Music School, 321 Chestnut St., West Newton. Class times are Wednesday morning, Wednesday afternoon, and Thursday morning. For more information, call 527-4553 or 237-4464.

WE FOUND THE RIGHT CAR... AT THE RIGHT PRICE IN THE AUTO MART SECTION!

Should American consumers lease or buy their next telephone ?

NEW YORK (UPI) — The American consumer is about to be barraged with yet another series of complicated choices — what to do about the telephone.

Should you continue leasing or buy? Hang onto the standard desk model or go for something in leather or handcrafted wood? Buy a $10 cheapie or invest in a $600 model that will dial automatically, amplify your voice, wake you up and remind you of your anniversary?

American Bell and other major companies are gearing up to peddle phones that do everything from screening your callers to automatically calling for help in an emergency.

The advertising battle (AT&T will only say that it will cost "plenty") will try to convince Americans that leasing a standard phone is both uneconomical and unfashionable in an era of computer and electronic communications miracles.

The leasing habit has been hard to break in the past. The Federal Communications Commission ruled in 1977 that the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. had to allow its customers to use equipment made by other manufacturers.

But the custom of buying phones never really caught on, thanks in part to the lack of encouragement by Ma Bell. The phone company itself offered only exotic decorator models like the Mickey Mouse model for sale — customers wanting the standard desk version had to lease. Until Ja. 1 of this year, the local phone companies routinely included a phone-rental charge in the bill no matter what a given customer owned.

But AT&T is now in the midst of a complicated splitting-up process that has changed its attitude toward phone purchasing. By next January, the company will have spun off its 22 local operating companies into independent entities.

When the dust settles, the local phone companies will be barred from manufacturing telephones and American Bell, an AT&T subsidiary, will be in the selling, leasing and servicing business.

In this complicated interim year, the local companies can continue leasing phones, or sell their customers the phones already in their home or other equipment they already have in stock, but not newly-manufactured units.

American Bell, which has taken over 461 of the company's phone center stores, will be able to sell new telephones this year, but cannot distribute leased phones.

If you live in territory serviced by the local companies now being split off from AT&T and if you have a phone, you are part of what AT&T affectionately calls its Embedded Base.

The Embedded Base is being transferred to American Bell, in a process that should be completed by the end of the year. Contrary to some rumors, AT&T says it will not end the leasing system, although it plans to push hard for sales of its new phone products.

The company expects its customers to prefer buying their phones once they get used to the idea, but "as long as there's a market, for the forseeable future, we're going to continue to lease," said Michael Tarpy, an AT&T consumer products spokesman.

The leased phones, however, will continue to be the old standard desk and trimline phones. Those wishing the more exotic options will have to become phone owners, Tarpey said.

To further complicate matters, the local phone companies will be allowed to get into the equipment distribution business themselves once they've been fully separated from AT&T. Last week Pacific Telephone in California was the first of the locals to announce it planned to get be back into sale and leasing of telephones.

People who regarded telephones simply as instruments for talking to people who aren't in the house are in for some suprises.

AT&T's Genesis system includes a videoscreen, an autodialer, voice amplifier and alarm clock, and options such as an electronic datebook.

SmartCare by Technicom International, targeted especially for the elderly and infirm, will call for help automatically if the owner fails to answer a reminder-alarm.

Privecode, by International Mobile Machines Corp., will warn you ahead of time who's calling you, allowing you to decide whether to answer.

All these units cost hundreds of dollars. On the other end of the scale, experts are expecting cheap models costing $10 or so to appear on the market soon. Basically disposable, the models are aimed at the audience who would rather throw away a defective unit than bother with repairs.

AT&T says it will sell a new basic desk phone for $35, and that customers can buy the used models they already have in their home for even less.

But each of the communications giant's local units is setting its own prices for the used phones.

The cost of leasing also varies from company to company. Consumers in one area may find that buying their present phone pays for itself in less than a year, while those using another company may discover it takes much longer.

Stan Sesser, the West Coast editor for Consumer Reports, says consumers should check to see how long that payback period will be.

"The offer to buy a phone in place should be treated with a great deal of sceepticism," he says. "In some states the payback period is as long as two or more years."

Telephone technology is changing so dramatically, he warned, that in a year the consumer may yearn for something new but feel compelled to hang onto an old phone that has not yet paid for its purchase price.

In some states, Sesser added, the cost of buying your used home phone may be higher than that for a comparable new phone from a non-AT&T manufacturer.

"Depending on the state, the warranty for your home phone might be 30-90 days while an independent store's new phone warranty is a year," he said.

Stesser, who has written several articles on phone shopping for Consumer Reports, also suggested that consumers who intend to buy their old home phone make sure it's in good condition. Newer pushbutton phones manufactured by AT&T's Western Electric "are much more reliable than the older ones were," he said. "If your phone has the feel of an electronic calculator it's a new model, but if you can depress the button a long way it's an old model. You should trade it in for a newer kind before buying it."

Although Stesser said phones made by other reputable manufacturers tend to be as reliable as AT&T's, he warned consumers to check the warranty if they buy independent.

All about recycling

By Jeanne Lesem

Carolyn Jabs is the kind of saver who even recycles chewing gum.

She recommends it for — among other things — cleaning typewriter keys or sealing punctures in hoses.

Ms. Jabs also knows how to bend a plain wire hanger to make a bookholder.

"It's not quite as elegant as lucite but it works just as well," she says.

Got a ragged paint brush? Don't throw it out. Trim it at a 45 degree angle, to use for painting corners and tight spots around woodwork.

Tired of hammering your fingers when you hold a nail in place to drive it into the wall? Wedge the nail between two teeth in an old comb instead. If the hammer misses, you may pulverize the comb but at least your fingers will be safe.

These are typical of the 2,133 hints in Ms. Jabs's new paperback book, "ReUses" (Crown, $9.95).

This is her first book, although she has written many articles for magazines and newspapers on what she calls "appropriate technology."

She defines that as "doing more with less, taking charge of your life, becoming more self-reliant.

"The emphasis is on not consuming as much and consuming wisely."

She and her husband, a television station manager, live on a farm near Utica, N.Y.

Rural living encourages saving, she said in a telephone interview, because you're more apt to look around the house instead of popping off to the store every time you need something.

Ms. Jabs said her ideas "come from all over. In some ways it's a brainstorming process, with friends, neighbors, my mother."

Some ideas also come from reading, she said.

"I'll sit in a room and fool around with objects to see what I can make of them or do with them."

She found lots of possibilities in worn blankets. They can be made into bedrolls, ponchos, lap robes or a sack-like covering designed to snap or button around people to keep them warm indoors when they lower the thermostat.

Boxes are another disposable with lots of possiblities, including a holder for 400 color slides, freezer containers for rolls of dough for refrigerator cookies, and crushproof sandwich boxes for brown bag lunch carriers. For the slides, you'll need a 1-pound spaghetti box, Ms. Jabs says; for refrigerator dough, an aluminum foil box, and for sandwiches, the flat, waxed cardboard box that stick margarine comes in.

Board takes closer look at Mayor Mann's picks

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

NEWTON — True to their promise to scrutinize mayoral appointees more closely, the aldermen approved a newcomer to the Planning Board while halting debate on a potential trustee of the Horace Cousens Fund.

Robert Swett of Auburndale was approved as a new member of the Planning and Development Board, but Robert W. Tennant's appointment to the Board of Trustees of the Cousens Fund was held up.

Swett, who works for a Boston development firm, won approval after aldermen decided his appointment would not unbalance the board in favor of developers. Tennant, the eldest son of Alderman Robert L. Tennant, had a tougher time of it.

Alderman Harold Levinsky, a member of the aldermanic sub-committee which has been studying the workings of the fund, "chartered" Tennant's appointment after a long debate on his qualifications. "Chartering" is a pariamentary tactic allowing a single alderman to stop all debate on an item until a subsequent board meeting.

Tennant's appointment requires active approval by the full Board of Aldermen by March 14 , and the board does not meet again until Mar. 21. Barring a special meeting in the interim, his nomination will have to be submitted a third time.

Aldermen rejected his appointment earlier this year after the subcommittee members had made it clear they were looking for an expert in social services to fill the slot, but the mayor renominated Tennant on Feb. 28.

Subcommittee members reiterated to the full board that their study of the Cousens Fund had led them to believe a person knowledgeable in social services and the problems of "the needy poor" was needed among the trustees.

Criticism has been leveled at the fund recently for failing to help the indigent Newton citizens for whom it was originally targeted.

While it was unanimously acknowledged that Tennant's credentials are impressive as a lawyer who is involved in a number of civic pursuits, members of the sub-committee stuck with their contention they were looking for different credentials.

Sondra Shick, chairman of the sub-committee, told the board, "We need someone who has been deeply involved with the needy poor. We don't need a lawyer for that. We really need someone who can turn the fund around."

She said the trustees of the fund have contracted a search firm to try to hire an administrator who could lend it the needed expertise. She added that such an expense could be avoided if the right trustee could be found.

Several aldermen argued that Tennant's involvement in local charity work made him more qualified than any expert in social services. President Emeritus Wendell Bauckman, also a member of the sub-committee, said that, given Tennant's background, he "may even be better qualifed than a specialist."

Alderman Paul Daley said he has known Tennant for more than 15 years and that the man's quality overrides his qualifications. "He has worked his tail off in every association you can think of," Daley told critics of the appointment.

The suggestion that Tennant's being the son of Alderman Robert L. Tennant might limit his effectiveness brought a varied response from the board.

Alderman Cynthia Creem said she was "upset and angry" at the immplications of the comment.

Alderman Lane Sofman said, "Appearances carry just as much weight as actual fact," and added that any appearance of a conflict of interest could be detrimental to the whole board.

Alderman Terry Morris complained that, sometimes, "People can get carried away looking for conflicts of interest." He emphasized that the job Tennant was appointed for was a "people-to-people" situation for which he is well qualified.

Morris and Sofman joined with other aldermen who complained that Mayor Theodore D. Mann had put them in an extremely embarrassing situation by nominating Tennant again after he had already been determined to be "qualified but not recommended."

President Matthew Jefferson said, "It borders on arrogance for the mayor to resubmit this appointment after the board voiced its objections. I fault the Executive Department only for the embarrassing situation which has been created."

Alderman Rodney Barker said it was "most unfortunate that the mayor insisted on recommitting this name when he knew the committee was against it." He pointed out to his colleagues they would be setting "a dangerous precedent" by ignoring the sub-committee's recommendation.

Fincom Chairman Edward Richmond asked that a recommendation for approval be substituted for the committee report, which recommended denial of the appointment by a vote of 4 to 3. The vote on his recommended substitution was 12 to 11 in favor, with alderman Tennant abstaining.

Levinsky, Shick and Barker rose to their feet to "charter" the item before another vote on it could be taken.

Straw vote trims budget

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — In Monday's nonbinding "straw vote," the School Committee trimmed the superintendent's proposed $40,580,776 budget by about $357,000, leaving the schools with an increase of 2.1 percent for next year.

Superintendent John Strand's proposed budget called for a 3-percent increase.

School Committee Chairperson Nancy Mann hailed the 2.1-percent increase as representing a "very tight" budget which managed to contain "remarkable" new programs.

"It's due partly to luck," she said after a unanimous School Committee vote to accept the new budget figure. "It's also due to an excellent job by the administration.

"Not only is this a very reasonable budget," she said, "it is also a budget which supports some new initiatives in the system."

Strand's new programs would introduce computers in four elementary schools at a cost of $86,800 in staff and equipment and expand the Newton Advanced Challenge gifted and talented students' program by funding five full-time positions for $126,600. Another $14,200 would be spent for teacher workshops and instructional materials.

Approximately $38,000 in new funds is targeted for the three junior highs to maintain the current junior-high sports program (with the exception of ice hockey), expand the drama program and provide staff for the start-up of clubs.

Strand's proposal to spend $119,600 to establish facilities for the use of cable television in the schools was the only one of the new programs to be trimmed Monday night. Committee members voted to pare the account by $50,320, based upon anticipated funding from the Newton Cable Foundation.

The $50,320 was for building a production and training studio at Newton North High.

Elderly seek law changes on evictions

CHESTNUT HILL — Dozens of elderly apartment dwellers are "frightened to death" over a developer's mandate to either pay higher rents or buy their apartments as condominiums, but they may get relief from a state house hearing held Monday.

"I am deeply concerned about this, because there are a large number of elderly, I would say close to 75 percent of the 82 apartments, who are frightened to death," said 81 year-old resident Dr. Harold J. Freedman on Sunday.

Women's Week: holding up half the sky

Birth control's history cited

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

OAK HILL — Birth control, including abortion, is not a sign of societal breakdown but has been practiced since ancient times, Newton South High School students were told last week.

"I still don't understand completely why (birth control) is still so controversial today," said Linda Gordon, author of the book Woman's Body, Woman's Right: A Social History of Birth Control in America.

Gordon, a University of Massachusetts professor, spoke to some 150 students about the history of birth control as part of a week-long program for National Women's History Week.

Gordon said birth control is not a modern invention, as some believe. Every society has practiced some birth control method as soon as people understood the connection between intercourse and pregnancy, she said.

Ancient societies used "homemade" products, such as pastes made from oils, honey or vegetable matter to block conception Gordon said. These methods had a 50 percent effectiveness rate, she said. Societies along the ocena used sea sponges to block conception and other groups used various acidic solutions as spermicides. Abortion and infantcide were practiced by some other groups, she said.

Today a concern about changes in women's roles and underpopulation have caused "an absolute panic" among some segments of society which attempt to establish moral codes through legislation, Gordon said.

"All issues of birth control have been very controversial," she said. "Some see birth control as unnatural. There is a fear about the changes in mothers' roles."

Irrational feelings about birth control still exist, she said. Some still feel motherhood should be involuntary and a woman should abs-

Women slighted in texts

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON — High school textbooks used in Newton lack information about women's roles in history and some teachers view the subject as insignificant, according to a North High history teacher and author.

In spite of an abundance of women's history information, Newton high school students are learning little about women's roles in this country's development, June Namias said last week.

Namias, author of Telling The Whole Story: Guidelines for Intergrating the History of Women into the United States History Curriculum said, "Just because these things are there doesn't mean they are going to get taught."

The abundance of material on women's history has been available since the 1970's but little information is incorporated into high school text books, Namias said.

Male and female students should learn that "women played a part in the general series of events and sometimes played a very significant role," Namias said, "We're talking about half the population."

Among United States history text books used at North is A Short History of the American Nation, by John Garrity. Namias said only 22 pages of the 577-page book discuss women.

"How much it says is not very great," she said. "No section has more than two pages about women. It's not coherent."

Namias blames publishing companies, not the school systems, for the lack of history texts which discuss the roles of women.

"It's not to say that Newton isn't doing a good job. This is what the companies are putting out," she said.

Gas pains with auto inspection plan

WEST NEWTON — John McAteer and hundreds of other Massachusetts service station owners are rushing headlong into the computer age as the state gears up for one-a-year emissions testing.

Some motorists, however, are viewing the April 1 start of the new Environmental Protection Agency mandated program as more of a pain than a plus.

McAteer, owner of the West Newton Mobil Service on Washington Street, is one of about half a dozen Newton operators who have shelled out close to $18,000 each for computerized, state-approved emission testing machines.

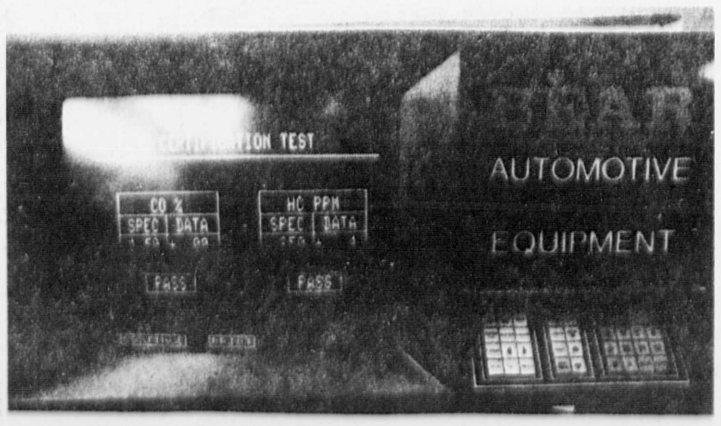

According to the Bay State Gasoline Retailers Association, another half dozen local service station owners have applied for permits to operate the sophisticated machines for the annual inspections mandated by the federal government.

The change from two inspections per year to only one, combined with the new emissions test and an annual fee of $10 for the inspection has left many area drivers apprehensive and confused, McAteer said last week.

"A lot of people are panicking," he said. "They don't know where to get the inspection done, they don't know what it involves and they don't understand the regulations."

McAteer and Gene Leahy of Leahy's Exxon in Newton Centre both tout their portable emission testing machines, manufactured by Bear. Leahy, who is on the executive board of the Gas Retailers Association, was instrumental in pounding out a price break for retailers to purchase the machine built by the Hamilton Test Systems, one of only three companies which manufacturer the devices. Hamilton markets the less expensive of the two currently available machines, running around $7,000. The Bear unit, which does a much wider range of engine tests and can be used for

Condo law changes are sought

Freedman is a tenant of Hammond Gardens, an older apartment complex on Boylston Street that was sold early this year to a Brookline developer named Frederick Clayton. He notified tenants by letter in February of his plans to convert the apartments.

The developer plans to raise rents from $450 for a one bedroom to $600 and from $600 to $850 for a two bedroom apartment, according to tenants. The cost for the condos are in the $90,000 range, as reported in February. Newton has no rent control.

Alderman Ethel Sheehan, who wants the elderly tenants to be given an extended period to relocate, had planned to speak before the state legislative committee on housing that recommends regulations for condo conversions.

"As far as I know the minute it (any condo regulations passed by the legislature) is signed by the governor, our own law becomes effective and I think that's enough to slow down Clayton's plans," said Sheehan on Sunday.

Newton passed an ordinance in 1981 preventing a developer from evicting handicapped and elderly residents in less than five years and allows for a two-year notification period to all other tenants. The law is still on the books, but it needs state legislation to give it power.

"I hope this will slow down the conversion because the timing of these things are important to the elderly," said Sheehan regarding the hearing.

Because the state lacked legislation to back up the city ordinance, in August 1981 the State Supreme Judicial Court overturned the city's condo conversion rules. Anticipating such a state law this year Newton aldermen voted again in favor of the restrictive condo laws in January.

According to City Planning Director Barry Canner, almost all of the large apartment complexes in the city have been converted.

"Newton has no rental housing and I think we should maintain what we have," said Alderman Sheehan.

The builder has been suggesting other places for the elderly to go, but to relocate is an "emotional drain on them and effects there health," says Sheehan.

Clayton has met with city representatives including the mayor, but nothing concrete has come about, other than a promise to look for other housing for the elderly, states Sheehan.

"I don't understand why were are so helpless in a community like Newton," said Dr. Freedman.

If Freedman is evicted it will be the tird time in four years his move was caused by condo conversions.

"I was pushed out of the towers (Chestnut Hill Towers) 3½ years ago, my wife was very sick and I believe the change shortened her life," said Dr. Freedman.

The doctor said he was assured by Wyco (the company that sold Hammond Gardens) that it would never go condo. He added, that security is very poor at the complex.

"I hope the legislature will pass the bill and give us some solice. Why we can't we spend a few years in comfort ?" asks Freedman.

Freedman believes the price of the condos are too high for most residents of the apartments, many of whom lived there for 20 years or more.

"People here are so frightened, they can't be relocated easily, because they have lived here for years and haven't got the financial security to absorb a 35 percent rent increase in these old apartments," said Freedman.

"I'm not interested in relocation, I just want a place to spend the rest of my years in," said Freedman.

Helping teens help themselves

By Andy Caffrey
Correspondent

NEWTON — Though adolescents act rebellious toward older people they are seeking guidance and understanding from them, members of a panel discussion on Newton's youth said Thursday night.

The discussion, which featured Newton District Court Judge Monte Basbas and Newton North High School Principal Marya Levenson, addressed the traumas and troubles of growing up before 50 people at the Newton Community Service Centers.

The conclusion of both Basbas and Levenson was that a great percentage of today's young do not experience a shattering adolescence, but do feel a need to belong among their peers, and to be guided by adults.

Levenson said that, while it was easy to generalize about adolescents, it is more important "to remember how individual each one is."

She stressed the need to look at today's teenagers against the backdrop of the social epoch. The social boundaries in the 1950s, when she was growing up, were much clearer than today, she said.

"Boundaries are much more fluid today," Levenson said. With both parents working in many families today, the child is often confused about the evolutionary role of the working mother and the possible professional career she pursues. It broadens the youth's perspective on career choices open to him or her and this, Levenson said, confuses the teen and complicates growing up.

Levenson, who spoke as a principal, teacher and a mother of an adolescent, said adolescence is a time of testing limits — "theirs and ours" — and a time of experimentation — "with school, friends, the future and sometimes with drugs and alcohol."

"They are trying certain hats on," she added.

While all this testing and experimentation is going on, Levenson pointed out that the most necessary thing for parents and teachers to do is to maintain a sense of authority over the youth.

"Be clear about limits," she said. "Adolescents are very good at finding out when you're not going through with policy."

Basbas agreed that adolescents must know of the limits set against them. In his court, he said he tries to be "tough, but compassionate."

"There's a bottom line and if they don't comply with it, they're going to get zapped," he said, indicating that stiffer penalties await those who fail to stay with the community-service work he often assigns to youths brought before him.

A great percentage of today's young people stay out of trouble with the law, but those that do get into trouble, Basbas said, committed the "most nonsensical offenses."

But Basbas, who is also a former Mayor of Newton, stressed that the cause of a great majority of teenagers' brushes with the law is alcohol. And the fault lies not with the youth, but with society, he said.

"The first thing a friend offers when you go into his house is a drink. We have always stressed social drinking, and kids see it as a way to belong," Basbas said.

He pointed to the success of the Newton Youth Alcohol Program as an alternative form of sentencing that holds the young offender "accountable" to society. The youth is required to attend Alcoholics Anonymous (AA) meetings several times a week and counseling meetings among their parents and Newton teachers at least once a week. They also work in the community doing painting, litter clean-up and assistance to the elderly. He added he can number only two failures out of the several hundred he sentenced in the program's three-year history.

"They feel they are doing a service to the community," he added.

Basbas also censured parents for letting their children stray.

"Far too frequently we as parents walk away from our children and hope that someone else will do the job for us." He counters this failing by requiring an offender under 18 to be accompanied by a parent in his court.

But he did compliment the school system and the Service Centers on working well with the police and the courts to help channel adolescent energy in constructive directions.

With cue balls as the triggers, John O'Brien's complex machine worked well.

ful collection of levers, pulleys and inclined planes all designed for one purpose: to crack a walnut.

The students, in a Newton Advanced Challenge Unit on "simple machines" spent two and one-half months under the guiding hand of teacher John McMackin putting together their imaginative nutcrackers.

These were not ordinary nutcrackers, McMackin noted as he watched students showing off their often intricate and not always successful devices.

"The project, in the form of a contract with each student, was to build a complex machine," McMackin said. The students studied pulleys, inclined planes, wheels and axles and simple levers during the past few months.

They then put their ideas for a "complex machine" on paper incorporating more than one of the devices. They then submitted the plans to the class in the form of a building contract and students critiqued their colleagues' proposals.

"Some of the machines clearly work," McMackin noted. "Some of them... well, it's obvious the kids have their hearts in these projects."

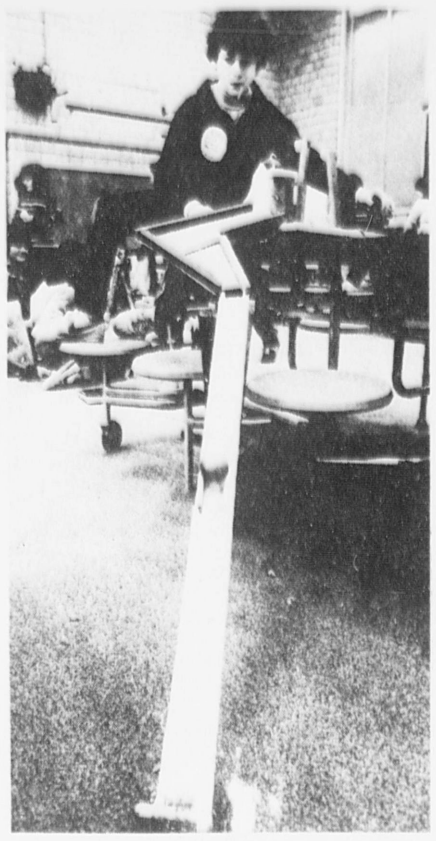

Sixth grader Joe Frassica, for example, took the proverbial challenge to "build a better mousetrap" literally when he constructed a towering wooden frame with several feet of curly copper tubing and a mousetrap. A ball, travelling through the tubing, struck the mousetrap, releasing a rope bearing a five-pound weight, which plummeted down on the waiting walnut. Crack! Success.

Jesse Rathbun and Kate LaMont teamed up for a Goldbergesque device they called "G.O.P.H.I.R." which stood simply for Gravity Operated Pulled Hauled Inclined Ramp.

Another project was named "Thinga magiga cracka walnuta," while others bore equally creative titles.

Some of the projects employed pulleys scrounged from the family clothesline. Others used bricks, lead slugs, window weights and, in one case, a shotput for counterbalances.

In the end most if not all of the machines cracked walnut after walnut. And with dozens of eager students parading through the Franklin School fair, the nut meats were devoured in short order.

A long ramp and a fast-moving ball served to crack walnuts efficiently for a sixth grader during Thursday's Franklin School science fair.

Inspection changes have some concerned normal trouble-shooting and tune-up work, runs between $16,000 and $17,000, McAteer said.

The emission test will be done at the same time as the routine inspection with the traditional wiper, lights and horn checks. The emission test, McAteer said, involves insertion of a probe into an auto's tailpipe with detailed measurements printed out for the motorist, service station files and the Mass. Registry of Motor Vehicles.

The complete test, at $10 instead of the $4 fee last year, will take only about 15 minutes, McAteer said, and the driver whose auto does not pass will have the detailed computer print-out at hand for problems to be corrected.

Aside from complicating the service station owner's life, McAteer said he thinks the new emission checks will have several positive results.

"It's going to be good for the customer because the car will be taken care of better," he said. "Before the (inspection) was so condensed because you'd get backed up and rush through things. Now you'll take the time to do it right."

The payback on the emission testing machine will come in part from work done by the stations doing the testing, McAteer said, since the exhaust test will tell the motorist, on the spot, what work needs to be done.

After using his Bear unit for five months for routine tune-up and diagnostic work, McAteer swears the by device.

"It has definitely helped out," he said. "What would normally take you an hour and a half to trouble shoot, you can do it now in 10 minutes."

Although McAteer said the Registry of Motor Vehicles still has not produced the final guidelines for the fast-approaching inspection start up, some conditions have been passed along. Only passenger cars less than 15 years old with gasoline engines will be subject to the new emission inspections. Motorcycles, trucks, diesel vehicles and mopeds will be exempt.

Council for Children seeks representatives

NEWTON — As part of its 1983 Spring Into Action membership drive, the West Suburban Council for Children is looking for additional representatives from Newton, Wellesley, Weston and Needham.

The Council is a citizen-based organization serving the four-town area, to advocate for children's services and work toward improving children's lives.

The Council is the volunteer component of the local Office for Children, a Massachusetts state agency. As such its mandates include reviewing proposals for children's services and assessing community need.

David Gotthelf, co-chairperson for the Council, reports, "We are particularly interested in recruiting parents of all ages who have kids of all ages. These folks often have direct experience with children's services and can provide the Council with valuable insight into problems and possibilities."

Joyce Hollman, co-chairperson for the Council, pointed out the need for citizen involvement. "In these times of tight federal, state and local dollars, it is critical for citizens to take an active role in the decision-making process."

The office is at 474 Centre St., Newton Corner (ground floor of the Eliot Church). Karen Elizabeth King can be contacted at 965-9810 from 9 to 5 Monday through Friday.

Board still fumes at Assessing Dept.

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Members of the aldermanic Revaluation Sub-Committee expressed their annoyance Thursday night that recommended changes in the Assessing Department are taking place too slowly.

Touche-Ross, a Boston accounting firm that completed an audit of the department early in February, recommended a radical reorganization of the staff, including the creation of an administrative manager's position which would oversee administration of the office.

Chief Budget Officer David Wilkinson, who is "on loan" from the mayor's office until the department is straightened out, and Chief Assessor Robert Palmer outlined a rough organizational chart for the aldermen. While some aldermen were dissatisfied with the proposal, the committee approved it to get reorganization rolling.

Committee Chairman Paul Coletti complained that changes were being made too slowly.

Right now, you're in a holding pattern, and it has been that way for a month and a half," he told Wilkinson and Palmer. "A job description for the administrative manager could be before us tonight."

Committee member Ethel Sheehan said she was also exasperated by the lack of apparent progress.

Every time we come here, we're told we have to come back. I'm getting annoyed. We want to get the place organized," she said.

"Come on. Let's mooove!" Sheehan urged as the meeting dragged on past 10 o'clock with no tangible product. "I'll be back in February, 1984, and I'll bet you'll still be talking about the salary of the director."

John Rogers, president of Save Our Homes II taxpayers' group, added that he was disappointed no action had been taken on finding an administrative manager for the office, something he thinks is a key to cleaning up a mammoth backlog of work.

He compared the organizational chart which Wilkinson sketched on a blackboard to Plato's "Republic." He said it looked "classy," but not very practical.

Wilkinson responded to the criticism by telling Coletti, "You can't tell us to go fast and go slow at the same time." He added, "I've been accused too many times of trying to ram something down the throats of the board."

Committee member Robert Tennant asked why it was so difficult coming up with a viable organizational chart for the Assessing Department. He asked if there was not one assessing board of the 351 in the commonwealth that could serve as a model. "Are we that different?" he wondered.

The committee finally approved the new organizational chart and made plans to hasten it though the legislative process. Sheehan was alone in voting against it. She said the administrative manager should be separate from the assessors, instead of a member of the board.

$28,000 withheld by city from Finnegan Associates

NEWTON — The city is planning to withhold at least $28,000 of the $50,000 still owed to Finnegan Associates, the firm which conducted the citywide revaluation, according to Ouida Young of the City Solicitor's Office.

The final $50,000 of the $590,000 contract with Finnegan was withheld originally because the Acton-based firm did not complete the work it promised the city, according to Chief Assessor Robert Palmer.

Young said Finnegan agreed, after lengthy negotiations, that the city could withhold the $28,000 for "damages" suffered as a result of the firm's performance in the revaluation.

More than 6,700 taxpayers officially disputed the values Finnegan pinned on their properties after revaluation. Applications for abatements of property taxes have bogged down the Assessing Department so badly that an auditing firm recommends an entire reorganization.

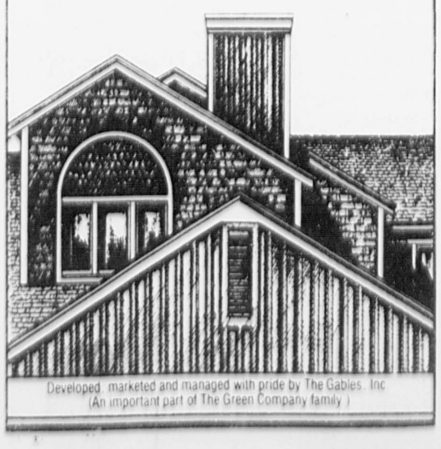

Young predicted a law suit would be in the works if the city's problems with Finnegan were not resolved in the next three to four weeks. "Finnegan has a clear interest in getting a check fairly shortly," she said. If Finnegan won in court, she added, the city would have to pay more than a year's interest on the withheld $50,000.

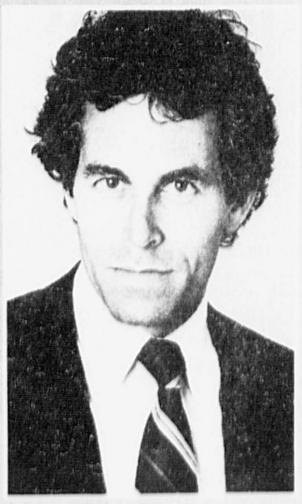

Manuals for assessing commercial and residential properties are among the items still to be delivered. Palmer said the manuals would assist in future revaluation updates. But both the city and Finnegan appear skeptical of getting together to finish up the job.

Vote a pay raise and get on with it

A proposal pending before the Board of Aldermen to hike the salaries paid to board members and the mayor seems to have garnered about as much interest as the latest edition of the phone book.

During the brief public hearing two weeks ago on the issue to hike aldermanic salaries from $1,800 to $3,000 and the mayor's pay from $37,500 to $58,000, only one person, Alderman Robert Tennant, took the floor.

Tennant made an eloquent and honest statement on his belief the aldermen don't deserve a pay raise since he feels serving in government is a matter of civic pride. He made an equally good plea for raising the mayor's salary to the proposed level.

One thing is certain. If the pay is to go up this is the year to vote on it with the city election due in the fall. Aldermen should be on record on this issue and if it is of genuine concern to the voters they will speak their peace on election day.

In light of a lack of a raise in pay for the holder of the mayor's job for several years we strongly support the proposal to establish the salary for the office at $58,000. This opinion has nothing to do with Mayor Theodore Mann but rather with our belief that any person who leads a city the size of Newton deserves a salary equal to the task.

The current superintendent of schools earns $54,500 per year, $17,000 more than the mayor. That must be corrected since both positions deserve proper remuneration.

The salary for members of the Board of Aldermen, however, cannot be considered more than a token fee to cover the myriad telephone calls, mileage inherent in aldermanic duties and to some extent, the time taken from an alderman or woman's regular work day to devote to city responsibilities.

We tend to agree with the spirit of Alderman Tennant's assertion that serving on the board is a civic duty which involves a payback more in terms of public pride than monetary gains.

Yet we must agree with those who claim a salary of $3,000 per year might encourage those most qualified to stick with it, or in the case of newcomers, to make a run for a seat on the board.

To waste more time on an issue which has raised so little public furor is absurd. The aldermen should vote from their hearts on this one and get on with the business of government.

Mayor's school budget thoughts

To the editor;

(The following is a letter from Mayor Theodore Mann to School Committee Chairperson Nancy Mann concerning the proposed school budget.)

Dear Nancy;

I do not have to belabor the fact that I am and always have been a devoted supporter of quality public school education and that I have joined with you in seeking the best quality educational programs we can afford.

Common sense tells us that a mayor, with or without the benefit of the Leominster decision, does not relish having to cut budgets and act negatively on requests for more wages and funding during these days of unemployment and inflation.

It would be so much easier to ignore the realities and in one sudden action ignore the inevitable perils which are directly ahead of us, which would consequently lead us into complete and absolute destruction of those values and those qualities of life that I have so long supported.

The fact is that there is no escaping the responsibilities of my office, and those include the political fall-out that is bound to occur — but I sought the office and was duly elected to carry out those responsibilities.

The record of this city thus far, when compared to virtually every single community in Massachusetts, has been outstanding. This means the delivery of quality education and quality municipal services, in terms of police, fire, health, recreation, etc. Thus, it should be clearly understood that budgetary limitations dictated by revenue figures will be applied in accordance with the ceilings placed by statute on this and every other community in the Commonwealth.

Presently, in my judgment, without exceeding the budgetary guidelines, the quality of education and other public services in Newton need not be diminished at this time.

We must stretch our available dollars and live within our ability to pay. That is prudent and necessary in public life, as it is in our personal living.

This city is even further constrained in terms of the tax burde, having just gone through a major upheaval — revaluation and the necessity for city homeowners to be, in many cases, even further burdened by user fees as well as increased property taxes as a result of the attendant adjustments. To increase the school budget in the face of declining enrollment, while at the same time, because of that action, requiring cuts in other municipal departments, would be imprudent, counterproductive and, in most cases, impossible.

Now, where is the additional funding to come from? Time and time again, the funding resources have been explained to me, the city's budget officer, the comptroller. They are, indeed, matters of public record.

This city has been given appropriate budget guidelines and cannot resort to any financial trickery to the detriment of the whole city, which would leave us with less than the necessary funds with which to face the impending needs. At best, all that recklessness now would produce would be short-term funding by some imprudent method.

Further, it is unrealistic to assume realization of new state and federal funds, though we continue to seek them — informed opinion indicates that Newton will increasingly have to rely on its own resources. The reality is a grim one and should not - cannot - be ignored.

Now, where does that leave us? What are the alternatives?

There is the questionable path of overriding Proposition 2½, a course of action which, if initiated by the School Committee, if approved by the Board of Aldermen, if voted by a special referendum, would, in a single instance, enable the city to raise the full limit of its revenue as provided under statute. The estimate of such new revenue is approximately $700,000.

Whether or not such an action would meet with voter approval is not the primary question; assuming that there is such approval, where would we go for revenue increases from there?

While I do not recommend such an action by the School Committee, I will not obstruct it. As you know, I have either attended or have had monitors in attendance at all School Committee and budget meetings.

I do intend to pursue this course of action. I intend not to support by straw vote or actual vote any budget in excess of that which I have set forth previously, a budget that contemplates that, at very minimum, there will be nonrecurring expenses of at least $1.2 million from declining enrollment alone.

During the budget deliberations of the Board of Aldermen it has been the board's practice over the years to provide me with their resolutions dealing with various budget items.

I would expect that the Board of Aldermen, upon review of the School Committee's budget, will make resolutions and, of course, as has been my practice, I will give due consideration to all of these matters, as long as there is a full description of the need, along with short-term and long-term funding sources, and satisfactory documentation.

Nancy, all of the above items make reference to the operating budget, but I want you to understand that I have made further commitments for funding for school-related expenses dealing with necessary capital improvements.

Again, out of the same funding source - the property taxpayers - we must take positive action in providing for energy-efficient operations which have both short-term and long-range financial implications.

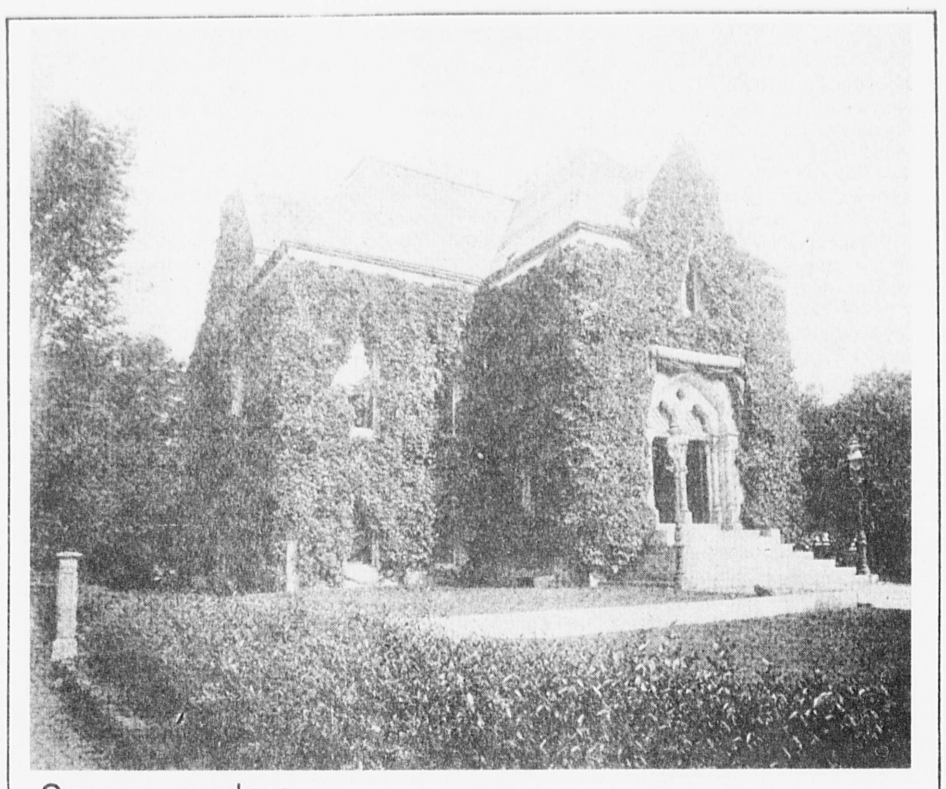

The costs and benefits will be examined, and it is this administration's intention to move forward very rapidly on providing necessary funding for the aforementioned.

Further, as has been the past practice of this administration, when the need arises for emergency funding, as in the nearly $800,000 needed to repair the F.A. Day sewer or in the $300,000 which will be needed this spring for replacing windows at the Angier and Cabot Schools, we have made the difficult decision to put other worthy items on the back burner, so that an immediate health and safety matter could be attended to.

I certainly intend to continue my high regard for those city properties which are schools and for the well being of the students, teachers and staff who inhabit them.

As you know, the financial planners of this administration have been and will continue to be available to you and members of the public to continue the dialogue necessary to reach that position of understanding all our collective problems — with the ultimate objective of providing the best that we can afford now and in the future.

Seven wonders

A view of the main branch of the Newton Free Library in Newton Corner, taken shortly after the turn of the century, shows ivy covered walls and a much smaller building than currently stands. Photo is from the book "The Mirror of Newton" published in 1907, which called the seven library branches at that time "the seven wonders of the modern world." Today library trustees are considering a push for a new main library branch, possibly across from City Hall.

Says build library now

To the editor;

Newton has needed a new main library for many, many years and desparately needs it now.

Unfortunately, a new main library is not as popular as free pizza or ice cream cones or fireworks on the fourth of July.

Yet the need has been well demonstrated over the years by the dedicated Board of Library Trustees and the distinguished librarian, Virginia Tashjian.

Wahtever the cost today it will be higher tomorrow.

When I served as chairman of the Newton School Committee in the early sixties the need for a new Newton North High School was clearly evident. The cost at that time was about $11 million. The mayor at that time was opposed.

When Newton North High School was built some years later the cost had escalated to over $20 million.

If the mayor and Board of Aldermen will accept the fact that a new main library is needed, then I suggest an analogy to the Newton North High School situation is appropriate and the time to build it is now and not years later.

Aldermanic attendance: silence from taxpayers?

To the editor;

With the recent news of the roll call and a look at the aldermen's attendance, will we, as taxpayers, remain silent?

One aldermen with only a 50 percent attendance in 1982, which is disgraceful, and then to hear the other alderman from Ward 2 indicate the pay raise is a non-issue.

I think it is time that the people of Newton woke up. I do feel the salary of the mayor should be increased. To do this, though, I would prefer to see a change in command. First of all, a deputy mayor is not needed. And second, let the pay roll be reviewed and see where monies are being spent.

The apathy which exists in this community by the citizens is due to the performance at all meetings about the major issues that arise throughout the city.

Are you, as a citizen and taxpayer in Newton, happy?

Personally, we are in a delicate situation with our feelings about the "All-American City." Don't you think so? Please do not just think but call your mayor or alderman and express your feelings about matters regarding your city.

The alderman from Ward 3 said that those who serve should do so out of a sense of civic duty.

Good, intelligent, qualified men should be elected in the future. I do agree with his judgment.

Rainy day savings account

Dave's rainy day

City Traffic Engineer David L. Tannozzini received a "windfall" when he was notified by the State Treasurer he had a "rainy day" account inactive for the last five years.

Under the state's unclaimed money law, bank accounts that go untouched for at least five years are deemed abandoned.

The extent of Tannozzini's "windfall?"

"I told my wife by calling up and telling her I was really a millionaire," joshed Tannozzini. "She got all excited and found out I had a grand total of $63 coming to me."

On the very day he was notified about his unclaimed money, Tannozzini also won $5 from the state lottery. "I was just one number away from being eligible for the $1 million TV game," he said.

At least he has a million dollar sense of humor.

Reducing the crime rate

John Donovan, Newton police statistician is compiling crime data for January and presented the statistics to Police Chief William Quinn, who, according to Donovan, said the statistics are too high.

So Donovan reduced them - sort of - by reducing the one-page data sheet to a square-inch photocopy. A police spokesman said the chief has not yet authorized releasing the crime statistics.

"If your eyesight is good you can still read them," Donovan said.

Arts on The Hill

Congressman Barney Frank, a member of the Congressional Art Caucus, is again conducting an art competition for high school students in the Fourth Congressional District.

The competition is held each year at no expense to Uncle Sam and the contest is aimed at recognizing the artistic talents of young Americans. For information on the rules of the contest call Frank's office in West Newton at 223-1648.

Wrong senator named in letter

To the editor;

A recent edition of The Newton Graphic carried a letter of mine which inadvertantly appeared to be addressed to Senator Charles Percy, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

However, this letter was meant for, and sent to, our Massachusetts Senator Paul Tsongas. It was Sen. Tsongas who threatened to filibuster the Ken Adelman nomination if it comes to the full Senate.

Apparently Sen. Tsongas perfers to base his judgment on an attributed remark provided as hearsay evidence rather than Adelman's copious published works. It is this kind of unstatesmanlike conduct which I would call to the attention of Massachusetts voters.

Thank you for correcting the record.

Lawsuit to block 'one-way' changes filed against city

By Gary Dorion
Middlesex County News Service

CAMBRIDGE — Six Newton couples have filed a class-action suit in an effort to stop city officials from closing public access at four intersections on and from Commonwealth Avenue, south to Crosby Rd., to Hammondswood Rd., to Manet Rd. and to Old Colony Rd.

The couples claim that protection afforded to those streets because traffic has been barred has resulted in the volume of traffic being doubled in their own neighborhood.

Filed in Middlesex Superior Court, the lawsuit alleges that an amended city ordinance Nov. 1, 1982 failed to receive certification by the state Department of Public Works that closing access was consistent with the public interest.

The complaint was filed by John and Carol Casey, 52 Hammondswood Rd., Kenneth and Joyce Gruenberg, 71 Hammondswood Rd., David and Lois Weltman, 75 Hammond St., Robert and Rosalind Palter, 65 Hammond St., Howard and Pamela Feldman, 80 Monadnock Rd. and Harris and Margaret Baseman, 112 Monadnock Rd., all of Chestnbut Hill.

The City of Newton was the only defendant named in the suit.

Reached Monday, City Solicitor Daniel Funk said it is "routine" for the city to obtain certification from the DPW after traffic regulation ammendments are implemented by local officials. Funk acknowledged certification has not yet been obtained.

He said "the worst that could happen" is that the regulations would temporarily revert to what they were before aldermen voted on the amendment.

"They like to exert whatever thay can to get the burden of traffic of of their streets," Funk said, referring to the plaintiffs.

The residents noted in the suit the city has erected traffic signs at all four intersections declaring "Do Not Enter" and also "One Way." They say their own streets are "narrow residential streets" and all now receive the traffic which the ordinance amendment barred from access to the streets off of the four intersections.

The residents further contend they, and other unnamed residents on their streets, are suffering "irreparable harm" because their roadways are neither wider nor more capable of handling traffic going north to south than the streets that obtained protection by the changes.

"This result is not in the public interest," stated Attorney Jason A. Rosenberg, on behalf of the residents.

An attorney for the city is expected to appear in court March 21 in order to show cause why injunctive relief should not be granted.

Superintendent Strand's reorganization plan okayed

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Superintendent John Strand's proposal to reorganize and cut back the School Department's central administration won unanimous approval from the School Committee Monday.

The nearly $26,000 in savings was lumped in with other cuts voted at the non-binding "straw" vote session on Strand's proposed $40.5 million school budget.

The committee voted to adopt Strand's plan to eliminate the positions of administrative assistant to the superintendent, assistant director of personnel and assistant director of program.

Two new positions will be created: director of elementary education and director of secondary education. Both directors will take on some of the duties of the current assistant director of personnel, and the secondary education director will also assume responsibilities of the administrative assistant.

The net savings are estimated at $26,000.

Although the committee voted unanimously for the plan, several members had reservations, particularly about the two new positions.

Marcia Mitchell said she would support the plan, which Strand modified slightly since it was first introduced a few weeks ago. But, Mitchell said, "I am still holding to the belief that these two jobs (the two new directorships) will be extremely difficult to carry out."

Although Robert Ricles questioned the trimming of full-time administrators for the personnel department from two to one, he voted for the plan based on his belief that Strand "is entitled to structure his organization as he sees fit."

In modifying the plan because of School Committee concerns, Strand included superintendent review of evaluations that directors of secondary and elementary education make on school principals.

Nancy Mann approved the plan with the understanding that the School Committee "should always be willing to re-evaluate" the effectiveness of the reorganization.

"There is no such thing as a perfect organization plan, just as there is no such thing as a perfect person," she said.

Budget trimmed some for Newton schools

Comittee member Susan Silbey made the first motion to cut the account, but only by $40,320. Silbey said she had spoken with members of the Cable Foundation and was told they would be willing to fund about 80 percent of the cost.

Nancy Mann reminded Silbey that the schools were already committing themselves to spend $28,000 in new staff and approximately $41,200 in equipment above the cost of the production studio.

"I really think we deserve to get the whole thing (the studio) funded and we should negotiate as hard as possible," Mann said.

The committee voted 4-3 to cut $50,320 with Mann, Silbey, Robert Ricles, and James Mnookin voting for the cut and Leonard Gentile, Katherine Jones and Marcia Mitchell opposed.

Committee member Ann Berwick was absent.

Mayor Theodore Mann, who usually votes as an ex-officio School Committee member at both the "straw" and final budget votes, is in Taiwan participating in a conference of U.S. mayors and vacationing with his wife.

The reductions approved at the "straw" vote session leave the budget about $580,000 above the mayor's requested increase of about $253,000.

The bulk of the cuts approved at the meeting at Bigelow Junior High came from the fuel oil account, which was cut by $91,033. The reduction, which brings the budgeted amount down to approximately $737,000, is based on the current price of number four fuel oil.

The budgeted $113,400 for gas heat was cut by $60,476 to reflect the change from gas to oil heat for F.A. Day Junior High next year.

Strand's budget proposal included about $550,000 in savings as the result of the closing of Warren Junior High in June.

The superintendent's budget also took into account savings from the reduction of 44 teachers and 18 other school staff positions due to declining enrollment. The teacher cuts alone will save the system an estimated $1,124,000.

Another major economy is elimination of $119,000 for transportation of Newton private school students following a court ruling which changed eligibility requirements.

The public hearing on the proposed budget will be held Monday at 7:45 p.m. at Day Junior High, Minot Place, Newtonville. The School Committee's final vote on the budget, prior to submitting it to the mayor, will be held tonight at Day Junior High at 7:45 p.m.

Abatement fact sheet is available

NEWTON — The Assessing Department has put together four pages of questions and answers dealing with how to bring an application for abatement of property taxes before the state Appellate Tax Board.

The information was assembled because so many taxpayers complained they were confused about what to do next after their abatement applications were denied by the city's assessors, according to Chief Assessor Robert Palmer.

Copies of the fact sheet are available in the Assessing Department at Newton City Hall.

Police reports

Three assault 2 near South

OAK HILL — Police are looking for three young men who assaulted two South High School boys while they were walking on Country Club Road Sunday night, police said.

Police said three white males, believed to be in their late teens or early twenties, were in a red Ford Pinto shortly before 10 p.m. and stopped their car next to the two boys.

The suspects asked the boys if they knew of any parties and the boys responded that they did not, police said. The three men leaped from the car, kicked the boys and struck one of them with a beer bottle. The boys were not seriously injured, police said. The victims went to one of the boy's homes where a parent alerted police.

Charged with drunk driving

WEST NEWTON — A Waltham man was arrested early Monday morning and charged with drunk driving, police said.

Joseph Hings, 27, of 14 Jackson St., was arrested at Cherry and Washington Streets and charged with driving under the influence of alcohol. Police said State Police also sought Hings on a warrant for another motor vehicle violation.

Burglars hit 3 parked cars

NEWTON — Police said three cars were broken into Sunday night.

A radio and cassette player was reported stolen from a 1976 Fiat parked on Tudor Road. Thieves stole a siren from a 1977 Subaru parked at the Holiday Inn parking lot located at 399 Grove St. and a radio was reported stolen from a 1977 AMC parked on Harding Street.

Warren computers taken

WEST NEWTON — Two computers were reported stolen sometime Wednesday night from Warren Junior High School, police said.

Police said the burglars entered the building located on Washington Street by breaking a door lock. The suspects entered a computer room on the third floor and stole an Atari computer and TRS-80, according to police who recieved the report about 8 a.m. Thursday.

Insufficient storage space in many bathrooms may be due, not to their small size, but to the inefficient use of existing space. Common ways to combat the problem of storage space includes the use of hanging wall cabinets, cabinets that fit between studs, towel ladders, pole shelves and the utilization of the space beneath the wash basin. By moving the toilet forward by a mere foot, there is generally adequate room created to install a floor-to-ceiling built-in wall cabinet. Pole shelves may be installed without moving the toilet. Common storage space for accessories is a medicine cabinet. Its adjustable shelves can accommodate a variety of things.
At CHARL MARC KITCHEN & BATH CENTER, 4174 Washington St., Roslindale, you will find the "storage place" for a lot of good modernizing ideas. An attendant of the Arco Oil Co. service station told police the man walked in shortly after 4 a.m. with his hand in his pocket. He said he had a gun and demanded money.

After taking the cash, he ordered the attendant into a back room, then fled. The attendant did not know whether the robber had a car.

Charged with clubbing 2

NEWTON — A 20-year-old Henshaw Terrace man was arraigned in District Court for allegedly clubbing two persons at a Watertown Street home late Saturday, police said.

Joseph Poillucci of 12 Henshaw Terr. was charged with two counts of assault and battery after being arrested as a suspect in the incident.

According to police, a man entered the home during a party about 11:15 p.m. Saturday and began fighting. He punched, kicked and clubbed a 17-year-old Newton boy and a 19-year-old Franklin man before fleeing toward the Hawthorne playground, police said.

Police searched the area and less than 10 minutes after the incident was reported, stopped Poillucci at Crafts and Lothrop streets. After a further investigation, police arrested Poillucci as a suspect.

Rags blamed in house fire

NEWTON — Rags are being blamed for a fire inside 225 Greenwood St. that caused no structural damage to the house and no injuries, according to police and fire spokesmen.

The fire was reported at 6:25 a.m. Friday and was declared extinguished at 7 a.m. Firefighters used smoke ejectors to vent smoke from the house.

Firefighters also extinguished a vehicle fire on the turnpike and an outside fire at Cottage and Champa roads and made nine nonfire service runs Friday.

On Saturday, firefighters put out a chimney fire at 210 Cotton St. from about 5 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. and made 11 nonfire service runs.

CHESTNUT HILL — Security guards chased two youths from a Boylston Street jewelry store after the youths ran off with a $600 bracelet, police said.

The bracelet was recovered but the youths fled on a bus going to Boston, police said.

Two black males entered Quantum Gallery, located at 199 Boylston St., about 2 p.m. and grabbed the item from a case, police said.

They were observed by guards who chased the suspects from the store and down Boylston Street. The youths ran into a MBTA bus, police said. The suspects had dropped the bracelet which was recovered by the guards.

NEWTON — A 1981 Ford pickup which had been stolen out of Newton recently was recovered by Boston police in Roxbury, police said.

The radio and cassette player was stolen and the ignition and body were damaged, police said.

Newton man found guilty

CAMBRIDGE — A 19-year-old Newton man has been found guilty by a Middlesex County jury of armed robbery and assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, charges stemming from a holdup at a Wayland gasoline station.

Defendant Anthony Parkas, of 324 Adams St., Newton, was to be sentenced in Norfolk Superior Court this week.

He was charged with confining a gas station attendant and with stealing some $275 from the Sunoco gas station at 1 Main St., Wayland.

The charge of confining was not prosecuted by the Middlesex district attorney's office. Parkas, however, was convicted of armed robbery by means of a handgun and a tear-gas cartridge or chemical mace which was designed to incapacitate.

According to court documents, Parkas claimed that three Newton residents could attest to his whereabouts at the time of the incident.

The case was prosecuted by Assistant District Attorney Charles Hughes.

Chiropractic for Health
by Dr. David G. Rutman, Chiropractor
CONSTIPATION
Constipation is a problem for millions of Americans. Television advertising would have one believe that over-the-counter laxatives are the "natural" way to relieve the problem. However, laxatives are hard on the body and can sometimes lead to complications. Chiropractic looks beyond symptomatic relief to the actual cause of the problem. Abnormal intestinal function may be the result of a spinal imbalance which distorts nerves impulses to the affected area. If intestines receive an improper message, they will probably not perform as they were intended. By allowing nerve impulses to flow unrestricted to the once troubled body part, the chiropractor enables normal functioning to resume.
Though surprising, it is true that chiropractic can serve to assist many body "mal-functions." When the brain's messages are interrupted and instructions are not transmitted properly to all organs, the body's system can react adversely. The science of chiropractic goes to the source of the problem, eliminates the point of interference, thus allowing proper function to resume. For answers and assistance to your needs call DR. DAVID G. RUTMAN, CHIROPRACTOR, 4593 Washington St., Roslindale. Tel. 323-5022. VISA & MasterCard accepted. Hours by appt. including 3 eves. a week.
CHIRO TIP
If you must frequently rely on laxatives for regularity, you are treating only the symptom of the discomfort.

Red tape tangle over water bills

NEWTON — Five department heads and a handful of aldermen tried to determine just why paperwork is backing up so badly in the city's Water/Sewer Department, and they failed.

The department head Vern Porter appeared before the aldermanic Public Facilities Committee last week along with City Comptroller Larry Marino, Treasurer Theodore Scafidi, Data Processing Director Richard Walsh and Public Works Commissioner John Sulik.

Porter appeared before the same committee two weeks ago, but the responsibility for delays in issuing water bills could not be pinned on his department, so aldermen called in the heads of related departments.

Explanations fell short of the aldermen's expectations Wednesday night, leading Richard McGrath, chairman of the committee, to comment, "Instead of getting answers, we're getting deeper into confusion."

Walsh said the Data Processing Department was "almost there" in its attempt to translate meter readings into bills quickly. He explained that some delay came from the fact that data from the new $1.8 million system of meters that has been installed city-wide was incompatible with the city's computer.

Walsh said it took a year to develop a "black box" which would translate water-meter data into characters the main computer could understand.

Committee member Joseph DePasquale remarked, "You mean they sold us a system that would not work until they created a translator to fit into our computer?"

Scafidi echoed Porter's complaint that cuts in the staffing of their departments were largely responsible for the some bills coming out six months late. He said the overload of work in the Treasurer's Department "is starting to fracture me." Cuts in manpower, prompted by Proposition 2½, "are starting to catch up with us," he added. "We've got to change our priorities."

The treasurer said, "Part of the problems in these departments are tied up in the budget process." He complained that the whole budget process had been turned upside-down in the city, saying the target figure handed him by the Executive Department is "not a reasonable estimate of what I need to run my office efficiently.

"I should have the right to put in there what is needed. And I really resent a budget that doesn't represent what I need," he said.

He said his own departmental budget ended up $26,000 over the figure set by the Executive Department. "I had to go back and make more cuts. They might as well do our budget for us," he said.

Dissatisfied with the answers they got at the Wednesday night meeting, members of the committee resolved to submit a list of questions to the mayor in the hopes they might receive "some uniform answers."

DePasquale pointed out that the time was drawing near to analyze the budget for the coming fiscal year. Regarding the number of unanswered questions about the workings of the Water/Sewer Department, he promised, "It will be the time to take the kid gloves off then."

Birth control practices common in societies

tain from having sex if she does not want to become pregnant. There is still "a tremendous amount of guilt feelings about using birth control," particularly among women, she said.

Political movements perpetuate the moral code, Gordon said. She asked students if they were aware of the federal regulation requiring that parents be informed if their children under age 18 have been given birth control. No student said he or she had heard of the rule, known as "squeal law." Gordon said she feels the regulation, temporarily blocked by a judge in New York State, "is terrible for moral and practical reasons."

Moral codes have been altered in the past. During World War II a rash of venereal disease forced the military to distribute condoms to servicemen. Gordon described the act as a "double standard" because at the time women still could not purchase diaphragms. The fight to make diaphragms available in the U.S. began during the 1920's. Diaphragms could be purchased in Massachusetts in the 1960's, Gordon said.

Gordon said abortion is a birth control method that has been practiced in many societies and it is not a sign of a deteriorating society.

Gordon said "As a state employee, I can't have an abortion on my medical plan. I can have a baby on my medical plan."

Gordon said she feels anti-abortionists are sincere in their belief that the life of a fetus should be protected, but she added that, "I'm very skeptical, from an historical point of view, that you can stop abortions.

"My position is that there are far too many abortions. But that says something about the dangers and ineffectiveness of birth control," said Gordon, who after her address added that she thinks there should be more input by women into the development of birth control methods.

History teachings fail

and urges other teachers to do the same.

Namias's 53-page teachers' guidebook, written with Carol Horgan in 1981, was distributed to teachers and lists resource books for both students and teachers. It categorizes resources according to different periods in American history, oral histories, biographies, autobiographies and general works and offers a guide for teaching the material.

Teachers' indifference toward and lack of knowledge about women's history perpetuate its absence in high school classes, Namias said. Many teachers think women's history is insignificant, she said.

"(Teachers) have to have the desire and knowledge to teach it and get the material," she said, "I think the emphasis should be on reeducating teachers."

Namias said both male and female students need to understand that wars and political events are only a part of history. Family life, interpersonal relationships, work and values among various races and enthnic groups should also be studied, she said.

"In order to totally understand why things are the way they are you have understand the origins of people," she said, "If you don't have all races and classes portrayed then it makes it look to boys and girls that they had an insignificant role. It reenforces the old stereotypes," Namias said.

Namias also wrote the book, First Generation, which features her interviews with immigrants who discussed their experiences in the U.S. Namias discussed the immigration experiences of women at South High School last week during a week-long program for National Women's History Week.

Female students in particular suffer by the lack of discussion on women's history, Namias said. It is important for women's self-esteem to understand the various roles women had throughout history, she said.

"A lot of times girls tune out of history classes because women are not part of the ranks of power," she said.

There is more awareness among historians about the importance of studying women's roles in history, Namias said.

Playing vital role in Harvard's history

NEWTON CENTRE — Caroline Lipson is playing a role in an historic process at Harvard.

Last semester the dark-haired, energetic junior, daughter of Dr. Charles and Ellen Lipson of Malubar Lane, Newton Centre, was elected secretary of the Undergraduate Council, the first funded student government in Harvard's 347-year history. The Council replaces previous student governments that operated without University financing.

"I ran because I thought it would be exciting to take office at the beginning and influence the direction the Council takes," she said. "I knew I was qualified because I had worked as a secretary at the Harvard Medical School since my freshman year."

Besides taking minutes at Council meetings, Lipson helped to set up and run the office and to put out its newsletter. She cut her journalistic teeth at Newton South High School where she was business manager of "Denebola," the school newspaper.

Lipson describes the Undergraduate Council's function as a "forum where all student opinion can come together. It's a representative body that can help make policy. We're planning to devise specific projects to present to the administration and not just rubber stamp ideas as they come along."

This term Lipson will continue to serve on the Grants Committee, one of the Council's most active arms. Last semester it awarded $9,000 to 21 student projects.

"It's been fascinating to form a policy so we can objectively review the many applications," says Lipson. "We're helping to support group activities that might not otherwise take place."

In 1983 Lipson will also be directing her energy and enthusiasm toward local government. A resident of Mather House, one of Harvard's residences for undergraduates, she recently became chairman of the Mather House Council. Her major objective as chairman is to encourage creative ideas for social events. "A Harvard House is the small community where you get to know everyone. It's a way of having a community within a large university. I want to bring it closer," she says.

Lipson uses the funds from her job as secretary in the Department of Social Medicine and Health Policy at the Medical School (part-time during the school year, full-time during the summer) to help pay her tuition expenses and give her some pocket money.

"I think the job is one of the luckiest things that happened to me at Harvard," she says. "The people I work with are interesting and interested. They're caring and have given me great flexibility with my hours."

Though she claims she was a "bundle of insecurities" when she arrived at Harvard, Lipson says she found her niche both socially and academically in her freshman year. "I really believe every last person at Harvard finds her own niche," says Lipson. "There are so many different interests and groups here, you can really be involved with the thing that interests you most."

Her father and brother, Robert, are both Harvard graduates but Lipson says she didn't have an easy time getting in. "I was determined," she says. "You have to really want to come here — and work on it."

Highlands Council seeks nominees

NEWTON — More nominees are needed for the upcoming Newton Highlands Neighborhood Council elections, according to Election Commissioner Alan Licarie.

As of Tuesday afternoon, he said only five Highlands residents had taken out nomination papers for the nine seats to be filled in the May 3 election. The deadline for filing is 5 p.m., March 29.

The signatures of fifty registered voters are needed to qualify as a nominee.

George Mansfield, president of the Highlands Council said he expected more residents to run for the council and explained that his newsletter announcing the election has just been mailed out.

Mansfield said four incumbents on the council would not be running for office again. "It's a very good year to run and a good chance for new people to get involved," he said.

Licarie said nomination papers were rather slow going out two years ago, but that the fire at the Hyde School resulted in three latecomers being elected by write-in votes.

Nomination papers are available in the Election Commission office on the first floor of City Hall.

Some aldermen oppose assessors' funding

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The aldermanic Revaluation Subcommittee approved another $25,000 for temporary staff in the Assessing Department this week, but minutes later the Finance Committee recommended just $9,000 when some aldermen threatened to stop the flow of funds completely.

Alderman Richard McGrath, distressed that none of the three members of the Board of Assessors will accept the responsibility for running the department, told the Revaluation Sub-Committee, "Until we establish responsibility down there, we shouldn't give them anything."

The subcommittee voted 3 to 2 in favor of the $25,000 appropriation. Aldermen Wendell Bauckman, Ethel Sheehan and Robert Tennant voted approval. Aldermen Bruce Carmichael and Chairman Paul Coletti voted denial.

FinCom voted 5 to 2 in favor of a $9,000 appropriation, with Bauckman and Tennant holding out for the $25,000. Both committee reports will go to the full Board of Aldermen at Monday's meeting.

McGrath promised to "charter" the requested appropriation when it comes before the full board. "Chartering" is a parliamentary procedure whereby aldermen can stop further debate on an item until the next board meeting.

During this fiscal year the aldermen have already approved more than $110,000 in supplementary funds for temporary Assessing Department staffing. The extra staff has been working on a tremendous backlog of work resutling from the city-wide revaluation.

The appropriation was one of the last remnants of $67,000 Palmer requested last fall for temporary staffing.

A recent audit of the department by Touche-Ross, a Boston accounting firm, recommended reorganization for better management and increased accountability.

The city's chief budget officer David Wilkinson "on loan" to the Assessing Department to oversee implementation of the Touche-Ross recommendations, said the requested funds were crucial to running the department during reorganization.

"It is most critical that we are able to keep working uninterrupted," he told the subcommittee in arguing for the $25,000 appropriation.

Aldermen expressed surprise at learning the Chief Assessor Robert Palmer was not responsible for the workings of the department. Richard Bullwinkle asked Palmer, "Do you think you're the boss? Can you tell someone, 'Do this or take a hike?'"

"I don't have that authority," Palmer responded. "My position is a political one," he said, explaining that the three assessors elect a chairman annually.

Bullwinkle said he was further surprised to learn the department's payroll needed Wilkinson's initials for approval.

President Matthew Jefferson said he understood Palmer was paid more than the other two assessors on the board and always thought that was for his accepting responsibility for how the department was run.

Committee member Robert Tennant found himself agreeing with McGrath, who said he was "disturbed to know intramural activities are clouding the responsibilities of the chairman." Tennant told Palmer, "Until the politics in the department clear up, you're not going to progress."

Tennant said he could not understand how the assessors could take the brutal, constant criticism they have had to endure for more than a year now. "I wouldn't take the shellacking the assessors have," he told the sub-committee. "It's very strange they wouldn't come up off the floor swinging. There's no confidence. To me, we're right up against the wall here tonight."

McGrath and Coletti agreed they would approve the full funding request if they were assured that someone would accept the administrative responsibilities of the department. They added that they wanted to see a search started for a "deputy director" of the department who would manage the administrative duties permanently.

Coletti said he did not want to keep subsidizing sloppy work in the department. He first advocated approving only $5,000 and keeping a tight rein on the assessors. He said he objected to a "charter" of the request because that would cut some aldermen out of the decision-making process.

Cable outlets due in 6 schools

NEWTON — Negotiations between the city and representatives of Continental Cablevision have resulted in an agreement to install at least 19 additional cable outlets in six school department buildings.

The agreement will bring increased cable access to the department's Education Center, Brown High, Bigelow, and Day Junior Highs, and Newton South and Newton North High Schools.

According to the administration, the School Department will work with Continental to determine if even more cable drops might be appropriate at Newton North.

Pay hike plan revisited

NEWTON — Taxpayers filled a Finance Committee meeting room Monday night for a discussion of proposed pay hikes for aldermen and the mayor, in spite of consistent backing of the proposals by most board members.

A recent public hearing on the issue drew only four citizens, none of whom spoke for or against the plan to raise the mayor's pay from $37,500 to $58,000 and aldermanic salaries from $1,800 to $3,000.

The FinCom already had approved the hikes, but the full Board of Aldermen recommitted the proposal to committee for more deliberation.

The committee approved both raises again Monday night. President Emeritus Wendell Bauckman abstained from both votes saying he would rather have a Blue Ribbon Committee study the proposals first. Alderman Robert Tennant voted against the aldermanic pay hike because the lawmakers should serve out of "a sense of civic duty."

Taxpayer advocate Vincent Fillipone offered the aldermen a detailed argument against the raises saying, "You can't tell the man on the street to tighten his belt and then say, 'I'm going to let mine out two notches.'"

Fillipone, an insurance broker, argued that fringe benefits already push the mayoral and aldermanic salaries far beyond the published figures. Mayor Theodore D. Mann's salary, including health and life insurance, now totals $48,110, according to Fillipone. The proposed raise would bring it up to $68,660, he said.

Fillipone added "the total actual value" of all the salaries in the mayor's office total some $178,389 and suggested the Executive Department might be subjected to audits like those done recently in the city's Assessing and Water/Sewer Departments.

Only the League of Women Voters and one Auburndale resident lent unqualified support to the mayor's payraise.

FOR GOOD 'OL WEST ROXBURY

Irish American

I'm proud to be an American
And I'm proud that I'm Irish, too,
For I love the wearin' of the green
And I love the red, white and blue.
I love to watch the marchers
As they go parading by Whether it's on St. Patrick's Day
Or on the Fourth of July
And what could be more beautiful than a shamrock, goodness knows,
Unless your heart is captured
By an American Beauty Rose?
Hot dogs? Yes, I love 'em
And watermelon, too,
But I'll always have an appetite
For good old Irish stew.
No it isn't just the blarney
When I proudly say, "it's true
That my heart is pledged to America
And to dear old Erin, too!"

Divorce mediators push for reasonable pact

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON CENTRE — Divorcing couples do not have to fight bitterly over their settlements and neither the husband nor wife has to be the "loser" when an agreement is reached, according to Newton residents Lynn Halem and Barbara White.

Trained divorce mediators can help couples learn communication skills so that an equitable settlement can be reached, said Halem and White, partners and founders of Mediation Associates in Newton Centre.

"Mediation is not a win-lose situation," White said last week.

Divorce mediation is an alternative to working out settlements with lawyers. The couple meet directly with either Halem, a family policy specialist, or White, a psychologist, to discuss the issues.

Halem and White said there are several advantages to using mediators rather than lawyers. Spouses are less likely to wonder, "Was I taken?" if they discussed a settlement directly rather than communicated through lawyers, White said. Partners are more likely to make alimony and child support payments because they are satisfied with the settlement, she added.

It can be less expensive and time-consuming when couples talk to each other directly rather than communicate through lawyers, White said. But the time couples spend working out a settlement will vary according to the individuals and issues involved in each case.

Settlements are usually reached in five to seven sessions. The sessions are two hours long and cost $60 each. Education, health care, and social security are among the items discussed. Clients "put all the issues on the table and disclose everything," particularly financial information, Halem said.

The settlement is then given to a lawyer who translates the agreement into legal terms and files it in court. Halem and White strongly advise that couples also consult lawyers while they are in mediation.

"Not everyone, obviously, is right for mediation, because some couples just want to fight," Halem said.

Mediation is not the place to air grievances or discuss the reasons for the divorce. Some clients need therapy to help them resolve those issues, they said.

"There's a magic that seems to occur" during mediation, in that couples who could not communicate with each other before begin showing concern for each other, White said. They discuss problems and talk to each other as friends.

Lynn Halem

"Sometimes I wonder whether they are going to get back together," Halem said, adding that none of their clients has reconciled.

One criticism against mediation is that mediators "will let people agree to anything." If Halem and White disagree with their clients' settlement, they will include in the settlement a "non-concurrence clause" which explains their objections.

Halem and White discuss all of their cases, though only one of them is present during a session. A large portion of their time is also spent researching issues pertaining to individual cases, Halem said.

Halem earned a masters degree from the University of Pennsylvania and a doctorate from Harvard University. She wrote the books, "Divorce Reform: Changing Legal and Social Perspectives" and "Separated and Divorced Women."

White earned a masters degree from the Iowa Child Welfare Research Station and has researched and consulted on child developement. She authored the book, "Childhood: Pathways of Discovery." Both Halem and White are married and they each have two children.

Halem said mediation "really took shape" in the late 1970's, noting that Chief Justice Warren Burger came out in favor of mediated cases. Halem and White also quoted the Massachusetts Special Commission on Probate and Family Court Procedures. In 1980 the commission said evidence indicates that "mediated settlements in marital disputes simply last longer and work better than adjudicated settlements because the parties who helped craft the settlement have a greater stake in making them work."

This mediator did city work; bills Newton for $3,784 fee

NEWTON — The state-appointed mediator who helped Department of Public Works employees and city officials hammer out a compromise agreement neither party wanted now wants to be paid $3,784.

The cost of the mediator is to be shared by the city and the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME), the union which represented the city workers.

After months of heated negotiations, administration officials still contended it would be better to hire a private contractor to pick up the city's trash than to continue with a streamlined work force.

Members of the work force about to be streamlined also disliked the end product of negotiations and 300 DPW workers voted 2 to 1 against the contract on March 3.

Richard G. Higgins, of Londonderry, N.H., has billed the city and the union for his work at the rate of "$300 for each eight-hour period or portion thereof." On Feb. 24, when Higgins mediated from 8:30 a.m. until 5:45 p.m., a total of 9 hours and 15 minutes, he earned a total of $600 under the terms of his contract.

Higgins has also billed the city for a full $300 for each of two days on which he mediated for four and a half hours. He has also included a charge of $900 for three days of "study time," and $184 for travel expenses.

An appropriation for the city's half of the mediator's bill, $1,892, was approved by the aldermanic Finance Committee Monday night.

The Little Roads Of Ireland

The Roman roads run outward from the city on the hills,
And Holland's roads will take you
by gaily painted mills,
Small pathways of the East will lead to China's ancient wall —
But the little roads of Ireland are loveliest of all.
From Dublin Bay to Galway, from Cork to Derry town,
From Antrim to Killarney,
they ramble up and down;
And though you are ten thousand miles from where they twist and wind,
The little roads of Ireland
stay forever in your mind.

Sail training is offered

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The sea is pitching in the midst of a gathering storm, but, as part of the crew now on watch on the Norwegian square-rig sailing ship Sorlandet, it is your job to climb the rigging, poise yourself on a yardarm 50 feet above the deck and swirling seas and furl the sail.

It is at that moment that many "cadet" sailors on the Sorlandet discover the mettle from which they are made.

This summer the ship will sail again and will offer four cruises for anyone age 16 and over to take on the challenge of learning to sail a Tall Ship.

The ship has been chartered for this summer and next by Square-Rig International, a non-profit organization of individuals from the United States, Canada and Bermuda. One of the founders of the organization, Claire Kanter, visited Newton South High recently to promote the trip.

Although signing on as a crew trainee for one of the cruises won't always be as exciting as climbing the rigging up the mast during a storm, the trips offer an unusual learning and growth experience for people of all ages, Kanter said.

On each cruise will be 17 experienced, permanent crew members and 70 "international cadets."

Kanter, a Boston resident, is familiar to many Newton residents for her work at Newton South with special needs students. She was aboard the Sorlandet when it participated in the Tall Ships races in 1980 from Germany and became convinced of the value of offering the opportunity to sail the ship to the general public.

She and her husband, Richard, founded Square-Rig International and signed a charter agreement with the Foundation Fullriggeren Sorlandet of Kristiansand, Norway.

A crew trainee on the Sorlandet for the 1980 Tall Ships races, 17-year-old Nancy Richey of Boston, was on hand at South to relate her experience.

"At the time, I thought it was like being in the army," she said. "It was quite a switch."

Although Richey said there was plenty of time for relaxation, running the ship required "strict discipline," especially manning the watch duties.

She also recalls being afraid to climb the rigging. "I was so scared I wouldn't go up," she said, and stressed that she was not forced to go up.

"When I finally did go up, I was really proud of myself," the petite high school senior said.

In addition to learning to manuever the sails, the cadets learn to perform the odd jobs essential to running a ship.

Seasickness overwhelmed many of the trainees when they encountered their first rough seas and Richey was among those hit with the queasy feeling.

"I chewed a lot of gum," she said, as a means of combating the feeling.

Crew trainees were told that seasickness is really a question of mind over matter, and Richey found she was eventually able to control the feeling.

CLAIRE KANTER

"You feel queasy, but it's just mind over matter," she said.

Kanter showed a film at South High on the training of cadets, like Richey, for the 1980 Tall Ships race, in which the Sorlandet finished fourth in its class.

A special added feature of the cruises this summer will be the inclusion of musical instruments and sea chanteys. Kanter says five music teachers from the Newton public schools will be on board to provide cadets with authentic chanteys.

John Harper, coordinator of music for the Newton schools, was also at South and discussed the role of the chanteyman aboard sailing vessels like the Sorlandet.

Harper, an experienced sailor himself, said his wife describes sailing as "long periods of boredom interspersed by sheer moments of terror."

The chanteyman helped relieve the boredom, he explained, but the chanteys also played an extremely important functional role.

When the crew began "raising the yard" by pulling a heavy line in unison, they sang a Halyard chantey, which typically contained a refrain like "Yo ho" on which everyone would pull.

The chanteys are "a very fascinating part of our culture," Harper said, and are "essential to the operation of a sailboat."

The first cruise of the Sorlandet this summer will begin June 11 from Saint George, Bermuda, and the vessel will sail to Quebec, after a stop in Boston. In Boston, a second contingent of cadets will board for a three week trip up the Saint Lawrence Seaway through the Great Lakes with stops at Chicago, Deluth and Thunder Bay.

The next three week passage will be from Thunder Bay through the Great Lakes and down the Saint Lawrence, ending in Halifax, Nova Scotia. The final passage will leave from Halifax on Aug. 13 and return Sept. 1.

The cost of the trip is $70 a day per person, and cadets must stay on board for an entire passage. The total cost of a trip is $1,470, and some scholarships are available, Kanter said.

Transportation costs to and from points of embarkation and debarkation are extra.

Applications can be obtained by writing Square-Rig International, 19 Milk St., Boston, Ma., 02109.

Lion five rolls to Sectional title

By Steve Tiberi
Staff Writer

BROCKTON — Winning the Division II South Sectional basketball title is one thing, but taking all the fun out of the state tournament is another matter.

Newton South earned its first sectional title ever by rolling over Rockland, 66-59, Saturday afternoon at the Arthur Staff Gym. It was the fourth straight tourney victory for the Lions, who have made a habit of putting their opponents away early.

The Lions will go for all the marbles on Friday night, 7 p.m., when they play the Division II North winner, Wakefield, at the Dana Athletic Center on the campus of Bentley College for the Division II Eastern Mass. title.

Newton South's seven-point victory over Rockland was its fourth straight tourney victory with no last-minute heroics. Fans of Newton South basketball will have to do without the exciting finishes of your average tourney contest and settle for a squad that gets an early lead and hangs on to it like a dog to a mailman's leg.

This business of never allowing an opponent a chance has become a pattern for the Lions in the tourney. They executed it to perfection against Rockland. Newton South opened the game by roaring to a 21-13 lead in the first quarter. Rockland held the lead at 2-0 and that was it for the entire game.

The closest Rockland came to gaining the lead again was in the misdt of a third-quarter burst. The Bulldogs paced by 6-4 center Bennie Bowers (24 points) and senior guard George Graziano (13 points) cut a one-time 12-point Newton South lead to one, 39-38, with five minutes left in the third period.

Rockland had the ball and a chance to take the lead when Meatchie Russell stepped in the passing lane and stole the ball. He raced in for a layup, but was fouled before the shot. He had a one-and-one opportunity and missed the front end.

Enter Scott Anglin (22 points), who managed to tie the ball up for a jump ball. Anglin won the jump and connected on a 12-foot turn-around to put the Lions back on top by three points. Rockland moved back down and Graziano, who was defensed well, missed a jumper. Bulldog forward Joe Duggan squeezed in for the offensive rebound, but the presence of Anglin in the middle forced a miss. Anglin snared the rebound and was fouled.

South took over and Meatchie (who led all Newton South scorers with 24 points) canned a jumper to get the lead back up to five points. Duggan missed a jumper for Rockland as the Newton South defense wouldn't give up anything inside.

The Lion spurt continued. After an Anglin miss, forward Evan Kushner stole a Rockland pass. The senior got the ball back to Anglin, who tossed in a layup and the Lions were up by seven with a six-point run. Rockland would never get any closer the rest of the way.

The constant man-to-man pressure of the Newton South defense took its toll on Rockland. They just couldn't hit the shots they usually made during the season. The Lions took Rockland out of its game and its offense.

"It was our defense that has been doing it for us all season long," said Newton South Coach Joe Killilea. "These guys went up against a hard-working team and took it. A guy like Tracy Hairston is just happy to work hard on defense and he does a great job. How can you measure that type of performance? We also got great defensive games out of Evan Kushner and Gene Lindsey."

Kushner and Lindsey played an important role in the Lion strategy. They were pitted against Bowers defensively. Kushner and Lindsey did a fine job of keeping Bowers off the boards and allowing Anglin to work inside. Scott was his usual intimidating self forcing every Rockland shooter to worry about him.

"What else can be said about Scott and Meatchie," said Killilea. "They each played a tremendous game. They're two of the finest players around. Scott kept hitting the big hoops and Meatchie ran the offense beautifully."

Meatchie showed Rockland why no team has played man-to-man defense against Newton South since the first game of the season. It's tough to find someone to cover the 6-1 point guard from Newton South. Russell cut up Rockland's man-to-man defense for nine points and four assists in the first quarter alone. At halftime he accounted for 22 of Newton South's 36 points.

The Bulldogs tried four different players on Meatchie and he sent every one back to the bench scratching their head. Russell drove the lane drew the big men and dished off in low. If nobody helped, he simply went all the way.

Meacthie's leadership in the first half helped the Lions off a to 33-20 lead when the unthinkable occurred. Anglin picked up his third foul with 3:45 left in the second quarter. Newton South was up by 13, but surely Rockland had a golden opportunity to get right back into the game.

Anglin was forced to sit and Tim Gaines was brought. Tim hadn't seen any tourney action in the first half, but he came through with three solid minutes of basketball. He did a good job on the boards and Rockland could only trim the Lion lead down to eight at the half, 36-28.

Foward Mike Oglesby helped Gaines out quite a bit with tremendous work on the offensive board. All six of his points came on second shots in the first half.

"Our bench hasn't received the credit it deserves," said Killilea. "Gaines did a tremendous job in the second quarter. He was solid on the boards and worked hard. That's the kind of performance we've been getting from the bench all season."

Rockland kept trying to comeback in the fourth quarter, but a pair of Scott Anglin jumpers and big hoop by Tracy Hairston off the offensive boards stymied any comeback hopes. Rockland never gave up, however, as its starting five was on the floor till the buzzer sounded.

"They're a fine team," said Killilea. "They worked hard on the man-to-man defense and never gave up. We just kept the pressure on."

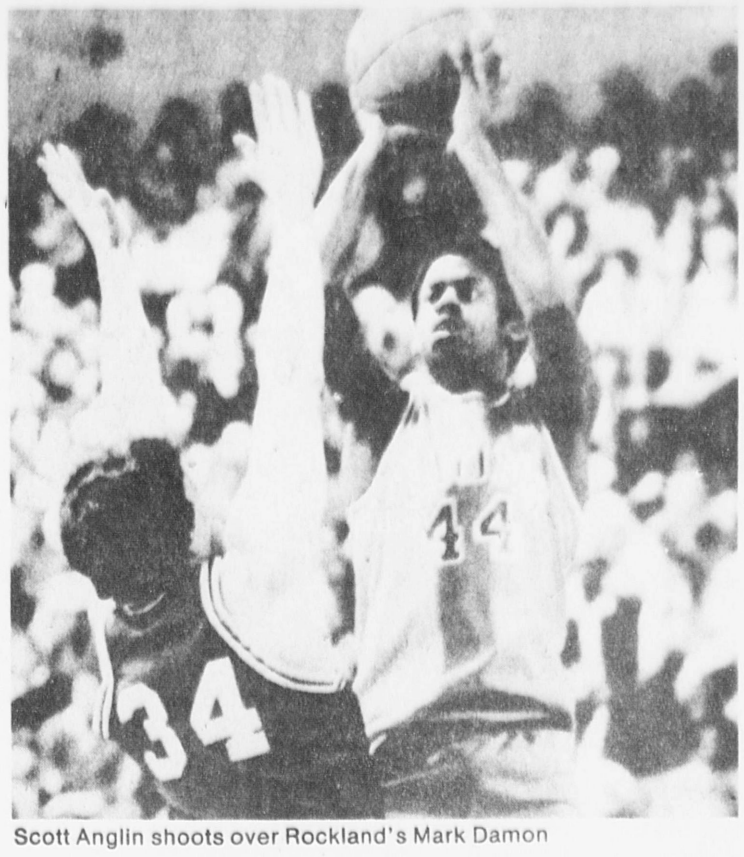

Despite the lack of last-second excitement, few Newton South fans left the Brockton High Gym feeling cheated. The summary:

Yaffe scores 1,000th point

Dona Yaffe, a sophomore from Newton, reached a milestone in her collegiate basketball career this past week. The former Newton North athlete scored her 1,000th career point Friday at Harvard. She became only the second player in Brown history to accomplish the feat.

Donna's 1000th point came with three minutes remaining in the first half. The game was stopped and she was presented the game ball and a Paul Revere silver bowl. Harvard won the contest, 76-68.

Brown tends goal for Midshipmen

Navy Midshipman Gregory Brown of Waban recently returned to New England as a member of the Naval Academy Ice Hockey Club. Brown and his teammates were in the Boston area for games with Curry College and Suffolk University.

Gregory, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Brown of Waban, is a 1980 graduate of Newton South High School and a History Major at the Academy. Midshipman Brown is in the graduating class of 1985.

The Naval Academy came to New England with a 14-1-2 record. Brown, a goaltender for Navy, has five wins to his credit and an average of 2.36 goals per game.

Sports fans and many friends of John (Red) Joyce were saddened by the recent death in Florida of the one-time Our Lady's High of Newton and Watham semi-pro pitching standout.

"Red" Joyce was a strong righthander who performed with such semi-pro headliners as Bobby Barr, Joey Donahue, Johnny Natoli and Lou Marcolina for Nipper Maher's Waltham City Club.

Joyce had resided in the Orlando area since his retirement. His sports background also included a lot of competition on various Newton YMCA teams.

Owen recalls athletic experiences at Newton

NEWTON — The best all-around athlete to ever come out of 'Newton High School' was on hand Tuesday night to pay tribute to the winter sports athletes of present-day Newton North High.

George Owen, 81, graduated from Newton High in 1919 and he spoke before more than 350 student-athletes, parents, admistrators, coaches and teachers at the 1983 Newton North Winter Sports Banquet held at the Nonantum Post 440.

Owen described his senior season at Newton. The football team had lost most of its players to graduation and needed some new blood. Coach Allie Dickinson asked Owen to come out for the team as a running back.

"The basic plan of the offense was to run behind our big tackle Mike Gullan, who went on to be an All-American at Brown University," said Owen. "He would push people out of the way and by the time we got there with the ball no one was around. We lost our first game to Everett, but went on to win the rest of the games that season."

In college, Owen distinguished himself by scoring the winning touchdown in the Harvard-Yale game in two consecutive years. He was also the captain of the baseball team.

Owen entered the professional athletic world in 1929 with the Boston Bruins. He had been playing amateur hockey and was asked to be a member of the Toronto Maple Leafs. However, Art Ross of the Bruins managed to snatch Owen away from the Leafs. Barring penalties, Owen would have to play the entire game.

"We were playing Toronto the night I joined the Bruins," said Owen. "I was on defense with Eddie Shore. A Toronto player put a move on me and went right by. Shore came over, however, and rode the man off the puck. That happened about 12 times during the game.

"With the score tied at 2-2, I broke up a play and broke in on the Toronto zone," said Owen. "I looked up to see where the defenseman were, but they left me to cover other men on the wing. I was in alone and beat the goalie for what turned out to be the winning goal. Luck has a lot do with how well you do."

After Owen's talk came the business of handing out the awards. More than 200 letters were awarded to the varsity performers. Nine Newton North athletes received their Senior Athletic Awards for earning five or more letters at Newton North.

Dave Barndt, Bruce Corwin, Timothy Feeney, Gerard McHugh, Paul Passavant, Joanne Rossetti, Raymond Russell, Jenniffer Slack and Tom Whiting all earned five letters in their careers at Newton North.

Tiger hockey Coach Don Crowley, who took his team to the Suburban League title and to an MIAA state tourney playoff victory, thanked the team for its efforts. "Lots of ingredients went into winning," Crowley said, "but the most important thing is that they are outstanding outstanding people."

"They were willing to accomplish goals that took us from where we were to where we went this year," Crowley said, referring to Newton North's rebound from a four-win season last year to the 1982-83 Suburban League title.

Basketball Coach Jerry Phillips said that if he were to look back at this year's team a few years down the road, he would remember many things–some obvious and some not so obvious.

Among the obvious, Phillips said he would remember the Tiger victories over perennial power Cambridge Rindge and Latin, arch-rival Waltham and then fourth-ranked Brockton as highlights. Also standing out is the victory over then-undefeated Newton South, which has gone on to the Division II finals.

Phillips also mentioned the satisfaction of working with players such as Mark Coppola (first-team Suburban League all-star) and John Humphrey (second team). "I'll remember them and their accomplishments," he said.

But most of all, he said, he will remember the non-obvious will stick out. "I'll remember the leadership and supportiveness of this team...the positive attitude towards each other."

He added, "Some players didn't play as much as they would like, but they still showed up every day and led to a cohesive unit."

"That's what I'll remember about this group, they were a cohesive team."

Head table guests included: Stephanie Meyer and John Humphrey, student representatives; Peter D'Amico, Head Custodian; George Jessup, Faculty Manager; Nancy Mann, Chairwoman of the Newton School Committee; Marya Levison, Principal of Newton North High School; Tom Williams, Athletic Director; Joan Fritschi, Coordinator of Physical Education and Athletics in Newton and special guest George Owen.

At Indy 500, son may challenge dad

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Al Unser Jr. observes his 21st birthday April 19. One month and 10 days later, he hopes to challenge his father in the Indianapolis 500.

House votes to raise Vt. drinking age

MONTPELIER, Vt. (UPI) — The House, yielding to complaints of persistent alcohol abuse in Vermont's high schools, Tuesday rejected arguments it was allowing "naked discrimination" and voted for the second consecutive year to raise the state's legal drinking age to 19.

The measure won a preliminary endorsement on a 92-53 rollcall vote after 90 minutes of emotional debate. It was slated for final House action Wednesday, then would move to the Senate.

It was endorsed under the specter of a second veto by Gov. Richard Snelling, who last year refused to sign a similar bill on grounds the increase denied a category of adults rights enjoyed by other Vermonters.

Opponents mounted similar arguments in their unsuccessful attempt to defeat the bill Tuesday, saying 18-year-olds can vote, enlist in the armed services and even be elected to the Legislature.

Denying them the right to buy and consume alcohol as well, opponents said, was a discriminatory, reactive approach to a societal alcohol abuse problem that needs more imaginative solutions.

"This represents naked discrimination," said Rep. Robert Harris, D-Windsor. "We are now being asked to treat adults in this state differently — and I underscore the word adults."

Rep. Lixi Fortna, R-Warren, agreed, arguing the bill would penalize young people for a problem for which they are not ultimately responsible.

"It is us who have failed," she said. "We have become a nation of indulgent and permissive parents ... We have forgotten to teach our children that with all their rights there is something called responsibility and self-discipline."

Supporters, however, argued the measure would effectively block the flow of alcohol to 13, 14 and 15-year-olds — who they said receive alcohol from older teenagers in what has become a growing problem in the state's schools.

And others said the bill would reduce the number of alcohol-related teenage highway deaths by correcting a legislative error made in the early 1970s — when lawmakers lowered the drinking age from 21 to 18.

"Did we lose an Einstein? Did we lose a Clara Barton, a Lincoln or a Lincoln or a Jefferson because of this law?" asked Rep. George Crosby, R-St. Johnsbury.

"If we did, for God's sake let's raise the drinking age."

The bill endorsed Tuesday was an amended version of a measure raising the legal drinking age from 18 to 21. Lawmakers also approved a provision exempting from the restriction on purchase and use of alcohol people who mark their 18th birthdays before the effective date of the measure.

But they soundly rejected an amendment allowing 18-year-olds in active duty in the armed services to legally buy and drink alcohol.

The rejection came despite admonitions from the amendment's sponsor — Rep. Hugh Gates, R-Franklin — that only "boot camp" or time can produce in teenagers "an elusive thing called maturity."

Accessory apartment idea supported

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — Neighborhood reaction to easing restrictions on accessory apartments in large homes is generally favorable, judging from remarks made during an open meeting between members of the aldermanic Housing Committee and Highlands residents.

The newly formed Housing Committee held its first neighborhood meeting Tuesday night, one of many they hope will reveal housing needs in the city and alternative ways to fill those needs.

Concerns voiced by Highlands residents echoed those brought out in a recent Human Rights Commission city-wide survey. While many residents said they thought the housing crunch could be diminished by allowing more accessory apartments to be built in homes, they also voiced concern with the increase in density.

For the most part, residents said they would insist that all building, fire and health codes were met in accessory dwellings. They also said that stipulating the houses be owner-occupied would act as a hedge against speculators and insure the buildings were well maintained.

Making sure that parking was available and not visible from the street was also cited as a major concern.

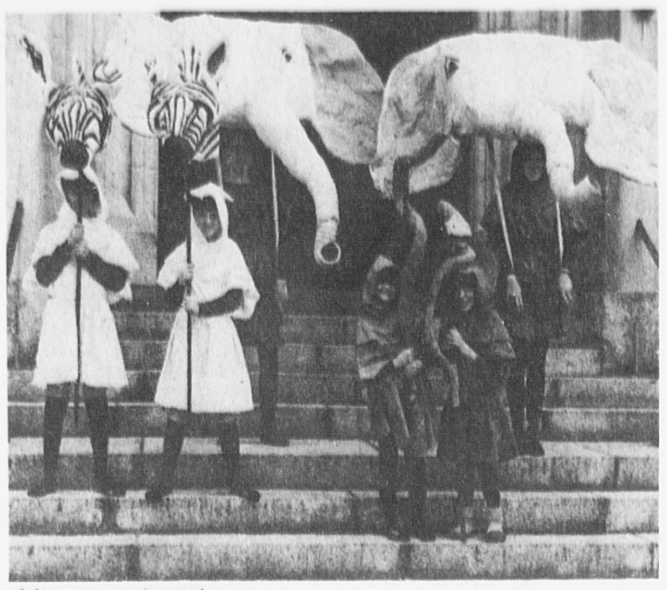

A city ordinance presently requires that number of dwellings in a house be determined by the size of the lot. The committee has proposed tying the number of dwellings to the interior floor space of the house instead.

Committee member Terry Morris, chairman of the aldermanic Land Use Committee, got more specific. He proposed that the city's zoning laws might be changed so that accessory dwellings might be added to homes built before 1920 which have more than 3,500 square feet of interior space.

Allen White, chairman of the Housing Committee of the Human Rights Commission, said accessory dwellings were a means of accomodating the city's older housing stock to the changing nature of the population.

White said the number of school children in the city decreased by 27 percent between 1970 and 1980.

Dr. Richard Young of Hyde Street cautioned the committee not to act in haste on zoning law changes. "You can't turn the clock back," he said. "If we change our neighborhoods, we've changed them for good."

Shoves customer, grabs cash, runs

UPPER FALLS — Police are searching for a man who grabbed $1,000 in cash from a teller's booth at Freedom Federal Savings Bank Wednesday and fled from the scene.

Newton police detectives with federal law enforcement officials are searching the suspect, described as a black male, who stole the cash from the bank located at 41 Needham St., police said.

Police said the suspect entered the bank shortly after noon and walked up to a teller's booth. He placed his hands on a female customer's shoulders and pushed her aside, police said. The suspect then reached over the counter, grabbed the cash which was wrapped in $10 bills and walked out of the bank as the stunned clerk and customer watched.

Police said no weapon was displayed during the incident and no one was reported hurt.

The suspect was described by police as six-feet-seven-inches tall, 180 pounds, in his mid-twenties and wearing a tan rain hat, blue waist length jacket and tinted eye glasses.

Brahms highlights arts fest

NEWTON — An all-Brahms concert by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and featuring BSO concertmaster Joseph Silverstein is one of more than 20 arts events planned for the city's first Festival of the Arts from April 23 through May 8.

The concert will be Friday, April 29 at Aquinas Junior College and includes a number of noted Newton musicians, from the Boston and Newton Symphonies as well as the All Newton Music School.

The Festival of the Arts, spearheaded by Arts in the Parks director Linda Plaut and Mayor Theodore Mann, will include art exhibits, a ball with the music of the Black Eagle Jazz Band, theatre performances and a variety of other music.

The all-Brahms concert will begin with "Trio in C Major, opus 87" and features violinist Harvey Siegel, cellist Martha Babcock and pianist Fredrick Wanger of Newton.

Wanger, joined by his wife, Jane, will perform "Four Hungarian Dances for Piano" and "Trio in E Flat Major, opus 40" with violinist Sheila Fiekowsky, and Daniel Katzen, horn, and David Deveau, piano.

Violinist Harvey Siegel joined the BSO in 1970 and has been a member of the National Symphony in Washington, Detroit and Montreal Symphonies.

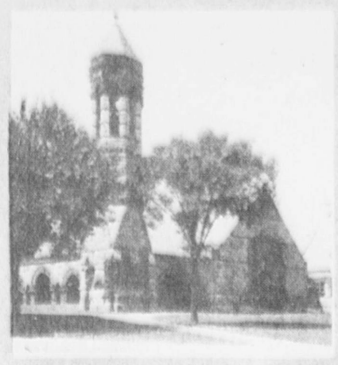

Cellist Babcock is the assistant principal cello of the BSO and principal cello in the Boston Pops.

The Wangers are known locally for their piano duets and list credits with the Boston Fine Arts Chamber Ensemble and concerts at Boston University, Brandeis University and Regis College.

Sheila Fiekowsky, second violin with the BSO, has been soloist with the Detroit Symphony, when she

From one court to another

By Richard Lodge

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — In 1967 R. Malcolm Graham hit almost 40 percent from the field for the Boston Celtics, banging elbows with some of the greats of the hardwood floor.

Three months ago he traded in his one-time dreams of the basketball court for a court of another kind in which burglars, muggers and car thieves parade onto center stage each day.

Graham, who turned 38 in February, was a promising guard out of New York University when the Celtics picked him up in 1967 and dressed him in green. The game was his life in those days. He had made headlines for his basketball talents at NYU and was looking foward to a decade of playing ball.

At the time Graham took a practical approach to the life of professional athletics, thinking he'd go into business in the off-season, trading off the name he had made as a basketball player. It would be an off-season career which would carry him after the days of glory at the Garden had faded.

In 1968 Mal Graham starting feeling tired on the court — much too tired for a second-year guard. Before the season was out — a season in which he shot only 23 percent and averaged less than two points per game — Graham was hospitalized for tests.

The diagnosis was sarcoid, a glandular illness which benched his Celtics career forever and thrust him into some serious rethinking about his future.

On Dec. 20, 1982, Malcolm Graham of Newton Highlands was sworn in as a judge in the Roxbury District Court. It was the culmination of a drastic career change, years of law school studies, a legal practice and a general realignment. Malcolm Graham, a judicial nominee in the fading days of the King administration, donned the black robes of the Massachusetts judiciary.

The career change, though not easy, came naturally to Graham.

"I had thought about the law for some time," Graham said last week from his chambers in Roxbury District Court, tucked behind District B Boston Police station.

"You could perform a service in the law," he said. "I felt the longer you were in the field the better you could become. And the legal profession is never out of fashion. It is always in demand."

As one of a handful of black judges picked during the four years of Edward King's term Graham took advantage of the appointment and sees his role as one integral to the shape of the tough Roxbury community.

The switch from a life of professional basketball, however, entailed almost two years of scouting after the illness was diagnosed. Red Auerbach, the Celtics' general manager, had seen Graham's talents on the court. When it became clear Graham

Crime drops 17% citywide

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

Police crime statistics say more than half the autos stolen in Newton are taken from lots at the Chestnut Hill Mall. Areas with the least housebreaks? Nonantum and Upper Falls. The most? Newton Centre and Newton Corner.

NEWTON — Overall crime dropped 17 percent in Newton in the year ending January, 1983 with fewer reported housebreaks and car thefts but more aggravated assaults and unarmed robberies.

Crime statistics broken down by months, types of crimes and totals for each of Newton's 12 villages were released by the Newton Police this week.

Police Chief William Quinn has contended the village statistics were useless to police in terms of crime prevention since the department operates according to patrol sectors which often cross village lines.

However, police crime statistician John Donovan, who compiled the data, conceded it can be helpful for residents who are more familiar with village boundaries to look at crime statistics for their villages. "There are reasons why certain crimes occur in certain areas," Donovan said.

Business and residential burglaries decreased by 33 percent in 1982 according to the statistics. Reported attempts have remained the same. Donovan surmises the decrease in burglaries is due in part to residents, because of the economic crunch, spending more time at home which deters intruders. They are also more security conscious, he said.

Donovan said Newton Centre and some other villages are more vulnerable to housebreaks because of their affluence, proximity to the MBTA station and accessible roads out of the city.

The statistics show most breaks occur in Newton Centre, Auburndale, West Newton, Newtonville and Newton Corner. Fewer housebreaks occur in Lower Falls, Oak Hill and Waban because they do not offer easy access out of the city, Donovan said.

While Chestnut Hill offers easy access out of the city and affluent households, the statistics show the number of breaks are not particularly high because, Donovan surmised, these homes feature better security systems. He said fewer breaks occur in Nonantum and Upper Falls because they are less affluent than some parts of the city.

Homes in the vicinity of Commonwealth Avenue in Newton Centre and Newton Corner were plagued by burglaries for six months during 1982. Three men were arrested and charged in November in connection with the breaks. The suspects were found guilty of charges of receiving stolen property and given suspended jail sentences.

Donovan said officials lacked sufficient evidence to bring charges of breaking and entering.

A fourth suspect, a Boston jewelry store owner, was also arrested by Boston police and charged with receiving stolen property. Police also recovered more than $300,000 worth of stolen jewelry, some of which was reclaimed by Newton residents, in connection with the arrests.

In some cases, burglars have had prior information about valuable items, such as Oriental rugs or art objects inside homes they burglarize. The number of these breaks are few compared with the overall number of housebreaks. But the value of the goods stolen in high.

Raw sewage in Lower Falls is 'dangerous'

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Raw sewage still is flowing near the Hamilton Grove elderly apartments on Grove Street in Newton Lower Falls.

"That's a dangerous situation," said Alderman Richard Bullwinkle pointing to the 15-foot-long, 5-foot-deep, open sewer trench three feet behind the elderly apartments.

For more than two weeks, an open trench has existed to keep sewage from backing up into the Hamilton Grove apartments, according to Housing Authority Director Frank Quinn.

A design flaw in the way the sewer pipe was laid for the housing units is the cause of the constant backups, said Quinn.

Foul odors permeate the air near the apartments and sewage is evident in the trench.

Quinn hopes something is done quickly and even went to the state authorities to get action on the problem, because Barry Canner of the Pay increase voted for aldermen, mayor

NEWTON — Future aldermen and mayors will collect hefty pay raises starting in the next elected term of office.

On Monday the aldermen voted themselves a 70 percent pay hike for 1984, and the mayor elected in 1986 will receive a 50 percent boost in pay, plus annual salary adjustments tied to 50 percent of the Consumer Price Index.

Aldermen take home $1,800 a year, plus a potential $1,200 in health insurance benefits. Mayor Theodore Mann brings in $37,500 plus other benefits such as use of a city car.

In January 1984, the aldermen will each make $3,000. Health insurance benefits may total as much as $195 a month, according to the independent calculations of Vincent Filippone, a Newton resident who has voiced concern over the pay raise question at several meetings.

The mayor's salary will jump to $55,000 in January 1986 (the next term of office) and also be infused with annual increases of 50 percent of the Consumer Price Index.

Aldermen voted 22 to 1, Aldermen Richard Bullwinkle against, in favor of the mayoral increase and 16 to 7 for their own raise.

Voting against the aldermanic hike were: Aldermen Bulwinkle, Wendell Bauckman, Cynthia Creem, Michael Malec, Carol Ann Shea, Ethel Sheehan and Verne Vance.

The first pay raise in five years for both the aldermen and the mayor, the salary boost will give the voters better managers, some aldermen believe, but others feel it will hike taxpayers' expenses.

"To go to $55,000 will be an outrage to the great middle class," said Bullwinkle, blasting the mayoral pay raise.

Alderman Lisle Baker countered Bullwinkle's argument with, "You get what you pay for in terms of city management."

Bullwinkle pointed out Mayor Mann can go away on vacation for three weeks and the city can run without him.

Through a wringer for $2.18

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — It took more than a year for him to prove he did not even have a 12-foot porch worthy of a Newton tax bill, but last week Newton Highlands resident Carl Winograd received notice of a $2.18 tax abatement.

Winograd was notified of the abatement Thursday and although he said he was pleased with the ruling, he added his concern over how business is being conducted in the city Assessing Department.

After a year of being tossed around by the waves of change that have been sweeping through the department since the citywide revaluation, he says he kept fighting for the abatement on principle.

"All that stonewalling and hogwash for $2.18 shows those people are political hacks," he said of the department that paid him so little attention for so long. "In business, those people wouldn't last five minutes."

He was assessed more than a year ago for a 12-foot porch that never existed at his home on Woodcliff Road. He says he notified the assessors of their mistake more than a year ago, and until Thursday, he had not seen the problem rectified.

Of his plans for the windfall that amounts to abatements of $2.18 for two years, Winograd laughed and said, "I'm going to give half of it to my wife and tell her to go out and have a wonderful time...just blow it all. I'm going to send the rest to the city's Conscience Fund. I feel so badly about depleting the city's treasury."

Winograd, a salesman for more than 30 years, wonders how many customers the city assessors would have if they were in business.

In his fight to prove the porch did not exist, as assessed, he said he had received nothing but "mumbo jumbo" and "legal baloney" from the Assessing Department. On all different occasions he had dealt with the assessors about their mistake they had repeatedly tried to throw "goofer dust" in his eyes, he said prior to the abatement being granted last week.

On one especially frustrating occasion, he said, he told "one fresh-mouthed kid" in the department that a vote to recall members of the Assessing Department might be appropriate. He was informed there was no such machinery for recall. "I'm a civil servant," he was told.

"I had to practically drag them down here," to look at their mistake, Winograd complained. "Then the young fellow says, 'Where's the porch?'

"So I told him, 'I don't know. Maybe the termites ate it,'" he said.

Last November, Winograd received notification his application for an abatement of his taxes had been denied. It was stamped with the signatures of the three assessors. They told him

Newton teacher wins fellowship in Japan

NEWTON — Joseph C. McInerney of Derby St., Newton, a 5th grade teacher at the McCarthy-Towne School in Acton, has been awarded a fellowship to visit Japan as a guest of the Japan Institute for Social and Economic Affairs (JISEA).

While in Japan, McInerney hopes to arrange a Japanese "sister classroom" exchange of a "Time Capsule 2000." According to his plan, McInerney's fifth grade class will prepare a "coffee can collection" of objects, pictures, taped sounds, music and letters.

In the year 2000, when the present day 5th graders are young adults, there will be a reunion and an opening of the capsule from Japan. McInerney is an innovative teacher who has received several distinguished science education awards.

Announcement of the award was made in San Francisco following evaluation of several hundred applications by a committee of the U.S. National Council for the Social Studies, co-sponsors of the program, designed to enhance the teaching of global and inter-cultural studies.

Board says Christina St. house warrants much closer inspection

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The little house on Christina Street, offered to the city as low-income housing and described by one alderman as "that junkbox house on the corner," warrants closer inspection before the city accepts it, the Board of Aldermen voted Monday night.

Concern over the quality of city-owned housing in general, and the Christina Street house in particular, led to an overwhelming voice vote to have the Administration and Planning Committee examine it one more time.

The house has been offered to the city by Alan Green, developer of a condominium complex called The Gables on Dedham Street, to comply with an ordinance that requires 10 percent of a development be given to the city for low-income housing.

Alderman Paul Coletti, who has been voicing his objections to the city's accepting the house for months, told his colleagues the house was unacceptable because it is dangerously close to the Charles River, and because it is so poorly constructed.

He said he has seen the undersized lot the house is built on "underwater, in my short lifetime." On another occasion, he called it "the lousiest piece of land in Ward 8."

Many of his colleagues who went on a tour of the city's housing last Saturday morning agreed with Coletti on the poor quality of the materials used in the house at 91 Christina St.

Alderman Richard McGrath even passed a piece of the siding around the aldermanic chambers for his colleagues to inspect. He said the siding was already absorbing moisture and falling off the newly built home.

After listing the flaws in the location and construction of the house, Coletti concluded, "Putting all these things together, it's not the kind of site the city wants to take over."

He further criticized a recent assessment of the house's value at $83,000 by the city's assessors. If the house is worth that much, Coletti said, the neighbors should be able to get more than $100,000 for theirs. "I would recommend they sell their homes and move. The neighbors are getting the shaft," he said.

"Let him (Green) put it on the market at $83,000 and see if he can get it," he said.

When it was pointed out that the house would be paid for with state and federal funds and the city would pay nothing for it, Coletti said, "But whose money is state money anyway? It's our money."

Alderman Richard Bullwinkle, who viewed the Christina St. house during last Saturday's tour, said, "At the very best, it might be considered a summer cottage. We shouldn't be touching this with a stick."

Bullwinkle said what really bothered him was that "someone" from the city had to inspect and approve the construction of the house. He recommended that the builder post a performance bond against future repairs, "So we're not spending our money fixing it up."

Alderman McGrath, who also saw the house on Saturday, said that accepting poorly constructed housing will detract from future housing in the city because maintenance costs will be so high.

He cited another house on Carter Street, which Green also built to meet low-income requirments for The Gables. He said the siding was coming off the house. "Nobody's even living in it yet, and it already needs maintenance," he commented.

Alderman Marcy Richmond said that the Christina Street house had caused so much concern among her constituents that she would like to see a public hearing on the matter.

Besides the allegedly poor construction of the Christina Street house, there was also a story about its beginnings that bothered several aldermen. Coletti said he was at a Conservation Commission meeting when a young man asked for special consideration to be allowed to build on the undersized lot, right on the river's floodplain.

Coletti told the aldermen the man had said he wanted a home in Newton for his family. That man, it turned out later, was an employee of Alan Green, and he had already agreed to sell the property to his employer when he first sought the necessary permits.

When alderman Cynthia Creem said she would like to hear testimony from Conservation Commission Secretary Helen Heyn as to just what happened at the meeting Coletti referred to, he said he would like very much to hear it also.

Since Green is a recent mayoral appointee to the Conservation Commission, Coletti said, she "would be speaking against her boss." He added that he had "some good questions for her to answer."

The aldermen rejected the suggestion that Heyn testify, but Harold Levinsky said he shared Coletti's concern for the circumstances surrounding the house's beginnings.

"It's important that things be done in an upfront manner," he said, adding that the developer's actions were "not morally appropriate.

"From what I've heard, I'm tempted to reject the house," Levinsky said.

Man dies in crash with ambulance

LOWER FALLS — A 26-year-old Newton man died Monday night when his Volkswagon was struck by an ambulance at the Washington Street and Route 128 intersection, police said.

Stephen P. Annefi of 14 Owatonna St., was pronounced dead at 9:26 p.m. at Newton-Wellesley Hospital. Annefi's car collided at 8:30 p.m. with an ambulance owned by Peter Poor Ambulance Service of Newburyport, according to police.

Police said the ambulance was traveling west bound on Washington Street when it struck the driver's side of the Volkswagon heading south on the Route 128 access road.

The ambulance was not enroute to an emergency, according to a spokesman at the Newton Traffic Bureau. Police said traffic violations were issued against the ambulance driver, whose name is being withheld, on charges of motor vehicle homicide, failing to conform to a red light and no registration in possession. The driver was not arrested, police said.

The ambulance was transporting a female patient, though police did not reveal where the ambulance was taking the woman. A female attendant was also inside the ambulance, reports said.

Newton firefighters with Engine 2 and Ladder 1 responded to the scene and used the jaws of life to open the Volkswagen doors and remove the victim from his car.

"It was hit pretty good. The side was caved in," said Assistant Fire Chief Bernard Goulding. He said the Volkswagen was in the middle of the road when firefighters arrived at the scene.

"It didn't take us five minutes to get him out," said Goulding,

The victim was transported by Chaulk Ambulance to Newton-Wellesley Hospital, less than half a mile from the accident scene.

Police said Newton Traffic Captain John Bartinelli is investigating the accident.

Winograd wins out in fight for an abatement his next step was to appeal to the state Appellate Tax Board.

He said he felt no inclination to spend the money and time going into Boston to appeal his assessment, so he kept at the assessors. "Finally, they said they would send papers for me to sign if I agreed not to make a court case out of it," he said.

"That was a red flag for me," he said. "After 30 years as a salesman, when I think something doesn't smell right, I walk away from it."

His walk apparently paid off when Chief Assessor Robert Palmer said he was personally taking care of the matter.

"He said nothing had a higher priority," Winograd said at the time. "He took it up like everyone had been stonewalling him. It was the first time he ever got hold of it, and he had no notes of past action on it."

Palmer said last week he had written a letter to Winograd. He added he did not usually handle such matters personally, but he realized Winograd had been put through the wringer for more than a year and thought he deserved the personal attention.

Palmer admitted the error had gotten lost in the shuffle of papers and personnel in his department. "There should have been more follow through on it," he said.

According to the chief assessor, who said he hoped an ongoing reorganization of his department would avoid such mistakes in the future, added that Winograd's problem was all but solved. "I think we were able to reach an agreement," he said.

Public housing flaws examined

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A weekend aldermanic tour of the city's public housing stock has shifted criticism regarding upkeep from the Housing Authority to the Newton Community Development Authority (NCDA).

The tour will probably mean future aldermanic debate to decide if the NCDA should have total power over the construction at the controversial site of the defunct St. Jean's School in Nonantum, now slated for over 40 units of public housing, according to aldermen on the tour.

Responding to citizen complaints about poor management of public housing Aldermen Bruce Carmichael and Rodney Barker scheduled a tour with five other aldermen to review a number of city housing projects.

They found the older units well-maintained, but new projects such as the Hamilton Grove apartments in Newton Lower Falls had design defects which cause maintenance headaches, officials said.

"NCDA has a lot to answer for and it seems to be the less than perfect agency for developing housing," said Alderman Richard McGrath.

Units built in the mid-1960s under the direction of then-chairman of the Housing Authority William Carmen, were found to be in good condition.

But units built after 1976, when the power of the Housing Authority over construction shifted to the NCDA (an agency created by an act of the state legislature) were found to be in deteriorating condition by the aldermen.

The two-year-old Hamilton Grove apartments have design flaws, according to City Housing Director Frank Quinn. Tenants on the second floor of the $1.5 million renovation project must wrestle to open skylights, which are their only source of fresh air.

Residents of the second floor said the apartments are hot in the summer and because of the odd shape of the skylights, air conditioners will not fit in the windows.

In the utility room of the Hamilton Grove project, thousands of dollars in public funds were wasted to install a huge utility panel for separate electric meters, officials said.

"It really is something putting in electric panels for meters when they knew the city would pick up the electric costs for the elderly," said Housing Authority Board Member Anthony Salvucci.

Salvucci said it probably cost thousands to install the panels and added the only way to justify the costs is if the city had planned to charge the elderly tenants for electricity.

The tour included a review of a new Christina Street home, built by Gables condominium complex developer Alan Green to satisfy a city ordinance requiring 10 percent of new housing be committed to low- and moderate-income tenants.

After viewing it, many aldermen on the tour said they will never approve it for public housing.

Another home built by Green on Carter Street to meet the city housing ordinance is said by some officials to be in even poorer condition than the Christina Street home.

"These are slums not housing," said housing chief Quinn in response to the homes on Christina and Carter Streets, which he said he does not want because they will be too costly to maintain.

Masonite siding is buckling and causing the nails holding the siding to pull out on the Carter Street dwelling.

"We don't want the building until it's made right and we have a guarantee bond on the siding," said Jonathan Hacker, assistant housing director.

Barry Canner, head of the NCDA and the city's planning department, wants the building accepted by April 6, according to Hacker.

To prevent costly design flaws in city housing that later add up in terms of maintenance costs, Quinn wants more say over how the buildings are constructed.

The city's Housing Authority is required to maintain its buildings and provide quality service for Newton's poor and elderly, but Quinn says it is difficult if the building's design is flawed or fails to anticipate the needs of elderly tenants.

Quinn would like to have full control over the St. Jean's school construction of approximately 40 units of mixed housing. The NCDA now has full planning power over the controversial housing site.

"Give us St. Jean's to do with a fixed amount of money and we'll get it done without the extra maintenance costs these newer buildings have caused us," said Quinn.

Crime drops in most corners of city

For example, an expensive collection of ivory "netsukes" which the Japanese used as tobacco holders, were stolen during a break into a Newton Centre home last year.

The professional burglars take with them specific packaging materials to wrap the items they plan to steal and often disconnect the homes' elaborate security alarm systems.

Motor vehicles thefts have decreased about 6 percent, with 405 reported thefts in 1982. More than half the cars stolen in Newton are taken from the garage and outdoor parking lots at the Chestnut Hill Mall, Donovan said.

"It's a hard area to patrol," Donovan said of the mall area.

The Riverside and Woodland MBTA stations are also particularly vunerable to auto thefts.

The recovery rate of stolen motor vehicles is greater than 50 percent, with about a third recovered outside the city, generally in Boston. About two thirds are recovered in Newton.

Thefts from motor vehicles tend to be "spread out" more throughout the city, Donovan said.

Rape and armed robbery reportedly decreased in the last year. Three rapes were reported in Newton, one of which occurred outside the Marriott Hotel where police said a young Waltham woman was beaten and raped in the brush area surrounding the hotel parking lot.

Armed robbery, decreased from 31 to 26 reported incidents. Reports of unarmed robbery increased slightly from 16 to 18 reported incidences.

One homicide ocurred last summer which involved a Legal Seafoods restaurant employee charged with killing a fellow employee. The case is pending in Superior Court.

The amount of currency and notes reported stolen from January, 1982 through February 1983 is $219,409. Less than half, or $67,774 of that sum was recovered.

Most of the recovered cash, $65,842, had been stolen and quickly recovered after a former cleaning man robbed the Pioneer Financial Bank in Newton Lower falls last October.

The value of jewelry and precious stones stolen from January 1982 through February, 1983 equaled $560,287 and $28,219 of that sum was reported recovered.

Larcency - shoplifting and pickpockets - decreased by 12 percent, according to the statistics. Donovan said the decrease is a result of better store security. The number of people arrested on shoplifting charges nearly equals the number of reported thefts.

Drunk driving arrests have increased to 241 in 1982. Half of those arrested were aged 20-30 and 29 were under 20 years old.

Hitchhiker raped

NEWTON CENTRE — A Newton girl hitchhiking one night last week on Centre Street was picked up by a young white male who raped her near the former Weeks Junior High School, police said Wednesday.

Police said the girl was hitchhiking at Centre Street and Commonwealth Avenue shortly before 7 p.m. last Tuesday when a man in his late teens picked her up. Police said the suspect was driving a blue or tan colored car.

Police said there was no further description of the car or the rapist and revealed no more information about the incident.

A correcting law

Last week women's groups around the world took time to celebrate and study women's contributions in history and their current standing in society.

At the same time the state legislature was looking at a bill, called the "comparable worth bill," aimed at correcting a 41 cent discrepancy between what men and women are paid for equal work on the public payroll in Massachusetts.

The bill, which has received a favorable response, is aimed at examining each class of positions in state service and rating them according to the skills required and the responsibilities they entail. In light of studies which indicate women are paid 59 cents for every dollar paid men in the workforce, the bill is long overdue.

As one of the bill's co-sponsors, Rep. David Cohen of Newton said, "The State Equal Rights Amendment promised to end discrimination based on sex. Enactment of a 'comparable worth law' will bring this promise one step closer to fulfillment."

Comparable work means equal pay for equal work and the legislation is focused on establishing those equal rates of pay.

Comparable worth does not mean giving any one group of people special consideration. It means simply being fair to everyone.

Binding contract

Parents of Newton North High students should be receiving a letter in the next week or so which makes them an offer they can't refuse.

The letter, from Health Coordinator Frank Spitzer, outlines the school's spring campaign to prevent teenage drinking and driving. The campaign will use films, speakers, discussions and literature during the second week of May to bring the serious problem of teenage drinking into the open.

Spitzer's letter also bears a "contract" on the back which parents and their children should discuss. The contract is an agreement, made beforehand, that if a teen calls home, at any hour, from any place, and says he or she has had too much to drink, the parents will pick him or her up, no questions asked.

The idea behind the contract is that if offers a starting point for kids and their parents to talk about something which is often simply too hard to discuss. And the contract bears a line to be signed by parents with an agreement similar to that of the teenager — if a parent has had too much to drink he or she will "seek safe sober transportation home."

When you get a contract and letter in the mail, don't take it lightly. It could be a lifesaver.

Urges look at standards

To the editor;

(The following is an open letter to Massachusetts Department of Education Commissioner John H. Lawson.)

Dear Commissioner Lawson;

I am writing in response to an article which appeared in The Boston Globe Feb. 28. Muriel Cohen described your opposition to suggested changes by the Board of Regents in state college admissions standards.

You are quoted as saying that "inequities in public support of public schools... have resulted in very different courses of preparation for students in different cities and towns."

Moreover, these inequities fall particularly heavily on students whose economic, racial and linguistic background or special handicaps require special educational services.

You seem to fear that some school districts will not be able to offer preparation adequate to meet these standards for every student and that many will be denied access to state colleges because of this.

School systems, you suggest according to the article, will be forced to spend more on "college-bound students and consequently less on those not preparing for college."

I applaud your concern, which I noted on several occasions, for equity in public education. As a member of the Newton School Committee I have been waging my own battle on this particular issue for many years.

But I am concerned that in your devotion to equity and opposition to increasing the standards for college admission, you are inadvertently supporting one of the fundamental sources of social and economic inequity in American society, to wit, the distinction in education between those bound for college and those not preparing for college.

It is clear to most observors, professional and lay, that a college education is one of the most important devices for social and economic mobility. Moreover, the different positions on the ladder of prestige, wealth and power are achieved not simply because some have gone to college (with all that entails) but also because long before college these students were educated differently.

Of course, some students are not able to do college work or what we call college preparatory work in high school. But these are a limited number. Let me assure you as a teacher at one of the most prestigious and selective institutions, that the range of ability among college students is so wide as to eradicate ability as the distinguishing variable between college bound and non-college bound students.

The distinction between these students is too frequently a class issue, whether we like it or not. Ability and intelligence aside, the difference is frequently one of motivation, interest, support and social reference. That makes the consquent social stratification very largely an educational and pedagogical problem.

If our high schools structure their curricula to teach different things (subjects, ideas, concepts, skills) to different groups of students, depending upon whether or not they are going to college, we are creating a cognitively stratified society long before they pass through the filter of higher education (which itself is stratified, as we know).

Of course, different students respond to different approaches and need to be taught differently with varying styles of pedagogy, motivation and organization. But need they be taught different subjects if they are to participate collectively in one society?

Is there not some common core of concepts, skills and, dare I say it, facts, that need to be known in order to participate effectively as a citizen? And can one really say that the subjects which the Board of Regents is suggesting be required for admission to college (biology, algebra and Spanish) are not equally appropriate for ANY citizen in 1980s America?

Your concern for the reduced resources of school systems is well placed, but school systems would do well to pay more attention to the quality of the concepts and analytical skills they teach than to the variety of particular subjects they offer.

More letters, p. 5

Thus great savings could be made and spent upon upgrading the quality of the classroom experience, including money for algebra, biology and Spanish for all children, not some.

I flatly challenge the belief that different children have to be taught different subjects because they have different interests. Interests are learned. If school systems will not exercise the leadership to develop interests in intellectual matters, they will have no one to blame but themselves if we produce an illiterate population.

Let me describe an eighth-grade heterogeneously grouped, untracked classroom in Newton.

The topic for the day is the diagramming of sentences with special attention to adverbs. The grammar is learned within pieces of fantastical literature. But in this classroom, some children are reading abridged versions of a classic novel, some are reading the original and some are reading the original novel and the author's diaries, themes and issues of the literature together.

They are learning their grammatical skills within a common one of cultural terms.

Directly above Muriel Cohen's article was a story about Senator Tsongas' town meeting in Natick. During the meeting a constituent asked the senator why he had not responded to a request for help with a problem with the military.

The speaker stated that he was "a college sophomore and reasonably intelligent.

"And," he asked, "if he couldn't get a response from Tsongas, they how could constituents with less resources get help?"

The senator assured the speaker that he would respond. The young man's query demonstrates the force of what I am suggesting.

If we continue to differentiate the high school curriculum for college and non-college bound students, we will be intentionally creating citizens of lesser resources.

I cannot believe that a man of your dedication to equity would want to do this.

I urge you to reconsider your approach to both the college admissions standards and to high school graduation requirements as well.

No 'grand living'

To the editor;

(The following is an open letter to Boston Globe writer Anthony Yudis concering a recent article on the Fisher Hill Estates in Brookline.)

Dear Mr. Yudis;

After reading your article on grand living on a grand scale at the Fisher Hill Estates in Brookline, I felt very sick to my stomach.

With over 20 million people in our country unemployed, and perhaps another 3 million who have given up looking for work, your writing of $300,000 to $588,000 for a home must be very meaningful to them.

Try showing this article to the many people standing in line at the Newton-Waltham unemployment office, collecting their unemployment checks, and to the elderly of Brookline who are being forced to move because of condo conversion.

Your insensitivity to your fellow man is beyond my comprehension, and to be a tool of the promoter adds very little status to the reputation of The Boston Globe.

Graphically speaking

Fishy facts; victorious gardening

What's ailing the alewives?

The Charles River Watershed Association newsletter Streamer, published out of CRWA's Auburndale office, always contains choice tidbits for those trying to keep up with Charles River activities.

This month's Streamer notes the CRWA's contention that alewives in the Charles deserve "equal protection under the law." And who can argue with that? Funny you should ask.

Quoth the Streamer: "There have been comments of late from some fish officials that it may not be worth the money to continue with the fishway program unless/until it is certain that the shad restoration will work."

The problem rests in moves currently pondered to remove impediments to the shad (and alewife) upstream migration.

The laws governing such fishy subjects, according to CRWA, say anyone who impedes the migration must provide artificial (artifishal??) passage. The law, CRWA notes indignantly, does not specify shad.

"The alewives are at least as much a part of the Charles River ecosystem as shad," notes the Streamer. "They were the faithful who hung around when things got tough, while the shad abandoned the Charles. We support all critters' right of passage."

We could not resist.

Sofa, so good?

The Multi-Service Center in Newton Centre seems to have run out of comfortable places to sit.

So now the center is looking for a donation of a sofa, in good condition, for its emergency shelter program for adolescents.

Nothing fancy, mind you, but the center would be grateful. If you can help give them a call at 244-4802.

As the plot thickens

The city's Department of Public Works is again sponsoring the Victory Garden program, with registration running through March 31. Residents who had plots last year and want to continue in 1983 can re-register through that date.

Newcomers to the local green scene can register starting the week of April 11. The fee is $5 for each 10 by 20 foot plot.

For more information call Patricia Sweeney at 552-7180, Monday through Friday during work hours.

Time to start plotting for fresh green beans.

Upper Falls grey matter

Historic Echo Bridge spanning the Charles River in Newton Upper Falls has taken a bit of abuse and neglect over the years, most notably from vandals armed with spray paint cans and pea-sized brains.

But someone has come to the rescue, covering over the less-than-witty sayings, Joe loves Sally and the like, with gunboat grey paint.

The columns supporting the towering span are now clean for a time but we can only imagine there are legions of vandals just waiting to deface the old bridge.

May they be caught with the goods in hand.

A most energetic response

Residents of Newton are apparently warm to the idea of attic insulation to save energy, judging from the response by local people to the program unveiled recently by Mass-Save and the Newton Housewarming Group.

A press release from Mass-Save, which is sponsored by a group of utility companies, says 500 Newton residents have signed up for home energy audits and work orders for attic insultation specifications.

The energy saving program, which hearty backing from City Hall, gives price reductions on attic insulation as a result of a group bidding process. Cheaper by the dozen, so to speak.

Word from The Hill

Congressman Barney Frank may have dropped out of sight a bit since the election but he's still working away down in Washington, if one can judge from the mail received.

Frank recently linked up with over 100 colleagues in the House in introducing the Economic Equity Act of 1983, a bill designed to eliminate discrimination against women in a wide range of existing laws.

"We have an obligation in Congress to pass laws that are fair to both men and women," Frank said in a press release last week. "The Economic Equity Act addresses many of the unfair laws now on the books."

In fairness to the folks toiling on the local level, State Rep. David Cohen of Newton spoke in favor of a similar bill last week which would guarantee equal pay for men and women for similar public jobs in this state.

Both pieces of legislation have come at a most opportune time since last week marked International Women's Day.

Speaks against high tech pros in war business

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

OAK HILL — High-technology professionals in defense-related jobs really are contributing nothing to national security and their highly specialized and secretive work will be detrimental to their careers, Warren Davis told South High School students last week.

Davis is the founder of High Technology Professionals for Peace, a Cambridge-based organization that operates a non-profit employment agency which counsels and helps people find nondefense-related jobs.

Davis, a physicist and consultant, said 60 percent of all engineers and science professionals in the U.S. work, at one time or another, on defense projects.

Davis, whose address was sponsored by the school's Enrichment Program, said he wanted to speak with students because they are likely to become part of the defense work force and as college students they will be "vigorously recruited" for military-related jobs.

Davis conceded that weapons research typically pays more than other technological jobs. He added that weapons research is usually "at the cutting edge of new technology and that can be a very exciting thing."

However there are disadvantages for those professionals because they are committed to secrecy about their work.

As a result their work can not be published in professional journals, he said. They are unable to compare information with fellow workers or know what their colleagues are doing, he said. These professionals also become experts in very specialized areas that are useless in private industry, Davis added.

Cutting the defense budget does not have to mean a lack of jobs for high technology workers, Davis said. The money government spends on defense, an estimated $1.6 trillion over the next six years, should be used for human services, such as medical research, Davis said. Companies having defense contracts "will be just as happy making money other ways," he said.

The employment agency Davis founded alerts professionals to the drawbacks of defense-related jobs and also facilitates a support group where people discuss the ethics of defense projects.

One South student said perhaps some workers sincerely believe they are contributing to national defense through their jobs, while others simply need the work.

Davis said people are not being defended by nuclear weapons, particularly since the developement of intercontinental ballistic missiles.

He illustrated for students the capabilities of the two superpowers, saying the U.S. has 9,760 strategic warheads to the Soviet Union's 6,265 warheads. If an all-out attack were launched on the U.S., he said, no spot in the country would be more than 11 miles from a detonation point.

Nuclear weapons, Davis further said, have done nothing to deter some 200 conflicts which have occurred in the last 40 years.

"Nuclear arms are useless for this purpose," he said.

Davis said military research continues because the government is waiting for the "breakthrough" which will bring the Soviet Union "trembling to its knees" and assures the "destruction of the Soviet Union."

Davis described the military's retaliatory plans in the event of an attack as "insane." An attack would immediately be launched on the Soviet Union even before the military knows the Soviets are the ones who are attacking, he said. During crisis with the Soviet Union, he said, the U.S. would evacuate its cities, which would lead the Soviets to believe the U.S. is preparing for an attack and "they'd launch an attack because they think we're going to launch an attack."

Students should study the history of the arms race and not only focus on current technical arguments, Davis said.

"The arms race is a political process not a military game ... a failed political process," Davis said.

Davis has a Ph.D. in gravitation physics and worked for 10 years in the defense industry because he believed "we were gaining security" with nuclear weapons. Davis said he left defense work when he realized the U.S. was less secure with nuclear weapons.

"Any weapon ever made has eventually been used," he said, "I'm for reasonable defense," Davis said, "I don't know what a reasonable number is."

Committee should crack down

To the editor;

We citizens are informed by the local press that the Newton School Committee is indignant at the minor constraints of the proposed total school budget figure demanded by the city.

There is and has been for some years an excellent and obvious way for the committee to add an easy half million dollars to the current budget.

We hesitate to propose this source as it involves Newton's most closely guarded closet secret. The very word is taboo, a real no-no and is even thus observed by the local papers. If given publicity the exposure of the widespread and shocking vandalism in the school system might cause a citywide furor and cast a dark shadow on the validity of the old myth, namely, "the Newton Schools are second to none."

The records show that the last available figure, 1978, before the tacit press ban, the crushing toll for a single year on the broken backs of our captive struggling taxpayers was $500,000. The main reason for the remarkably lower incidence of vandalism in the private school sector, Protestant, Catholic or Jewish, is the no-nonsense attitude of supervision. Like that of the United States Marine Corps, "Shape up or ship out."

In general our public school faculties are composed of competent and dedicated teachers but the system is floundering and may collapse from its own built in inadequacies.

It is struggling to survive in a moral and ethical vacuum with no visible values and an alarming number of students are fully awre of this and lose no opportunity to run amuck in their lack of respect for weak, inadequate and vacillating institutions.

The phrase "quality education" is bandied about in public education circles and people are weary to death of hearing it. School committees have seized upon this vague undefinable slogan and have emblazoned it upon their banners in a great shoulder-to-shoulder march to the educational "promised land."

We need basics not banalities; conscience before computers; discipline before divertisement; and homework before hamburgers.

The hour is late. We are not at the crossroads. The system can be restored but not with empty platitudes, mountains of meaningless statistics and strident clamoring for more and more money from stricken taxpayers.

If the Newton School Committee can not or will not march down the right road to sound, sensible and morally responsible education then now is the time for them to discard their halos and order the shiny bronze plaques to mark the sites where these formerly proud schools once stood.

Reader to Governor Dukakis: less 'Parker House judges'

To the editor;

(The following is a letter to Governor Michael Dukakis.)

Rhetoric and support for the "New war on violent crime" should not be at the exclusion of insidious forms of corruption at the top, trickling down as the root cause of crime:

1) The Ward Commission found the buying and selling of judicial appointments. We are entitled to know who bought what from whom.

2) Attorneys (past, present and future) on judicial nominating/selection commissioners are in conflict of interests when practicing law before those whose appointments they supported.

It creates IOUs (see Thomas D. Burns, Burns & Levinson's blatant advertising of judicial clout in Martindale & Hubbard).

3) The further exclusion of non-lawyer non-establishment citizens from public participation in juidicial selection, lawyer and judicial disciplinary boards is clearly and plainly wrong. Professions cannot be expected to honestly and adequately police themselves where self interest is at stake.

The failure of the Board of Bar Overseers to take action against Barry Gerstein underscores that failure of selfpolicing. In like fashion, judicial reluctance to adequately disclose prior associations and connections when their friends appear before them is a scandal waiting to erupt.

4) "Bononism," the art of the selective trying of sensitive cases before the "right judge" is alive and well in the Superior Court system.

We need less, not more, "Parker House Judges" with their dog and pony shows providing public welfare assistance for lawyers by ping-ponging cases into the appeals courts, thereby generating fees at the expense of economy to the judicial system.

She's saddened by 'pro-choice' view

To the editor;

On March 3 I was saddened to read that Rep. Susan Schur believes that there should be a right of choice to end my life.

I use a wheelchair because, when I was born, the doctor injured my spinal cord. Upon finding this out, Rep. Schur believes that my parents should have had the choice to end my life, to have doctors remove life support systems.

The doctors said I would be a vegetable. My parents, seeing it in my eyes, realized that it was not their choice, but their obligation to adhere to my choice — life.

I have had eight operations. I graduated from college. I am the mother of a five-month-old girl. (Pro-choice doctors recommended that I curtail my girl's life through abortion.)

Rep. Schur, I am alive and well, despite your belief that my parents and others should have the choice to restrict my right to choose life.

Is it no wonder that she shows little respect for her own life by smoking, and then not showing respect for non-smoker's choice for clean air by blowing smoke in our faces. It's time to form a pro-choice group — to choose a new representative.

Look closer at pay question

To the editor;

(The following is an open letter to Mayor Theodore Mann and the Board of Aldermen.)

Please don't blame the "messenger" (me) for telling you the mood of the unvociferous public now and a couple of years ago.

By far most of those polled, or talked to then and now, have opposed most or all of any proposed pay increase for you, and it behooves you to take that more seriously into account.

I personally do not - and never did - take the position that the offices or incumbents involved are not worth the proposed pay levels.

However, in context, I do urge your voluntary statesmanship in compliance with these overriding points:

1. Adding over $20,000 in one jump to the present $37,500 of mayoral pay looks excessive, Consumer Price index notwithstanding. If you must go beyond public sentiment, $10,000 or so, and no automatic increases might be a lot easier to accept.

An added raise in midterm could also be prevoted. A corresponding cut (consolidation) should be considered in other executive/administrative staff.

2. You are not just proposing an increase in aldermanic stipend from $1,800 to $3,000 plus over $2,300 in fringe benefits available in each case.

You are changing from the concept of offsetting service-related expenses, to that of some payment as reward for services that have been on a volunteer basis throughout our city's history. A controlling referendum would seem appropriate.

I have not yet taken a formal vote of our directors relying, rather, on the merits of the issues raised and my informal poll.

Judge takes new bench

was facing an unplanned career change, Auerbach created the scouting position — a job which had not existed before, or since, Graham left the team.

"It became clear to me I wasn't going to play again unless I had some considerable period of rest," he said. And scouting was not a bad life. "I got to travel around and maintain contact with the club. And watching basketball isn't the hardest thing in the world to do."

But the lifestyle of donning the Celtic green several nights each week was over, he realized.

"It was really a marvelous lifestyle," he said last week. "You are well paid. You travel all over the world to some fantastic cities. And when you are put back to step one, there's a lot of trauma associated with it."

So Graham shifted gears, worked through Boston College Law School, married his wife Joyce, who had been a cheerleader at NYU games, and settled into a law practice in Boston.

Law school, though not easy, was a natural step for Graham.

"With the frustration of ending one career, and with the tremendous amount of energy I had at the time, I knew I could do it," he said. "But law school is a very serious grind."

After several years with the firm of Budd, Reilly & Wiley on Winter Street, Graham took the Roxbury District Court appointment. He has been on the bench only since the first of the year but he sees a docket of cases each morning which reads like a city police log.

Handling the morning assignment session in which defendants are shuttled to various courtrooms or kept before Graham, he rattles off a list of a day's cases.

"Larceny, assault and battery, unlawful possession of a handgun — that's a mandatory one year — breaking and entering in the nighttime, a couple of operating uninsured and under the influence, that's not an atypical day.

"I spend as much time as necessary with each and every case," he said. "We get an awful lot of cases during the course of a week which means we affect the lives of people in the community an awful lot of times in the year.

"I think the work judges do, especially in a busy court, can have a very important impact on the community," Graham said. "The general perception of how a court operates has a substantial impact on the way the community sees the legal system."

In spite of a lack of Boston Celtic memorabilia one might expect on the walls of the judge's chambers, Graham's life still holds a big place for the Boston green machine when the day's court cases are done.

A season ticket holder, Graham said, "The Celtics are such a big part of my life I'll always be interested in them.

"There were so many characters," he recalled last week. "I played with (John) Havlicek and (Bill) Russell, the greatest player to ever play the game.

"I played with Sam Jones, who had to be the greatest shooter. And Red Auerbach was the best sports executive in the history of professional sports."

Malcolm Graham's Celtics career lasted only two years before it was cut short by his illness. But the ideals he saw as a member of the Boston squad have followed him through the years.

"I think the Celtics stand for something: pride dedication, talent. I feel very fortunate at having been a part of that organization with all of those good qualities which team sports should have," he said.

Sewage problem eyed

Newton Community Development Authority was not returning Quinn's calls on the matter, he said.

When asked if the sewage near the Hamilton Grove apartments presents a health hazard Health Commissioner Bernice Joyal said, "Not as long as long it is cleaned up; it shouldn't be a health hazard."

Another area where raw sewage flowed this weekend was off Needham Street.

"The sewage flows right into the river," said Alderman Richard McGrath, pointing at human waste and toilet tissue making a path into the Charles River from a sewer cover behind New England Telephone near Christina Street, across the river from Newton's water works flooding bowls.

Chiropractic for Health

by Dr. David G. Rutman, Chiropractor

"MIRACLES"

It is only a small percentage of chiropractic patients that obtain immediate and total improvement from a single chiropractic adjustment. These "miracles" are the exception. Realistically, the efficacy of treatment is predicated on five factors, one of which is age. The degree to which an ailment or disease has progressed must also be taken into account. The chiropractor also considers the reserve vitality in your body which actually does the work of "healing". The time allowed for recovery is important as is the ability of the chiropractor. Keeping these factors in mind, the patient should concern himself with steadily improved health rather than a rigid timetable for recovery.

Just as periodic chiropractic exams can serve as a preventative measure so, at times, is it necessary for more than a single application to deal with an existing problem. A thorough analysis of your problem will allow DR. DAVID G. RUTMAN, CHIROPRACTOR, 4593 Washington St., Roslindale, to determine the source of your problem and the steps necessary to correct such a situation. Call us today so that we may serve you. Tel. 323-5022. VISA & MasterCard accepted. Hours by appt. including 3 eves. a week.

CHIRO TIP

Instead of the "fast-food" approach to health problems, consider the long-term benefits of body healing.

Newton's gourmet style setter

NEWTON — Newton residents no longer have to travel across the ocean to learn the delicacies of French cooking. Rather, they can now learn the subject from Newton's "Magic Rabbit," more commonly known as Peggy Glass of Auburndale.

A mother, former graphic artist and currently cooking instructor for Newton Community Schools, her specialty, French provincial cooking, was featured in the February issue of the culinary arts magazine, "Bon Appetit."

Since the issue rolled off the presses, Glass has received inquiries and correspondence from across the country.

"It's very exciting," she said. "I've been getting letters from Iowa, Texas, California and Michigan. It's very gratifying to hear from people so far away."

Interest in cooking for this energetic instructor began in the early 70's when she lived in the San Francisco area. Intrigued with various ethnic groups, Glass soon developed an appreciation for French, Moroccan and Italian cuisine. Experimenting with many different dishes, she soon designed a cookbook to help children learn the joys of preparing and eating new foods.

Upon moving to Newton in 1976, Glass began to teach various cooking courses for Newton Community Schools, concentrating on sandwhich-making and breadbaking for teenagers.

"I started out teaching as a way to get to know others in the community. From that, everything has really taken off, but I still think of myself as a teacher being in my kitchen and doing what I enjoy."

As Glass' interest in new culinary techniques developed, a growing skill in French provincial cooking was rewarded by a scholarship to study with Madeline Kamman of the Modern Gourmet Elite Cooking Schoool. Upon working with the French chef, Glass developed several unique recipes which highlighted French provincial cooking.

In October of 1981, Kamman brought Glass to the attention of the "Bon Appetit" staff and soon the Newton resident was contacted by the magazine. Glass notes that the article production was an event in itself.

"Testers taste the food. Stylists work on it. Art editors comment on platters, colors and presentations. Finally, everything is set."

Glass notes that the staff from "Bon Appetit" spent three days at the house — writing, arranging and taking pictures. "There were cables running throughout the house and an incredible amount of lighting...it was very exciting.

"I made the food three times," she continued. After it was over, I ivited all my neighbors to eat everything — to come over with a bottle of wine and a paper plate."

After the excitment of such an article, what are her plans? This semester, she is offering a one-session event for Community Schools entitled, "The Magic Rabbit Shows Off!" Demonstrated in Peggy's new kitchen, the three-hour course will discuss new French provincial recipes and techniques. Glass will also offer a 4-5 day cooking course for out fo town people this summer.

As much coverage as Glass receives, it seems a sure bet that she will continue to share her talents with fellow Newton residents.

"Being involved like this has been very rewarding," states Glass firmly. "It's very important to me to be a part of this community and to feel I contribute something."

For more information on her cooking classes, call 552-7117.

41 miles afloat in upcoming Run of Charles

AUBURNDALE — The Run of the Charles, an annual day of canoe racing and touring stretching some 41 miles from the Route 27 bridge in Medfield to the waters off Cambridge, is planned for Sunday, April 24.

The event, which combines a 41-mile and 24-mile race for canoeists and kayakers, is sponsored by the Auburndale-based Charles River Watershed Association.

CRWA President Rita Barron said last week entries are already rolling in for the event, in spite of possible high water along the 80-mile river.

"It's a nightmare planning it but it's a lot of fun setting it up and the response so far has been excellent," Barron said.

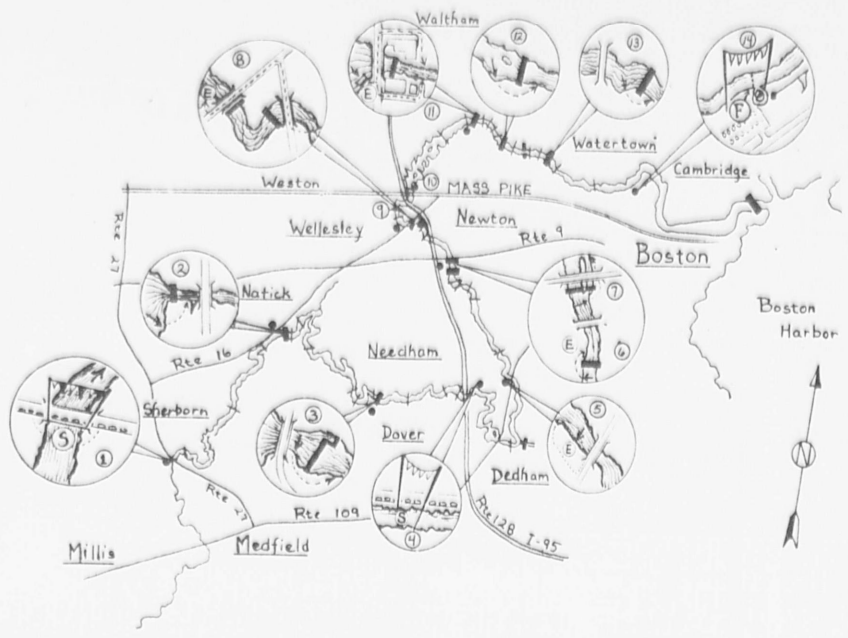

Included in the day's activities will be a 24-mile relay race for paddlers who prefer sharing the work and two guided tours for those who shy away from racing competition but who want to enjoy a few leisurely hours on the river, Barron said.

The 41-mile event starts on the Medfield-Sherborn line while the 24-mile race begins at Great Plain Avenue on the Needham-Dedham line. For those heading out on the Charles for the 41-mile competition the obstacles along the way through 11 communities include eight portages around dams and some stretches of fast water with some submerged rocks.

Locally the portages, which will be well marked and supervised to avoid mishaps, include the Silk Mill Dam under Echo Bridge (a 200-yard trek); the Metropolitan Circular Dam and Route 9 (some 100 yards of carrying); the Cordingly Dam and the Finlay Dam in Lower Falls (half a mile portage); and the Moody Street Bridge and dam in Waltham, (a portage of 200 yards).

Awards for first-place winners in each racing class or subclass will be presented by special guests at a 6 p.m. ceremony and an awards supper will also be featured. All canoes must be off the water and accounted for by 7 p.m. Entry fee is $10 per person, regardless of the event.

More information is available by writing the Charles River Watershed Association, 2391 Commonwealth Avenue, Aburndale, Ma., 02166.

The route

Starting at the Route 27 Bridge (1) in Medfield, race goes to a portage (2) at the South Natick Dam; a portage (3) at the Cochrane Dam; to Great Plain Avenue (4), the start of the 24-mile and relay races; to relay exhange number one (5) at Riverdale Park; Silk Mill Dam portage (6); Circular Dam and Route 9 portage (7); Cordingly and Finlay dam portage (8); footbridge (9); CRWA and Charles River Canoe Service office start of the second tour (10); Moddy Street portage (11); Bleachery Dam portage (12); Watertown Dam portage (13); and the finish (14).

BC land bid sparks controversy with state

BOSTON — A bid by Boston College to buy state land near the campus to allow expansion has sparked a controversy among groups claiming infringement on their neighborhood and state officials who say a sale may violate open bidding requirements.

While state legislators backing sale of the two parcels of land said over the weekend the school would use it only to meet open-space requirements to expand nearby facilities, opponents said any expansion will cramp an already congested neighborhood.

Legislative approval is required before the school can buy the 3.5 acres owned by the Metropolitan District Commission, but state Inspector General Joseph Barresi has questioned the bill authorizing the sale as violating open bidding requirements.

"We have not seen a copy of the actual legislation, but it appears to be in conflict with the principle of open public process," Barresi said.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Sherman W. Saltmarsh Jr., R-Winchester, a former BC hocket star, and W. Paul White, D-Dorchester, would set the price of the lots on St. Thomas More Drive after the measure is passed.

But Barresi said that before state property can be sold, it must be declared surplus and a determination made that no other state agency can use it.

The law also requires public hearings and bidding on the land, he said.

Opposing the sale is Rep. William F. Galvin, D-Brighton, a BC alumnus whose district includes the parcels, and several neighborhood groups.

Galvin said although the school has no plans to build on the lots, it would use the required open-space as a basis to enlarge it's stadium and possibly build new dormitories in the neighborhood.

"That neighborhood is already saturated with student housing and parking is a nightmare. Now the college is proposing to intensify an already bad situation," Galvin said.

The bill is slated for a hearing before the legislature's Housing and Urban Development Committee later this month.

Italian roots program

"Family portraits sittings" starts Monday, April 4 at 7 p.m. in the Nonantum Branch Library on-Bridge Street. Filmmaker Alfred Guzzetti traces his family's Italian origins. He will attend the screening and discuss the film as part of the library's "Italy then and Italy now" series.

An artist's dream gallery

Chapel Gallery visitors admire Dorothy Oray's conceptual wood sculpture 'Small Triumph' (above) as other works are shown on display in the spacious hall of the Second Church in Newton.

WEST NEWTON — To say the least, the Chapel Gallery isn't a typical art gallery.

For one thing, it's housed in the stately Gothic edifice of the Second Church in Newton. The building's elegant spire, fashioned after that of Salisbury Cathedral in England, rises above the village of West Newton.

It is a gallery operated by the church with many of the congregation members dropping by after Sunday's service to see the shows. Yet, it is uncompromising in the boldness and high quality of the works it shows.

It is clearly there not to placate, but to stimulate.

How a gallery that rivals Newbury Street in exciting offerings came to be in such an unlikely place was a matter of inspiration.

Once the chapel for the United Church of Christ's youth members, the 30 by 60 foot room features a vaulted ceiling, ornate woodwork and huge leaded windows. Since the church's membership had decreased over the years, the chapel fell into disuse and there was talk of converting it into offices.

"It gave a bunch of us the cold chills," recalled Pat Hunter, now one of five co-directors of the gallery.

In 1981 when the church was celebrating its bicentennial with a year-long festival of the arts, the room was used to exhibit historical items and works by artists in the congregation.

"At the time, we thought what a wonderful place for a gallery," said Mrs. Hunter. "But we wanted to do it right, to make it a professional gallery."

Track lighting was installed and a master craftsman in the congregation built moveable display boards to hang the art, since nothing can be attached to the room's walls.

A committee of five church members was selected to run the gallery. Calling themselves co-directors, they divide up such responsibilities as scouting artists to staffing the gallery with all-volunteer help.

Pat Hunter takes care of financial matters. June Tower, a sculptor, looks for artists and helps with their arrangements. Jean Passavant is in charge of special events, such as the gallery's recent concert series. Rachel Sheridan is the liason for the church committee, the gallery's decision-making body, and schedules the volunteers.

In another situation, an art gallery under the auspices of a church could mean a politically-charged atmosphere. Not so in this case, said Mrs. Hunter.

"The congregation is delighted," she said. "There were a few people who asked, how do you justify secular art in a church? But we have not had the resistance we thought we might."

There are a few constraints on the art that is exhibited in the gallery, which opened in May, 1982. The artist are asked to use their "good taste" in selecting what they show.

"We really don't want nudes," said June Tower. "But it's a matter of intent. We don't want oversexuality or violence. An artist we are planning to show in the fall does figures clothed and unclothed. She does very architectural nudes like paintings of old Roman statues. We don't know how far we will go on hanging these. I personally don't mind, but I don't want to offend anybody."

Another requirement is that the works be large enough to fit in with the scale of the room.

The one-man shows have ranged from the bold abstracts of John Murray, to figurative paintings of people at a cocktail party by Robert Freeman and "conceptual wood sculpture" by Dorothy Oray, among others, with variety and contrast among the artists a big factor.

"We look for Boston artists," said Mrs. Hunter. "Boston needs the kind of gallery that can show large works on the creative edge of the art world."

Since the shows run through four weekends, by the end of the month, most of the congregation is pretty familiar with the exhibit, according to Mrs. Tower.

"Some like one show and some another. On the first Sunday morning of a new show, they are usually quite taken aback by what they see. But they get used to it and get very fond of certains things.

"They have been very tolerant because to some of them, it's not exactly what they wanted in the room. They have tried very hard to undertand what we are doing."

The gallery does not concern itself with who will sell, or who has a name. Several of the artists had never shown in a gallery before.

"We are in a position where we can choose the art because of its intellectual integrity," said Mrs. Tower. "We don't have to worry about what is trendy this year. We like to show a variety of things that are well-thought out."

One of the shows planned for the spring will be works by Jerome Higgins, a parking lot attendant at the Museum of Fine Arts. When he was chosen by the gallery, he was doing figurative works of movie stars and his friends in a punk rock band.

The gallery is an artist's dream, with none of the tangling legalities of a commercial gallery. The committee asks just that 25 percent of the sales be donated to the church to pay for heat and utilities. The artist is also asked to pay for the printing of 1,000 postcards announcing the show and for half the cost of a magazine ad.

In return, they are given the freedom to hang their own works and to choose what they want to show.

"We just want to present the artist in the best way possible," said Mrs. Hunter.

Initially, the committee didn't know what the gallery could offer the artist, except a place to show. They weren't sure what the response would be to a small art gallery affiliated with a church.

While they still don't have the number of visitors they'd like, the gallery has been a surprise even to those that had the highest hopes for it.

Boston art critics sat up and took notice. The openings have attracted up to 400 people. Mrs. Tower has been flooded with requests from artists wanting to show there.

Still, the suburban location and the gallery's non-profit status which limits its staff to just enough volunteers to keep the room open for 16 hours a week, have been obstacles. (The gallery is also open by appointment, which is easily arranged, since both Mrs. Hunter and Mrs. Tower live near the church.)

"We would like a lot more people to come," said Mrs. Tower. "People are afraid of galleries — to even walk in because they feel that should buy something. There are no strings attached here. We say be friendly and don't bother people."

Chapel Gallery will be participating in the Newton Festival of the Arts, and the co-directors hopes that the exposure will make more people aware that there's art behind the church's walls.

Another Great Reason to live in Newton.
The Gables.
Newton has it all. The best in suburban living along with the urban delights of fine nearby shopping and easy access to the cultural, financial and business activities of Boston.
Now Newton has something more. The Gables—an exceptional group of two and three bedroom attached single family homes on a beautiful rolling meadow edged with trees, directly adjoining the Charles River Country Club.
There are five distinctive floor plans featuring the kind of spacious living usually found only in older, now impractical, homes. The larger of these offers up to 3100 square feet . . . even the least expensive two bedroom home has 1900 square feet.
Every home has its own attached two-car garage with direct indoor access. There are beautiful, very private courtyard areas. All have a full basement. The private clubhouse with its soaring cathedral ceiling looks out on a delightful sunning area, swimming pool and two tennis courts.
Prices range from $265,000 to $400,000. Furnished models are open every day from 9 to 5 at the junction of Parker and Dedham Streets in Newton, or phone (617) 969-0200 for an appointment.

TV tower extension request draws static from Upper Falls

NEWTON — A move seeking an increase in height of 150 percent for a television tower in Newton Upper Falls by Continental Cablevision drew strong neighborhood opposition at a public hearing last week.

Continental representatives claimed the need for increased sports programming and improved signal quality prompted the request to extend the tower from 60 to 150 feet.

But residents concerned about possible effects on health from microwaves voiced opposition to the plan at an aldermanic Land Use Subcommittee hearing. Microwaves are used to transmit and receive TV broadcasts from relay stations.

"What's more important, the quality of life, or the quality of TV ?" asked one woman at the public hearing.

Recalling the legacy of asbestos, once touted as a safe product and now a cause of cancer, residents said no one can guarrantee their safety from low levels of microwave radiation. A 1975 Environmental Protection Agency study listed the Needham Street location as having one of the highest amounts of microwaves in the eastern U.S.

Contintental wants to extend its tower at a cost of $75,000, according to its system manager Michael Musen.

Upper Falls is also the home of the 1,170 foot tower owned and operated by Channel 7. The cable firm's 60 foot tower is located nearby.

"Continental Cablevision proposes to add only 90 feet to the existing tower for a total height of 150 feet and it's insignificant next to the 1,100 foot tower of Channel 7 nearby," said Musen.

The firm charges about $30 a month for its "top of the line" service and has been broadcasting in Newton since 1981.

Alderman Michael Malec believes Needham and Wellesley will reap the benefit of a taller tower, since the cable firm serves those towns too.

"Let the neighboring towns share in the disfigurement of their communities," said Malec.

The cable firm officials stated they have been looking for alternative sites for a tower, but have come up empty handed and believe the Upper Falls location is the only practical choice left.

"Why does Upper Falls have to make the sacrifice," asked resident Brian Yates. He cited the historic nature of the Upper Falls section and stated the tower would take away from its heritage.

The cable firm brought MIT physicist James Jones who said the microwave levels are, "Far lower than anything that could cause biological harm."

"I think they are reacting to the treatment their neighborhood has received from the city and they are not reacting to us," said Musen.

Myrtle Baptist installs second female deacon

WEST NEWTON — The Myrtle Baptist Church on Curve Street recently installed its second female deacon in its 109-year history.

Leahnora Turner Hill, a resident of Newton for over 50 years, began attending Myrtle Baptist Church in 1930, and became a member in 1935.

Her service to Myrtle Baptist Church and the community has been long and varied. She has served as Sunday school superintendent; vice president of the Mystic Sunday School Union; United Baptist Covention of Massachusetts and Rhode Island/BYPU Department; Finance Committee; Junior Daughters of Myrtle; and Pastoral Search Committee.

Sister Hill has held the position of president of Daughters of Myrtle - the oldest auxiliary of the church - for over five years and has been financial secretary for 23 years. In 1967, under the pastorate of Rev. Eddie S. O'Neal, she became a member of the Diaconate, and became a "walking deacon" in 1981 under the pastorate of Rev. R. L. Littlejohn.

She received the Outstanding Laywoman Award from Myrtle Baptist Church in 1974.

Her ordination to the board follows a family line - her husband, Walter L. Hill, is a deacon and her uncle, the late Saul Perry, Sr., was a deacon. Her father, the late George Turner, was preparing for ordination. While a resident of Virginia she was secretary of the Lott Carey Missionary Society.

She is a member of the Boston Deacon's Union - Ladies Auxiliary. A member of Church Women United in Newton, she has served as chairperson of World Day of Prayer, participated in celbration of special days, and currently is a member of the Finance Committee and Treasurer. On the state level of Church Women United, she is Boston North Area Chairperson and past Corresponding Secretary.

Hill was employed by Star Market in Auburndale for 23½ years, and retired in the fall of 1982. The Black Achiever Award was awarded to her as a Star Market employee.

She is married to Walter L. Hill. They have two children - a son, Gerald Hill, and a daughter, Cynthia Dailey - and they have four grandchildren.

Kitchen and Bath Design & DECOR
Bob and Al Norberg

Cornell University conducted a study, in the early 1950's, which showed that a kitchen's efficiency depends on the location of its work areas. The "work triangle" is described by the location of the sink, stove and refrigerator. The efficient kitchen connects these points in such a way as to minimize the amount of travel between them during food preparation. To analyze your present kitchen's efficiency, try preparing a cup of tea. Such preparation involves going back and forth from the cupboard, stove, sink and refrigerator. If you must walk a "mile" to prepare a cup of tea, perhaps it is time to consult a kitchen designer about creating an efficient kitchen.

At CHARL MARK KITCHEN & BATH CENTER, 4174 Washington St., Roslindale, we can help create the "love triangle" that will make for efficiency and effectiveness. For your kitchen remodeling considerations call us and discover the knowedgeable and experienced people and ideas that will put it all together to "cook up" a great idea for your kitchen design. Newton South falls in OT title game

By Steve Tibe
Staff Writer

WALTHAM — The worst part of Newton South's defeat in the Division II Eastern State finals isn't the loss, but that such a fine season should end in dissappointment.

Wakefield earned the Division II Eastern title by nipping Newton South, 78-76, in overtime Friday night before a capacity crowd at Bentley College's Dana Athletic Center. The Lions end the year with a spectacular 22-2 record and as the Division II South Sectional Champion and the Dual County League Champion. Those are two accomplishments for the players and followers to dwell on and enjoy.

If anyone is looking for the reason why Newton South lost. You can look to Wakefield's 6-6 junior forward Mark Plansky, who threw in a game-high 40 points, including all six of Wakefield's points in the overtime stanza.

The Lions wouldn't allow Plansky to take complete control, however. They showed why they belonged in the state finals by erasing a six-point deficit in the fourth quarter to force the overtime. South's dependable duo of Scott Anglin (10 points) and Meatchie Russell (six points) combined for 16 points in the final period to lead the Newton South resurgence.

"This team showed its character tonight," said Newton South Coach Joe Killilea. "We were behind in the fourth quarter, but they stuck together and forced the overtime. We had two shots at the end, but the ball just didn't drop for us. Our team just showed a lot of class out there tonight."

"Everybody has worked hard this season," Killilea added. "Starting with my assistant Mark Aronson right through the junior varsity. They all deserve credit for working hard."

In the end, it was Mark Plansky, who delivered the killer thrust. The Lions held a 76-75 on a pair of free throws from senior forward Charlie Sullivan, who played a solid game scoring a tourney-high 12 points, with 32 seconds left.

Wakefield guard Steve Amyouny brought the ball down for the last shot. The Warriors worked the ball around for 20 seconds and then passed inside to Mark Plansky, who turned to the hoop and banked in a shot from five-feet. He was fouled on the play and hit the free throw to put Wakefield ahead 78-76 with nine seconds to go.

The Lions got the ball to Meatchie, who drove through two Wakefield defenders and put up a 10-footer. The ball glanced off the rim and right to Sullivan, whose shot missed and the buzzer sounded ending the season.

Sean Sims hit South's first hoop in the overtime. He picked up an offensive rebound and put it in to tie the contest at 74-74. Sims made several key heads up play in the overtime and the late stages of the fourth quarter to help Newton South.

Leading by 10 going into the second half, the Lions found themsevles trailing by six points going into the final period, 56-50. Newton South scored just eight points (all eight were scored by Meatchie Russell) in the third quarter. Wakefield behind Mark Plansky (12 points) and forward Bob Mason (eight points) scored 24 points in the third quarter.

Scott Anglin was held scoreless in a period for the first time in the tourney and things looked bleak. They brightened a bit when Scott, who finished with a team-high 24 points, hit his first shot of the final quarter.

Wakefield maintained the six point, however, by hitting free throws and executing a timely fast break attack. It seemed the Lions couldn't stop the Warrior attack. With 6:03 to play, Newton South trailed, 62-56. It was at this juncture that Newton South outscored Wakefield 14-8 to force the extra session.

Sims stole the ball and fed Meatchie Russell (who finished with 20 points) with a perfect pass. Russell zoomed in alone for the layup and the lead was down to four points. South's pressure defense came alive and Wakefield guard Sean Carmody was called for steps. Meacthie fed Anglin inside and the lead was down to two points, 62-60 with 4:54 to play.

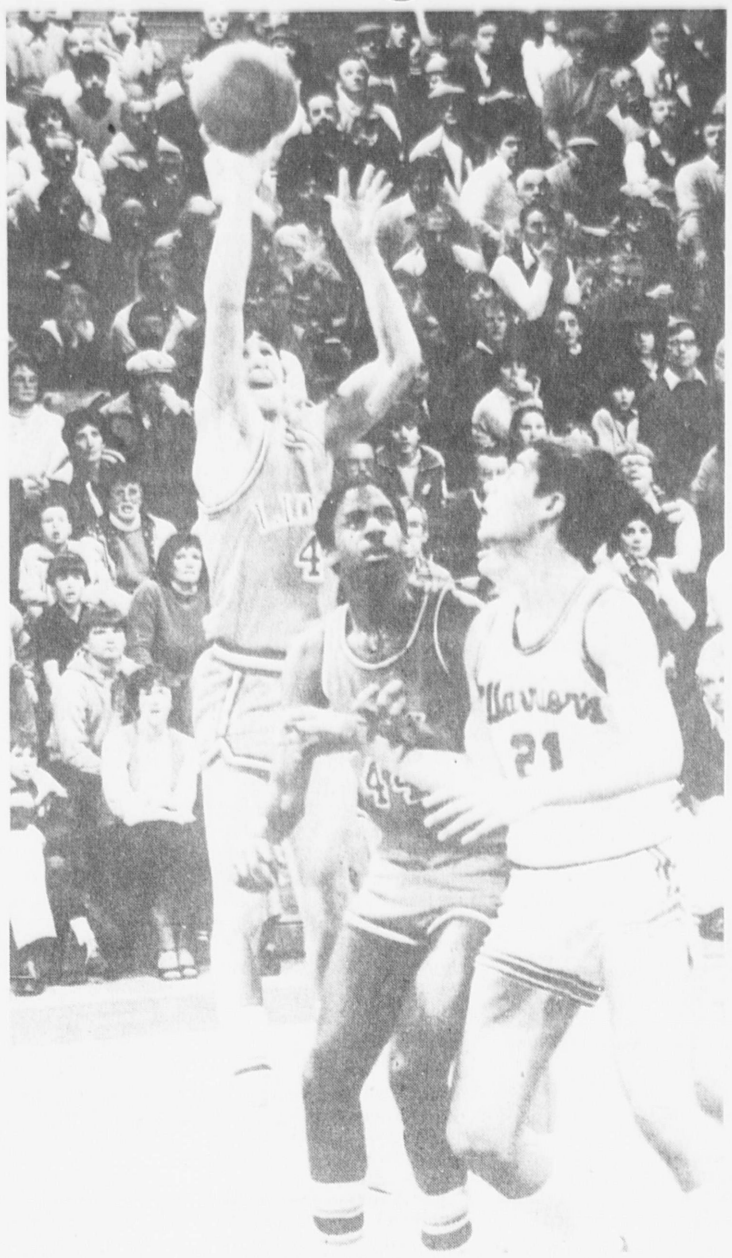

A smart well-coached team, Wakefield went right to its strength. They gave the ball to Mark Plansky, who drew a foul. He hit both shots to put Wakefield back up by four points. Wakefield packed into a tight zone, but South's Sullivan solved it with a 20-footer to cut the lead back to two points.

Sullivan then stole a pass and fed Russell for a fast break bucket to tie the contest at 64-64 with 3:52 to play. Wakefield's Mark Plansky was fouled again underneath and he hit both free throws to put Wakefield on top 66-64. Anglin fired up a 15-footer that missed, but Sims was right there for the offensive rebound and a hoop to tie the contest.

After a rare Mark Plansky miss, brother John was right there to put in the rebound for a new Wakefield lead, 68-66. Sims then missed a jumper for South and Wakefield's Amyouny scored all four of his points in the next minute. First, the senior connected on a 20-foot jumper for a four-point lead, 70-66, with 2:14 to go.

Meacthie got those two back when he drove the lane and was fouled. He calmly sank both free throws. Wakefield's Carmody threw up a jumper, but he missed and Anglin came down with the rebound with 1:55 to play. Meacthie went back on the attack and he sliced through the Wakefield zone to pick up the foul. Once again, he sank both free throws to tie the contest at 70-70, with 55 seconds left.

Wakefield's Amyouny then made one of the biggest plays of the game. South forward Evan Kushner was closely guarding Mark Plansky, but Amyouny set a blind pick and Kushner ran right through the 5-7 guard. Kushner, who did a fine job of forcing Mark Plansky away from the basket, fouled out of the game. Amyouny went to the line and sank both free throws with 46 seconds to play.

After a timeout, the Lions came down looking for a good shot. Anglin was being heavily guarded inside, but South patiently waited for him to get open. With nine seconds to go, Scott got a step on John Plansky and Meatchie threaded the ball inside. John Plansky came over Scott's shoulder to strip the ball and a foul was called.

South's 6-4 senior center and co-captain swished home both free throws to tie the game up. But there was still nine seconds left and Wakefield's John Plansky (who finished with 16 points) tried to drive the length of the court. He was stopped short, however, by Sims and Anglin and time ran out.

Wakefield came out strong in the first quarter moving out to a 21-19 lead. Mark Plansky hit 10 points, while brother John threw in the other six points. Newton South answered with a balanced scoring effort. Anglin with six points, Mike Oglesby with seven points led the way.

It was the Lions who took control in the late stages of the second quarter when the pressing defense began to take over. Wakefield was relying on the two Plansky's to bring the ball up the floor. South adjusted to this and began to cause some turnovers. With the score tied at 28 and 1:50 left in the second period, the Lions put togther a 16-4 spurt to grab the 42-32 lead at halftime.

Wakefield did just what it had to do in the opening stages of the third quarter. The Warriors put on 14-4 spurt to close to within two points and make a game of it.

"It was certainly was a great game for the fans to watch," concluded Killilea. "I certainly wish I could of watched it."

The summary:

WAKEFIELD(78)-Mark Plansky 15-10-40; John Plansky 5-6-16; Mason 5-0-10; Carmody 2-2-4; Amyouny 1-2-4; Markley 0-2-2. Tot. 28-22-78.

Buckley shares Suburban MVP honors

NEWTON — Champion Newton North placed four players on the Suburban League All-Star team, including league co-MVP David Buckley. Three members of the Waltham High squad gained All-Star honors.

In addition to defenseman Buckley, defenseman Tom Whiting, goalie Steve MacKay and forward Tom Ryan were named to the squad. Defenseman John Giardina and forwards Bernie Murphy and Tom Paschal represent Waltham.

David Buckley, MVP co-winner

Tigers Chris Pachus and John Hickey were accorded honorable mention status.

DAVID BUCKLEY — Only a junior, Buckley was the cornerstone of the defense that helped the Tigers into post-season play. "T e amazing thing about Dave," Coach Don Crowley said, "is his endurance. He logged so much playing time, yet he got better as the game wore on--and as the season wore on."

"He got better every game," Crowley said. "He gained mroe control, more confidence and more poise as the season progressed."

Buckley also accounted for seven goals during the Tigers' Suburban League championship season.

STEVE MACKAY — The adage about a hot goalie carrying a team all the way was rarely more in evidence than with MacKay's performance over the last 11 games of the season. Allowing only 14 goals over that stretch, including a red-hot string of four shutouts in seven games, the junior netminder was, on many occasions, singlehandedly responsible for Newton North's success.

"Steve was a most pleasant surprise," Crowley said. "We knew he had talent from watching him last year, but we had no idea that he would do as well as he did."

And like Buckley, MacKay will be back next season.

TOM WHITING — The captain of the 1982-83 Tigers, Whiting was a leader by example. "He's not a holler type," Crowley said. "But he became forceful in his leadership."

Crowley added, "He was in good condition and he decided he would have a good year."

TOM RYAN — The only Newton North forward named to the All-Stars, Ryan, a junior, was not only among the Tiger leaders is scoring with 11 goals, but was also a key to their tournament victory over Everett, as he was shifted to defense.

"He's just got lots of natural ability," Crowley said, citing his strong skating and puck handling abilities.

"His ability to mvoe from first line center to defense was a crucial factor in our success," he added.

CHRIS PACHUS — Given honorable mention, this junior led the Tigers in scoring throughout the regular season. Crowley credits Pachus' hard work and determination as big factors in the team's success.

JOHN HICKEY — One of the few seniors on the squad, this honorable mention forward came up with several big goals during the Tigers' stretch run at the Suburban League title.

St. Bernard's to stage Sports Night on Friday

WEST NEWTON — The ninth annual Sports Night, highlighting the completion of the 10th annual St. Bernard's Boxing and Physical Fitness Program will be held Friday at 7 p.m. in St. Bernard's Parish Hall, Washington St.

The program is under the direction of Rep A. Joseph DeNucci (D-Waltham-Newton), who started the program in 1974 for the benefit of school age youngsters.

Rep. DeNucci noted that the evening will feature the youngsters, ranging age six to high-schoolers, participating in exhibition bouts which will have no winners and no losers. The finale of the evening will be a professional wrestling exhibition.

The youngsters' exhibition bouts are designed to allow the boys to show off the skills thay have learned during the eight-week program, which, DeNucci points out, "Helps them become more conscious of the importance of physical conditioning, builds confidence, leadership, character and a sense of sportsmanship. This training carries over to the classroom and athletic field, and later into real-life situations."

Each youngster who participates in the exhibition will be presented with a trophy, and all od the more than 100 boys who took aprt each week will receive a Certificate of Accomplishment.

A number of well-known sports figures will be guest referees for the youth exhibition bouts, including former Welterweight Champion Tony DeMarco, former Middleweight Champion Paul Bender former Featherweight Champion Sal Bartolo, former Heavyweigh contender Tom McNeely and featherweight boxers Tommy Collins and Al "Red" Priest, among others.

DeNucci said, "I want to thank those dedicated persons who assisted me during the program, including Tom Pugliese and Matty Torchia, who have been with the program its entire 10 years."

"There is no way this program could be a success without the invaluable help of those who come each week to assist the boys. These individuals are Bernard "Go-Go" Girouard, Harry Heesch, Tom McNeeley, Joe Fannelli, Billy Doherty, Steve Capadonna and others, along with Gene Cronin, who serves as announcer, and Dick Bullwinkle who keeps time at the bell," he said.

"This year," DeNucci pointed out, "Newton Cable TV will be there to tape the program, which will be shown later in April."

There is a one dollar donation for the Sports Night, which is used to defray the expenses for the ring wrestlers, trophies and other costs. The Sports Night is funded by public contributions and DeNucci cited the Amercian Legion Post 440 and Nonantum Children's Christmas Fund for their generous donations in making the evening a successful one.

B. Kelley and K. Maguire hoop all-stars

Beth Kelley

Both the Newton North and Waltham High girls' basketball teams placed two players to the Suburban League Girls' Basketball All-Star team.

Newton North had senior center Beth Kelley and junior forward Kathy Maguire chosen to the second team.For Waltham, junior center Sue Giangrande and senior guard Jeanne Gately were selected to the second team.

The league's MVP Award was split between junior Dolores Williams of Cambridge and senior guard Kim Kelley of Brockton.

BETH KELLEY — In a year of injuries and inexperienced personnel, Beth Kelley was the consistent performer the Newton North relied on. She was counted on to do the scoring and rebounding. Also Beth's many duties inlcuded covering the top offensive frontcourt threat. She averaged 13 points per game and 14 rebounds. "Beth just providided the needed leadership," said Newton North coach Allyson Toney. "At times during the season we had so many injuries that Beth was our only experienced performer and we counted on her to do just about everything. She always came through. She played tough defense and worked hard to get open on the offense." Beth also plays soccer and softball at Newton North. She's still undecided about college, but she would like to continue her basketball career.

KATHY MAGUIRE — Despite missing four games of the season with a pulled led muscle, Kathy Maguire improved greatly in her second season of varsity play. She won her starting job early in her sophomore season and she has been getting better ever since. Averaging 13 points per game and double figures in rebounding, Kathy was one of the most versatile players in the Suburban League. She can play forward or guard and has quite frequently this past season. "Over the year, Kathy has matured tremendously," said Toney. "I can use her differently in so many situations. She's covered six-foot forwards and defended against the opposition's quickest guard. On offense, she has developed a good inside move and she's been working on an outside shot. Once she gets her outside shot to fall consistently, she's going to be very tough to defense. She is also a tremendous competitor and I had to keep her out of uniform until she was fully recovered from her injury."

SUE GIANGRANDE — The one girl the Waltham High team had to have on the floor. Only a junior, Giangrande has been selected the team MVP for the past two seasons and with good reason. She has been the leading scorer and rebounder for the Hawks the past two seasons. The base of the Waltham offense and defense. Giangrande plays the center position, but she's only 5-6. She overcomes her height disadvantage by working hard on defense and working well around the basket. "Sue's been going against bigger people all season," said Waltham's first-year coach Bob Connors. "She fit right into the system and gave us a position to build on. She was excellent around the hoop from eight to 10 feet and was a consistently hard worker. She was the key and she had to be in the lineup." Giangrande's top statistical effort of the season was a 28-point, 19 rebound performance against Medford. Sue also plays soccer and softball.

JEANNE GATELY — Waltham's director of the offense. Jeanne Gately was a three-year starter at the point guard position for the Hawks. She gave a young Waltham team the experience and direction it needed to put together a consistent offensive attack. A tremendous defensive player, Jeanne would wear down her opponents by pressuring them constantly. A co-captain, Gately ran the offense well. "Jeanne was tremendous for us," said Connors. "She was aggressive and never stopped hustling. She was great on steals and led the team in assists. Her leadership this season was super." Gately also plays soccer and softball.

Katie King's hard work pays off

PROVIDENCE — 'Break a leg' is an expression reserved for the theatrical world, but it may soon become a well-wishing statement for swimmers as well.

Despite being on crutches for two and a half years in her early teen years, Katie King missed only one year of competitive swimming, a sport that requires dedication and seemingly endless hours of practice before one can reach the top rung. Dedication has paid off for the Newton native, who already has established herself as one of the top distance swimmers in the East in her first year at Brown University.

"She has a phenomenal amount of endurance," says Brown coach Dave Roach who has guided his teams to a 42-4-1 dual meet record in his first five seasons with the Bruins. "She can swim at the same pace for a long period of time and recovers quickly after finishing an event." Roach used King in the 1,000 freestyle, the 500 freestyle and the 200 butterfly, considered the toughest triple to swim in a meet, in all the squad's tough dual contests this season.

King, a distance swimmer since the start of her career, responded well to the challenge and finished the dual meet season with 80 points, third best on a team that was 9-0-1 overall and 5-0-0 in the Ivy League, winning its first Ivy title ever. Among her 12 first place finishes was a school-record time of 10:11.32 in the 100 freestyle against Princetn Feb. 12, the meet that clinched the Ivy title for the Bruins.

Roach rates King as being among the top distance freestylers in the East. "Our weakest event last year was the distance freestyle and she has more than filled that void," Roach said.

His assessment of King proved accurate last weekend when the Bruins posted a second place finish at the Eastern Championships at Penn State, their best showing ever at the event. King was an integral part of the performance. She finished second in the 1,650 freestyle with a school record 16:59.4, third in the 500 freestyle (4:56.9); fourth in the 400 individual medley (4:34.31); sixth in the 200 butterfly (2:07.2); 10th in the 200 freestyle (1:55.49); and was also a member of the 800 freestyle relay team which placed fourth.

"Once you get this far, everyone is in shape. It's a matter of who is better prepared mentally," King sad before the Easterns. The Bruins may have an edge in this department, with their own team psychologist, Dr. Frank Sparadeo, who talks with the team before every meet and comes for team meetings two to three times per month. "Most teams say they are a team, but that's especially true here. We are like a family, with everyone understanding each other and supporting one another. I had never seen or heard of anything like it," says King who thinks more teams will follow suit.

Katie began swimming at the age of five and competed at the Needham YMCA from age seven to 10, then swam for the Shawmut Athletic Club until she was 12. The broken leg forced her to sit out one year, but while on crutches she was still able to compete for the following year and a half. "I pushed off the walls with one leg, and had to be careful on the runs," she said.

She came back to swim with Bernal's Gators Swimming Club, headed by Harvard coach Joe Bernal. The Gators won the New England Championship, and King's age group won the regional title as well (New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and New England).

Katie narrowed her choices of colleges to Brown and Penn State, and despite being offered a scholarship to the latter, chose to come to the Providence, R.I. school. "It's a good swimming program and a great school," she said, "and I konw Elaine (Palmer) and she liked it here and had done well in her swimming." Palmer, a junior from Woburn, also competed with the Gators and is a two-time All-American, heading into her htird national meet later this month.

King is not sure about her major field of study yet, but has gotten into a routine to meet the tough academic standards at the Ivy League school. "It's tough...We work out for an hour in the morning and for two in the afternoon, so you have to have a strict schedule to keep up in school. I did it when I was in Gators though so I'm used to it."

Mishkan Tefila squad trips Lexington

LEXINGTON — The Temple Mishkan Tefila basketball team scored the last nine points of the game to pull away to a 56-51 victory over Lexington Thursday night in United Synagogue Youth basketball action.

Mishkan Tefila, 15-2, trailed 51-47 with 3:10 to play, but four points by Mark Busny, two apiece by Adam Rosman and David Katz and a Jeff Chaban free throw provided the margin of victory.

The winners also displayed a tough defense, shutting down the high-scoring duo of Steve Putnam and Ben Adler in the late stages of the game.

Putnam had scored 14 points in the first half and Adler 11, but the defense, spearheaded by Chaban and Jamie Klingsberg, held them to four points apiece after intermission.

Mishkan Tefila placed four players in double figures, with Steve Chapman leading the balanced attack with 12 points. Chaban had 11, while Katz and Rosman scored 11 apiece.

Putnam was the game's high-scorer with 18, while Adler finished with 15.

Mishkan Tefila will start play in the USY playoffs Wednesday, facing either Medford or Peabody at 8:30 p.m. in the Runkle School in Brookline.

First Baptist added to historic list

NEWTON CENTRE — The First Baptist Church in Newton was recently added to the National Register of Historic Places. The church, at the corner of Beacon and Centre Streets overlooking Newton Centre Square, is considered a local landmark because of its imposing architecture.

The building is the third erected by the congregation. Following the Civil War parishioners were anxious to replace the larger wooden structure that was too small at the time for the congregation, too unattractive for the newly style-conscious members and too dangerous because of fire.

The will of Gardner Colby, a Newton philanthropist active in the church, who died in 1879, provided $25,000 of the eventual $90,000 cost for replacing the church. In 1887 construction was begun.

Architect for the church was John Lyman Faxon, a young Bostonian who had just finished Rollins Chapel at Dartmouth College. Thirteen years younger than the great American architect, H.H. Richardson, Faxon was strongly influenced by Richardson and many aspects of the building follow closely Richardson's own work in earlier buildings.

One distinctive aspect of the edifice is the incorporation of decorative religious symbols and images, inside and out, as the life of Jesus is revealed in the four Gospels.

The 11-bell chime in the tower was given in 1889 in memory of Samuel Francis Smith, minister of the church from 1842-54 and author of "America." In 1932 on the 100th anniversary of the writing of "America" the tower and chime were named "The America Tower."

In 1980 on the 200th anniversary of the founding of the church, the sanctuary was refurbished, modern smoke and fire detection equipment installed and a ramp built to provide barrier-free access.

Visitors are invited to tour this historic structure. Services are held Sundays at 10 a.m. On weekdays visitors can contact the church office at 244-2997.

The First Baptist Church in Newton Centre appears today much as it did in this photo taken from a book published locally at the turn of the century.

Ordinance curbs contract changes

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A close vote Monday gave aldermen more control over city contracts in an effort to prevent the executive office from changing agreements after the aldermen approve funding.

Arguments by some aldermen that new contracts ordinance will weaken the power of the city's "strong-arm-mayor" government and upset the power balance between legislative the executive branch were ineffective, and the aldermen voted 13 to 10 in favor of the ordinance.

The new ordinance requires the mayor to give written notice to the aldermanic president of any changes made in contracts after the aldermen have approved funding.

Within 72 hours of official notification, the aldermen will meet to discuss the ramifications of any contract changes.

The proposal, put forth by President Matthew Jefferson partially in response to the changes made in the Finnegan Associates revaluation contract , gives the aldermen the power to approve or disapprove any contract changes.

The contract for Finnegan Associates is said to have been changed after the aldermen gave their approval for funding, according to Alderman Richard McGrath.

A clause in the Finnegan contract calling for a performance bond was later dropped by the administration when the assessing firm failed to get the bond, according to McGrath.

"When there's an essential change, it absolutely must come back," said McGrath. The alderman said he never would have approved the contract without a performance-bond clause to guarantee full compliance with the city contract.

Against the idea was Alderman Lisle Baker who said, "The ordinance will only produce mischief and leave the city in a chaotic position."

Alderman Verne Vance believes the ordinace will be disputed legally because it toys with the power balance between the executive and legislative branch.

Speaking against the ordinance, Alderman Cynthia Creem asked her colleagues if they "want the city run by 24 mayors?"

Alderman Bruce Carmichael responded by telling a story of being led down the "primrose path" by the mayor, only to find out "all the rose bushes have been removed and only weeds left."

Carmichael alluded to instances of performance bonds being reduced and other items being eliminated after the fact.

Pay boost okayed

Other communities' executives make more than Mann, according to a survey by the aldermanic Finance Committee. The Brookline town manager makes $59,000 annually, while the Cambridge City manager is paid $60,000.

Turning attention to aldermanic pay increases, Alderman Malec tried unsuccesfully to eliminate city-paid health insurance.

"Each aldermen should receive compensation, inclusive of fringe benefits, not to exceed $3,000," moved Malec.

Other aldermen objected to the motion because they felt it would discourage self-employed people from running for elected office.

"If you are self-employed you lose a lot of money serving as an alderman," said Sheehan, advocating the city-paid health insurance benefits.

Against the idea of any aldermanic compensation at all, Alderman Bauckman said, "Never fear that you won't get a board of aldermen to serve if you don't pay them anything."

Alderman Creem stated other perks for the aldermen include business and social contacts that can lead to additional financial benefits later on in life.

The votes for the pay raises culminate three months of committee debate and a public hearing on the issue. The aldermen said they made the move for higher wages now to keep the issue out of the political arena when they come up for re-election.

Art grant bids sought

NEWTON — The Newton Arts Council is accepting grant applications from Newton residents in all disciplines of the arts.

Although "up-front" funding is currently unavailable, distribution of grant monies will come at the completion of a project or by July 1983.

Massachusetts Arts Lottery Chairperson Jacqueline D. O'Reilly has announced that with the success of "Megabucks," the current lottery game for the arts, the Council will alot $935,600 to cities and towns.

Those who have an individual project or are a member of an arts organization are eligible to submit a typewritten or legibly printed application as long as they are not a member or relative or a member of the Arts Council of either Newton or Massachusetts. Send your request for the application form to Newton Arts Council, c/o Mikki Krassin, 4 Brandeis Circle, Newton, 02159.

All applications must be received by the Council no later than Friday, April 8. Those to whom grants will be awarded will be notified early in May.

Board backs county audit

NEWTON — The Board of Aldermen has unanimously approved a resolution urging the Middlesex County Advisory Board to ask for an independent audit of the county's books.

Carol Ann Shea, acting president of the board, proposed the resolution in time for tomorrow night, when the advisory board will be meeting in Concord to vote on the upcoming budget.

Shea estimated the audit would cost approximately $20,000.

The aldermanic reaction to Shea's proposal was hearty and positive. "It's high time," alderman Harold Levinsky commented.

Corridor plan hits obstacle

By Thomas Wagner
Staff Writer

NEEDHAM — A long-delayed effort to attract state funding for the improvement of the Highland Avenue-Needham Street corridor hit another impasse recently when the state told Needham and Newton they will have to ante up $500,000 to get the project started.

Needham Planning Director Russell Burke said state officials, who met with representatives from Needham and Newton last week, reacted favorably to a highway plan devised by the two municipalities, but said they would have to pay for costly designs to attract state construction money.

Holding out little hope that Needham and Newton residents would pay $500,000 to have designs drawn up for a state highway, municipal officials left the cordial meeting "in a somber mood," Burke said.

Lewis Songer, executive vice-president of the Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce, also at the meeting, said, "It's a state highway. I know of no precedent for cities and towns designing state highways."

While agreeing the state was receptive, Songer said, "We must continue to press them to live up to their responsibilities. We deserve some consideration because there's a lot at stake here. This area is where all the future developments in Newton and Needham will take place."

For years, the municipalities have proposed road improvements that would unsnarl traffic on the central arteries along their border where the majority of their commerce and industry is located.

Their plan would widen the Highland Avenue-Needham Street corridor between Route 128 in Needham and Route 9 in Newton and add a service road along Route 128, between Kendrick Street and Highland Avenue.

Secretary of Transportation Frederick Salvucci and Department of Public Works (DPW) Commissioner Robert Tierney said there is a strong possibility that once the project is designed, construction money would be supplied, according to Burke.

But the commissioner added that the municipalities will have to pay for the design and engineering themselves to have chance of being selected over other highway proposals submitted for state funding.

Tierney left the door open by saying the state DPW would critique the Newton-Needham plan.

Ambitious project

One of the projects by residents for the upcoming Newton Festival of the Arts in April has been completing of the 6 by 8 foot commemorative quilt depicting historical events and buildings in each of the city's 14 villages. Shown working on the quilt are (from left) Lenore Chused, Rowena Fisher and Julie Gonzales.

K-8 writing is discussion topic

NEWTONVILLE — The teaching of writing in grades K-8 will be the topic of the next meeting of the Round Table on Education, a committee of the citywide PTA Council, on Thursday, March 24. The public meeting, at 8 p.m., will be held in the Frazier Room on the second floor of the Education Center, 100 Walnut Street.

In addition to a discussion of system-wide guidelines and standards by Robert Zeeb, coordinator of English, a new approach to teaching composition will be outlined by writing and basic skills specialist Mark McQuillan.

Samples of children's writing will be read to illustrate the stages and range of development. The presentation will also include an elaboration of techniques, or "finger exercises," for developing students' control of syntax, and methods for dealing with individual differences in the classroom.

Classroom teachers representing all grade levels K-8 and English specialists from several schools will be describing aspects of the writing program.

Questions and discussion will follow the presentations. Parents and staff are invited to attend. Call 965-0678 for more information.

School budget backed

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — PTA leaders and other school budget followers showered the proposed $40.2 million school budget with praise, during a hearing Monday night, for juggling costly "educational enhancements" with fiscal responsibility.

PTA Council President Eleanor Samuels commended the School Committee and Superintendent John Strand for bringing in a budget with a 2.1-percent increase, "well within the growth factor permitted under Proposition 2½."

Committee Chairperson Nancy Mann said she "was pleased by the support here tonight" for the budget. But, she said, "I am disappointed that the mayor is not here."

Several speakers during the meeting also noted their disappointment over Mayor Theodore Mann's absence while he attends a mayors' conference and vacations in Taiwan.

"I wish the mayor were here to hear all this," one woman said before speaking in support of the budget, "but maybe he'll get it in writing."

The budget first recommended by Strand called for a 3 percent increase. At the "straw" vote, the committee trimmed Strand's budget by about $838,300, largely as the result of anticipated lower prices for fuel oil and gasoline.

The budget calls for new "pilot" programs for the elementary schools in computers and in opportunities for bright children. Strand also recommended expansion of after-school activities for junior-high students and the establishment of a cable television studio at Newton North High and cable receiver capabilities in all schools.

The cost of these new programs is estimated at about $350,000 overall. Major savings for the schools are in continued declining enrollment and a cut of 44 teachers, combined with the closing of Warren Junior High in June.

But statements of support for the budget were interspersed with angry protest from private-school parents over the proposed elimination of $118,000 for transportation for 500 of Newton's private-school children. Of the approximately 50 people at the hearing at Day Junior High, about 10 were private-school parents.

One private-school parent, John Hawkins, said he was in "favor of the budget, too." But, Hawkins stressed, the budget fails to serve "all the children in Newton" since it eliminates private-school transportation.

"I would like to tell you that my family in Newton represents 102 years of taxpayers," Joan Sheehy, another private-school parent stressed.

"We are only asking that our children be safely bused to school. It's only $118,000, and when you talk of over $40 million, that's a very small amount," she said.

Safety was a central issue for other parents as well.

Rita Gann, a parent of a child who would travel on Brookline and Dedham Streets to attend private school, said the School Committee was demonstrating "a lack of responsibility."

"We ask no more for our children than their safety, which is their due. Is one child's life worth $118,000?" she asked.

A court ruling last year makes the cuts possible. With that ruling came a change in the state Department of Education's reimbursement formula.

Fewer than 10 private-school students are likely to remain eligible for transportation next year, according to school officials.

Criticisms of the school budget other than statements from private-school parents were rare.

The League of Women Voters of Newton threw its support to the proposed budget, as revised at the "straw" vote, and Oak Hill Elementary President Pat Burdick presented the committee with a resolution from her PTA board urging passage of the budget.

Jeff Swope, co-president of the Hyde Elementary PTA, promised support from his community for the budget when it goes to the mayor and aldermen after the final vote Wednesday.

"Fiscal restraints cannot become an excuse for abandoning Newton's commitment to quality education," Swope said.

Bowen Elementary parent Lynne Sullivan was "happy" with the computer initiative for the elementary schools, a program which would begin in four schools next year under Strand's plan.

"Ten to 15 years from now a person unfamiliar with computers will likely be analogous to an adult reading on a third-grade level. Computers are that important," Sullivan stressed.

However, she urged the committee to postone the purchase of computer hardware for one year and purchase software, develop software in-house and in train teachers in all 17 elementary schools in computer curriculum this year.

"The first year could be spent laying a firm groundwork and the second year, with all systems ready, hardware could be placed in all elementary schools possibly in order to avoid discontinuity between elementary and junior high programs," she said.

South students in drama finals

NEWTON — A group of Newton South High students won a spot in the finals of the Massachusetts High School Drama Festival this weekend in Boston.

Last year was South's first year to enter the competition and its production made it to the regional competition. This year, the second time around for South's Director of Theatre Arts Jim Honeyman, South students triumphed through the regionals and semi-finals to become one of 12 schools in the state to reach the finals.

The South students again will perform their winning production of Lanford Wilson's The Rimers of Eldritch on Friday, March 25, from 7-8 p.m. as part of the finals competition.

The festival will be held on Friday and Saturday in John Hancock Hall with six schools performing each day. Tickets are $3 for the day.

There are 17 South students who will be performing, with 12 in the stage crew and 10 students doing makeup.

Honeyman said he selected The Rimers of Eldritch because it contained "17 very equal parts which are all very good character roles."

"There is a lot of meat to each role," he said.

The play focuses on a man who has been killed in a small town in Iowa and explores through retrospect and flashback the issues of legal and moral responsibility of the townspeople for the man's death, Honeyman said.

Committee on lice picking apart sources of the problem

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — It may be nitpicking, but the committee formed to tackle Newton's head-lice problem in elementary schools continues to disagree on even the basics: how serious the problem is, where the kids get lice and how to control the pests.

Although the meeting last week was the second for aldermen, parents and school officials named to the Human .Services subcommittee on lice, members continued to rehash their differences.

The subcommittee did agree to recommend to the Human Services Committee a major informational campaign for elementary parents when school begins in September combined with mass screening for lice.

For the remainder of this year, however, the majority favored sending a letter to parents, pharmacists and pediatricians addressing concerns about the problem, reporting of cases and lice treatments.

Subcommittee Chairman Ald. Cynthia Creem said the committee will meet again this spring on the issue.

While the Newton-based group, Parents Againt Lice, believes the problem is at epidemic proportions and supports such action as keeping kids out of school until all they are free of the lice eggs or nits, other members of the subcommittee felt head checks every two months for all elementary children was overreacting.

Newton PTA Council President Eleanor Samuels suggested a screening every two months to bring the problem under control, an idea which . Memorial-Spaulding Principal Kevin Andrews objected to strongly.

"I have a problem with every two months checking 330 children. I think we're really starting to grasp for straws here," he said.

"I don't feel...it is an epidemic," Andrews stressed. "Let's not blow this up too much."

"I don't really feel that the problem is going to be solved," he added.

School Committee representative James Mnookin warned that children could become "obsessed" with the head lice problem. Mnookin said he is "not convinced that the schools are the source of any infestation."

Health Commissioner Bernice Joyal said she would reinstitute the policy of keeping children out of school until they were free of nits, but said it would require support from school officials and PTA's.

Mnookin said a return to the policy, which was in effect about five years ago, would raise "serious legal problems."

PAL, a group formed by Oak Hill Elementary parents this year, thinks an all-out war needs to be waged on the lice problem in both the schools and at summer camps. But of even greater concern to PAL is the improper and repeated use of prescription shampoo treatments for lice which contain a pesticide, lindane.

The subcommittee on head lice was formed largely as the result of concern from PAL and its founders, Debbie Altschuler and Leslie Kenney. Kenney and Altschuler met last week with New England representatives of Reed and Carnrick Co, the manufacturers of Kwell, to discuss ways to improve usage instructions on the package.

As a result of increasing awareness of the head lice problem, Recreation Department Commissioner Russell Halloran last week wrote to the heads of Newton's five little league baseball teams about the possible spreading of lice since players share a batting helmet.

Halloran asked coaches to make sure players wear their own baseball caps under the batting helmet and parents of little leaguers are asked to call if their children get lice.

Indecent assault nets jail

NEWTON — A 32-year-old Newton man charged with indecent assault on a minor was sentenced to three months in jail following his brief trial Wednesday in Newton District Court.

Gerald Paquin, of 7 Buswell Park, was arrested Feb. 11 by Newton police and charged with rape of a minor and possession of marijuana. The rape charge was reduced to indecent assault, to which Paquin pleaded guilty.

Judge Monte Basbas found sufficient facts in the case and accepted the recommendation of Assistant Middlesex District Attorney Marianne Ryan to sentence Jaquin to 2½ years in the County House of Correction of which three months to be served and the remainder suspended until 1985.

Jaquin was charged in connection with an incident on Feb. 9 involving a 16-year-old Providence, R.I., boy. Police said the boy had left his home last fall and traveled to Boston where he met Paquin.

Police Officer Paul Golden testified that the boy said he had been living with Paquin for two weeks. The boy told police that he and Paquin had sex on several occasions and that Paquin supplied the boy with marijuana.

The youth, accompanied by his mother and her female companion, was in the courtroom during the trial but did not testify.

Golden further testified the boy said Paquin threatened to stop supplying him with marijuana if the boy refused to have sex with him.

Court records state the Paquin was employed as a counselor at the Fernald State School. Jaquin had been held on $75,000 bail at the Bilerica House of Correction.

Judge Basbas also sentenced Jaquin to 2½ years in the House of Correction, of which three months are to be served and the remainder suspended, on the drug possession charge. Police said they discovered the marijuana when they went to Paquin's home to arrest him for rape.

Youths grab wedding bands

NEWTONVILLE — Three youths stole a tray of wedding bands last week from the M.C. Jewel store at 314 Walnut St., police said.

According to police, two white males and an Oriental male, all in their late teens, approached a clerk. Two of them talked with the clerk while the third grabbed the rings, according to police.

Police were uncertain of the jewels' value.

Parked car, van burglarized

NEWTON — A car and van were reported burglarized Wednesday, police said.

A blanket and ten cassette tapes were stolen from a 1980 Chevrolet parked on North Street. A CB radio was reported stolen from a Ford van parked on Albermarle Road.

State says 33 owe over $1M

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON — More than $1,033,105 in state taxes is owed by 33 area residents and they could face interest penalties as high as 26 percent, according to the State Department of Revenue.

Topping the area list released by the Department of Revenue is Newton resident Quintin S. Vespa of Great Meadow Road, who owes $189,364, according to the revenue office. Vespa could not be reached for comment.

Newton accounts for 26 of the 33 delinquencies. Other names on the state's list are from Waltham, Weston and Watertown.

Tax evasion in Massachusetts is a misdemeanor, according to revenue spokesman Harold Durning, but the interest penalties for not paying taxes can quickly add up.

"Penalties for nonpayment are in terms of interest and late payment penalties," said Durning. He said interest rates for late payers have ranged as high as 26 percent.

Other penalties for tax delinquents include liens and levies on personal property, such as homes, according to Durning.

A list of 1,241 delinquent taxpayers publicized by the Massachusett's Department of Revenue is an effort to embarrass residents into paying $22.3 million they owe the state, says a revenue official.

This year's list of alleged tax delinquents is 43 percent longer than last year's, according to Durning. The revenue office has not seen an avalanche of payments in response to the published list, but at least the people on the top of the list "realize we are serious about collecting," said Durning.

Some of those reached for comment, in a random sampling of area residents, say they would pay up if they could.

One Newton resident appearing on the list says he would pay if he had the money.

"If we had the money we would be happy to pay it, but there's nothing we can do about it because we don't have it," said Mrs. Antonio Gagliardi of Newton. Mr. Gagliardi, who works in construction, owes nearly $95,000, according to the Department of Revenue.

Mrs. Gagliardi said they also owe back taxes to the federal government.

"It's a sad thing for me," said James M. Oates, Jr. of Watertown, who the state says owes $15,180 in taxes.

Oates, a lawyer, said he has been ill for the last few years after suffering a stroke and has been unable to work. He said he is trying to sell his house to pay off the taxes he owes.

A big problem for the revenue office is collecting taxes from residents who left the state, according to a revenue official.

One such case is that of ex-Newton resident Harold Dorfman of Hamlet Road, who owes $51,147, according to the revenue office.

When reached for comment a woman, who did not reveal her name said, "Mr. Dorfman no longer lives in Massachusetts."

According to revenue spokesman Durning, $2 million is owed by 616 people who are not residents of the state.

Most of the 33 residents on the state's list have unpublished telephone numbers, but a few others were reached.

Tax spokesperson Durning says the names are of people who have owed the state back taxes for more than a year and have been given every opportunity to make arrangements to pay their tax.

"They can either pay the bill, enter an agreement to pay the bill in a reasonable period or file a formal appeal to the State Appellate Tax Board," said Durning.

People who have serious problems paying their tax should contact the state tax office, stated Durning.

Before the state legislature are bills to speed up the collection process, according to Durning.

"Use of private debt collection service is not legal yet in this state," said Durning, adding such a provision is before the legislators.

He said the revenue office hopes to be able to hire an additional 294 people who will help collect back taxes.

Continuing its crackdown on tax delinquents, the state is turning its attention to business' that have failed to pay their taxes, according to Durning.

"In two weeks we will issue a list of over 4,000 businesses that owe the state taxes," said Durning on Thursday.

This list is nearly four times longer than the list of individuals owing back taxes and the amount owed is in the millions, according to Durning.

Festival of the Arts set to open on April 23

NEWTON — Newton's first city-wide Festival of the Arts swings into action mid-spring. The two week celebration runs from April 23 to May 8, and in intervening weeks, more than 20 art related organizations are finalizing programs for festival events.

Leading off the round of city celebrations is the colorful and novel Beaux Arts Ball, another Newton first, planned for the festival's opening date, Saturday, April 23. The dance will take place in Bloomingdale's new spring model rooms in its Home Furnishings store at Chestnut Hill from 8 p.m. to midnight.

Trendy New Black Eagle Jazz Band will provide music for dancing and ball participants are invited to "Come as you were, come as you are, come as you wish to be."

TV personality Frank Avruch of WCVB-TV is expected to serve as genial host, and a roster of past and present Newton celebrities will also be on hand.

Tickets for the Beaux Arts Ball have deliberately been priced at $15 per person to encourage participation by all ages. Advanced tickets for the ball and for all Festival events may be obtained by writing: Festival of the Arts, Guaranty-First Trust Company, 780 Beacon St., Newton Centre 02159.

Checks should be made out to FAN (Fund for the Arts in Newton), the city's new umbrella organization designed to assure on-going, solid funding for art organizations in Newton. Complete information about all 20 Festival events may also be obtained by sending two 20¢ stamps with your request to the Guaranty Trust's special Festival office.

Co-chairman of the Beaux Arts Ball are Sara Aronson and Catherine Medaglia, aided by a 33 person planning committee. The ball will feature a cash bar, hors d'oeuvres, a raffle and door prizes, and a commentary by Newton Mayor Theodore D. Mann.

A special mask-making workshop, assisting ball participants in creating unique masks will be held Friday, April 14 from 7-10:30 p.m. at the Newton Arts Center, 61 Washington Park, Newtonville with artist Rachel Paxton. Material fee is $7. With workshop size limited to 25, checks made payable to Fund for the Arts in Newton should be sent to the festival office.

Chiropractic office opens in Highlands

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — Doctors Howard and Leslie Goldberg announce the opening of the Highland Family Chiropractic Office in Newton Highlands. Their practice is oriented toward chiropractic care for all family members.

"Chiropractic is not only an excellent means of restoring ill health, but possibly its greatest potential lies in the prevention of future health problems," said Dr. Howard Goldberg, who along with his wife, graduated from a four-year program at Life Chiropractic College in Marietta, Ga.

While living in Georgia and attending the college Dr. Goldberg worked at Grady Memorial Hospital in Atlanta. He has been a respiratory therapist for seven years, specializing in pediatric and neonatal intensive care units.

On his switch from a career in respiratory therapy to chiropractic he said, "Ten years ago I received an athletic injury. After seeking standard medical treatment with no results, a friend suggested I go to a chiropractor. Within a short amount of time I was out of pain and back to my normal routine."

Dr. Leslie Goldberg, licensed in the states of Georgia and New York, is planning to take the Massachusetts state exam in the coming months.

She brings a year of experience with her after working in a chiropractic practice in Atlanta. Dr. Howard Goldberg recently took the Mass. chiropractic licensing exam a week after the birth of their daughter Stacy.

The Goldbergs invite the public to attend weekly chiropractic health talks on the benefits of chiropractic care, Tuesday evenings at 7:30 p.m. There is not charge for the talks. Call the office at 244-0860 to reserve seating.

Some say Sunday sales okay

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Sunday shoppers flocked to local clothing and book stores over the weekend in the wake of the demise of the Massachusetts Blue Laws. For local supermarkets business was fair but steady, according to retailers interviewed Monday.

Retail stores opened on Sunday for the first time last weekend, 90 days after the law repealing the Sunday Blue Laws went into effect.

About two-thirds of the stores were open at the Chestnut Hill Mall. Among them was the Weathervane, a women's clothing store, where Sunday's business was comparable to a typical Saturday when business is good, an employee said.

> 'Six days are enough. We should rest on the seventh day.'
> Newton Centre merchant

"There were plenty of people. We had a terrific day," said the employee, who declined to give her name.

The employee said she favors Sunday openings because "it's about time we competed with the rest of New England." She added that Sunday openings are "great for the working person."

Restaurants at the mall were also open. Most other mall stores will open for Sunday business on April 10.

In the Newton Centre shopping area Hit or Miss, a women's clothing store, and WaldenBooks were among the shops to open last Sunday.

Maryellen Shea, manager of Walden's Books, said she was surprised business was so good on Sunday.

"On an hour-per-hour basis, it was like an average weekday," Shea said.

Shea said she was not certain on Sunday whether business would be good because she did not know if customers were aware that Walden's would be open. She said she is somewhat optimistic that future Sundays will be as busy.

"I would expect Sundays in the summer not to be very busy," she said. However customers have told Shea that community events held in the center during the summer could attract more customers.

"I'm going to be counting on that to boost sales."

Among the major supermarkets to open were the two Purity Supreme stores on Route 9 and on Washington Street in Newton. Business at the stores was steady but not heavy, a regional spokesman said Monday.

Purity Supremes will remain open all night on Sundays, as they are on other days.

Building by the book

New library on his drawing board

By Stephen Capoccia
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A south-facing window welcomes warm sunlight onto a bibliophile in an easy chair. The reader looks up from the pages to view a babbling brook passing through a stone terrace.

Water-damaged walls over statue.

Early visions of a new main library on the corner of Walnut and Homer Streets are beyond the dreaming stage and have been put on paper by Newton student architect David O'Sullivan.

The 24-year-old's plans make way for a brook to run right under a proposed new main library. Although city library trustees appear to favor building of a new main branch across from City Hall, no concrete plans have been approved. O'Sullivan's proposal, however, prompted Newton Free Library Director Virginia Tashjian to eagerly remark, "Let's build it."

Cost estimates for a new library building range from $7 to $12 million.

O'Sullivan's drawings of a 74,000 square-foot complex to house potentially 420,000 books are professionally detailed and even include the main color scheme for the building.

A student of the Boston Architectural Center, O'Sullivan wanted a building which "didn't take away from the importance of City Hall," which is across the street.

"My initial feeling was to design an unobtrusive box. Then I went to a monumental type structure," said O'Sullivan.

Finally settling on a compromise of the two original concepts he came up with a brick-faced, two-story complex incorporating aspects of City Hall.

The project represents O'Sullivan's thesis and since February 1982 the Newton resident consulted with the City Planning Department and the city librarian to design something the city could conceivably build.

Plans for full handicapped access, a large gallery, practice rooms, a community meeting hall and plenty of office space are layed out in color drawings by the young architect.

The site of the new multi-million dollar facility has a brook running right through the middle of the property.

Seeing the brook as an asset, O'Sullivan planned the building over and around it rather than trying to divert the water.

The brook would be framed by a landscaped terrace in the front and back of O'Sullivan's proposed building.

With the water flowing in culverts five feet under the building the solution is much like that used at Newton North High School, said O'Sullivan.

Inside would be brick walls, a gray-green carpet and white shelving and furniture to help define space, said O'Sullivan.

Natural lighting would pour through an open courtyard from three banks of roof-top skylights into open reading rooms that allow increased capacity for the main branch.

Another consideration in O'Sullivan's proposed design was to keep the building from en-

She cites patchwork, crumbling prestige

NEWTON CORNER — The city's century-old main library is a patchwork of additions with seams that are splitting apart, said Library Director Virginia Tashjian this week.

Inside the main branch of the Newton Free Library in Newton Corner are cracking walls, water-damaged paint, confusing passageways to challenge any funhouse fan and inadequate space for librarians and books.

"Look at the ceiling. It is coming down again," said Tashjian, plucking a ceiling tile from atop a cabinet in her cramped second floor office.

Tashjian has worked for the city as its library director since 1970 and since day one she says she has wanted a new central library.

High court backs suit by custodial union

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — After a seven-year legal battle a group of Newton school custodians has been awarded more than $100,000 by the state Supreme Judicial Court in what is seen as an important decision on the rights of public employees' unions when faced with layoffs.

The court decision found the Newton School Committee at fault for refusing to bargain "in good faith" over the layoff of six custodians in June, 1976 and failure to discuss "the impact" of that decision.

The court ruled the School Committee made a "unilateral" decision to lay off the custodians.

In its finding Thursday, the SJC affirmed both a 1981 decision by the Labor Relations Commission and a 1979 judgement by the Suffolk Superior Court in favor of the custodians.

The custodians' lawyer, Alan McDonald of the Boston firm of McDonald and Noonan, said he was "very happy" about the court decision.

"I think the custodians' union deserves a lot of credit for persevering," McDonald said. "They are a small union. They certainly don't have anywhere near the resources that the School Committee had.

"It's a classic case of the little guy taking on city hall and showing that he can win," he said.

McDonald said the case marks "certainly the first time" the SJC "has created or recognized the difference between permissive and mandatory subjects of collective bargaining under the public employees collective bargaining law."

He said the ruling makes the issue of how management implements a layoff and discussion of the impact of the layoff mandatory subjects for municipal collective bargaining.

School Committee Chairperson Nancy Mann said the committee was "naturally disappointed" by the court finding.

"It is a case that school systems across the state have been watching," she said, "and this defeat is one that is going to disturb every school committee in the Commonwealth.

"Frankly, it makes abiding by Proposition 2½ even more difficult," Mann stressed.

Collective bargaining is "costly" and "bargaining over the impact of layoffs can be very time-consuming," she said.

Robert Robards, spokesman for custodians' union, said the settlement will amount to approximately $143,000, but School Committee Chairperson Nancy Mann said she was told by the School Department lawyer that the settlement would be about $103,000.

Both amounts include the 7 percent interest on the back pay.

Robards, who was president of Service Employees International Local 454 at the time of the layoffs, said the settlement is "only the tip of the iceberg" in terms of court costs and days lost from work.

"The actual cost is much higher," he said. "We know how much we (the union) have spent on it and it runs in the thousands."

Robards said the union made offers to the School Committee to settle for only the back pay, but the offers were rejected, including an offer made one year ago.

"At no time would the School Committee make a determination to cut their losses," Robards said.

Mann said offers were made, but for "more than just back pay."

"We're disappointed that they didn't at least limit the damages more than they did," she said. "We wouldn't have appealed if we didn't think there was a chance of limiting the damages."

Mann said money for the back pay will come from the custodial salary account in the current budget. Mann said the school system has been understaffed for several years in its custodial workforce and, as a result, has excess funds for the settlement.

The interest portion of the settlement, she said, would come from the unspent funds which the School Department normally returns to the city at the end of each year.

Strong Italian ties prompt city program

NONANTUM — A librarian's fascination with Italy has helped to expand the Newton Free Library's annual Italian cultural program into more than a presentation of films.

Members of Newton's Italian-American community are learning more about their diverse regional backgrounds and the strong ties they maintain with Italy, through weekly discussions at the Nonantum branch library.

Through May, Newton residents have an opportunity to view a variety of Italian films and participate in lively discussions with guests lecturers — a filmmaker, journalists and professors among them.

"The program combines the history of Italian-Americans in the United States and more specifically their interactions with Italy, which are very strong," said Marian Brenner, the librarian who has coordinated the program for seven years.

Brenner said she became "fascinated" with Italy while working there several years ago. She now spends one month a year in Italy and purchases more Italian books for the library's collection.

This year Brenner applied for and received a $2,000 state grant which helped expand the library's annual

After ambulance crash

Driver faces charges

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON — An ambulance driver is scheduled for a hearing on April 11 in Newton District Court where he faces a vehicular homicide charge in connection with a a fatal crash last week on Washington Street.

The driver, Frederick L. Kline, 20, of Lynnfield, was cited by police on charges of motor vehicle homicide, failure to conform to a red light and failure to carry a registration in connection with the crash that resulted in the death of Stephen P. Annesi, 26, of Auburndale.

Police filed for complaints in District Court against Kline, but did not arrest him. The court magistrate will determine following the hearing whether there is probable cause to seek criminal charges against Kline.

If probable cause is found the case can be tried in District Court, officials said.

Vehicular homicide carries a maximum penalty of 2½ years in the County House of Correction and/or a $3,000 fine.

Police allege the ambulance driver, in a Peter Poor Ambulance Service vehicle, was traveling "at excessive speed" when he allegedly ran a red light and struck and killed Stephen P. Annesi, 26, of Auburndale, Route 128.

However, Newton Traffic Captain John Bartinelli declined to state exactly how fast the ambulance was traveling when it collided with the victim's auto on Washington Street at the Route 128 access ramp.

Annesi of 14 Owatonna St., was pronounced dead at 9:26 p.m. at Newton-Wellesley Hospital, an hour after the collision.

The ambulance was not enroute to an emergency, according to police.

Police also said last week the female attendant and female patient in the ambulance sustained minor injuries as a result of the collision. Police would not reveal where the ambulance was taking the patient. Police did say the ambulance driver had stopped at Newton-Wellesley Hospital moments before the accident to seek directions. The patient inside the ambulance was not a patient from Newton-Wellesley hospital, according to police.

Firefighters used the jaws of life to open the Volkswagon doors and remove Annesi from the car. Chaulk Ambulance transported him to Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

Annesi was graduated from Newton North High School and Bridgewater State College, having earned a degree in physical education. He was a children's day-care instructor in Natick. Annesi had been with the U.S. Air Force in Vietnam and the Air National Guard.

Another ambulance driver involved in a separate fatal crash on Route 9 last September had been found guilty on a charge of vehicular homicide. A 32-year-old Newton woman was killed when her car collided with the ambulance driven by George P. Garland of Pelham, N.H..

Garland was found guilty in Middlesex Superior Court and given a suspended sentence of 2½ years in the county House of Correction. Garland was also fined on charges of speeding and failing to stop for a red light. An appeal of the verdict was denied last Monday in Superior Court in Cambridge.

Garland was operating an ambulance owned by American Ambulance Company of Lowell. The ambulance had not been enroute to an emergency police said.

His love was working as children's teacher

AUBURNDALE — Mrs. Florence Annesi said last week her son Stephen's greatest love was working with children.

"He loved working with the kids. He used to come home every day full of stories," Mrs. Annesi said of her 26-year-old son, a children's day care instructor.

Stephen P. Annesi, who lived with his mother at 14 Owatonna St., died last Monday night following a collision with an ambulance on Washington Street at Route 128.

Mr. Annesi's brother Michael also stressed the his brother "really enjoyed working with kids."

In a soft-spoken voice, Mrs. Annesi described her son as "a shy boy, but a happy person. He had a lot of good friends. Everyone loved him. He didn't have a mean bone in his body."

Mr. Annesi, a Newton North High School graduate, was employed as a teacher at Kinder-Care Day Care Center in Natick.

A 1980 graduate of Bridgewater State College, Mr. Annesi earned a bachelor degree in physical education. He was also employed as a life director of gymnastics at the West Suburban YMCA in Newton Corner.

A life-long Newton resident, Mr Annesi had been in the U.S. Air Force in Vietnam and prior to that in the Air National Guard at Pease Air Force Base in N.H.

Mrs. Annesi said her son "was not a drinker" and usually stayed at home on week nights. On Monday evening, the night of the fatal crash, Mr. Annesi told his mother that he was going out "just for a short time."

"It happened so close to home. It was so near the house," Mrs. Annesi said.

Mr. Annesi died at 9:36 p.m. at Newton-Wellesley Hospital, about one hour after the accident.

Mr. Annesi also had three brothers, Charles, Mark and Michael, all of Auburndale and two sisters, Karen of Amherst and Donna of Auburndale.

A funeral Mass was held Friday in Corpus Christi Church in Auburndale followed by interment in Newton Cemetery.

Developer eyes Murray Road

NEWTON — The city has found another developer who wants to try building housing on the site of the old Murray Road School in Auburndale.

Dolan Pond Associates will buy the property, abandoned in 1978, and build seven attached townhouses on it. The price of one two-bedroom unit, to be deeded to the city for low-income housing, will be deducted from the $140,000 purchase price of the property.

Another developer, the Galen Development Corporation, had to back out of a proposal to build housing on the site of the abandoned school in January 1982 when it was decided that certain conditions attached to the project by the aldermen made it economically infeasible.

The aldermen changed some of the conditions for the sale of the property. They added the option of building seven attached dwellings and they allowed that the price of the low-income unit could be subtracted from the purchase price of the property.

The most recent development proposal includes the demolition of the old school, which has been badly damaged by vandals over the years. The developers have proposed replacing it with an L-shaped building which would contain two two-bedroom and five three-bedroom units.

Also included in the proposal is the sale of almost 20 percent of the present 80,000 square foot lot to direct abutters of the property. Six of the eight abutters contacted told the city's Planning and Development Department they would be interested in buying the parcels being offered.

Trial set for alleged market holdup

NEWTON — A Quincy man will be tried April 5 in Newton District Court for armed robbery in connection with an incident last Saturday at the Purity Supreme Supermarket in Newton Highlands.

Joseph F. Zerega, 44, of 211 West St. was arraigned Monday in District Court and charged with armed robbery, larceny of a motor vehicle and illegal possession of a firearm after a car chase into Needham, police said.

Zerega pleaded innocent to the charges. A judge ordered the suspect held on $25,000 with surity or $2,500 cash bail.

Zerega is charged with robbing $5,482 from the Boylston Street supermarket at about 5:50 p.m. Saturday, police said.

Police said they were given a description of the robber and his car and saw a similar car turn from Elliot Street onto Oak Street.

Police followed the suspect into Needham where he drove onto Bridge Street, which leads to a dead end. The suspect drove the car into a driveway at the end of the street, jumped out and ran into a wooded area, according to police. Police searched the woods and found Zerega, a police spokesman said.

Police said they recovered a .357 magnum handgun and a bag containing $5482 from the car.

The getaway car Zerega allegedly was driving had been stolen from a Wollaston man, police stated. It was not immediately known if the gun found in the auto had also been stolen.

The money recovered was identified by a Purity Supreme employee, police said.

Sunday openings: mixed reviews

"It was pretty consistant and steady," said Jack Murphy, Purity Supreme regional vice president. "People came in on a regular clip. Not everybody came in at the same time."

The supermarket business was not as heavy as it is on an average Saturday, Murphy said. He said he anticipates that more people will want to shop on Sundays but it may several weeks before anyone knows how successful business will be.

Among the stores to remain closed Sunday were Harris Hardware store in West Newton Square and Chandler-Levy Hardware store in Newton Centre. Both store owners said without hesitation they will never open on Sundays.

"Six days is enough," said Chandler-Levy owner Barbara Levy. "We should rest on the seventh day. I hope my customers feel the same way."

REMEMBER WHEN DETROIT USED TO SELL CARS, NOT INTEREST RATES?

These days, it's hard to find a car commercial that doesn't feature finance rates.
And that's probably a smart ploy. Because more dealers, one suspects, will sell more cars to more people.
But the fact is, more people will actually end up spending far more money for those cars than they have to—the apparent savings from those "low" interest rates are usually just tacked onto the price of the car. (There is still, alas, no such thing as a free lunch.)
That's why an auto loan from Patriot can reduce the total price of your new car dramatically—often by several hundred dollars. And with only 20% down, no charge for life insurance, an interest rate of just 12.5% a.p.r., and up to four years to repay, your monthly payments can also be reduced dramatically.
So we have a suggestion that could be very profitable for you:
First, make the best deal you can on the car—as a "cash buyer"—before you talk about the financing. Then stop by any Patriot Bank and compare our terms with the dealer's (or, for that matter, with those of any other bank in New England).
12.5% annual percentage rate.
20% down. 4 years to repay.

'Ugly incident' prompts review of vandal stance

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — His witnessing of "an extremely ugly incident" because of broken glass in the Bigelow Junior High shower room prompted School Committeeman Leonard Gentile to again challenge the current school policies on vandalism, drugs and alcohol as "too permissive."

After playing basketball at Bigelow Wednesday night, Gentile and other players were in the showers when two men stepped on glass. One was cut badly and was rushed to the hospital for stitches, Gentile said.

Gentile related the incident as a kickoff to Wednesday's School Committee discussion of Superintendent John Strand's nine planning priorites for next year.

Examination of problems with vandalism, drugs and alcohol in the schools was not among the priorities and Gentile was dismayed.

He said he hesitated to raise his concerns again because "every time I do people say there goes old Attila the Hun the conservative again."

The incident in the Bigelow showers is "not an insolated incident" and served as "an unpleasant reminder" of "the failure" of the schools, School Committee and parents to teach children to be responsible for their actions, Gentile said.

"We are failing miserably when it comes to teaching children responsibility and discipline," he stressed.

Noting that "more and more communities are adopting stricter rules on drugs and alcohol," a frustrated Gentile said, "I just wish we could sit down and discuss this seriously."

Committee member Susan Silbey agreed that addressal of problems of vandalism, smoking, drugs and alcohol in Superintendent Strand's planning priorities "is not unreasonable."

Silbey reminded the committee of negative comments made by applicants during the superintendent search last spring about the "decorum," graffiti and vandalism in the Newton schools.

Discussion of these problems "seems to have quieted down and I find that interesting," Silbey said.

"I think frankly it's because people who believe that they are liberals think they should stay away from these issues," she said.

Silbey said the physical condition of schools, how students treat their schools and smoking in the schools were issues she felt deserved attention.

Gentile appeared to have some additional support for examining policies Robert Ricles, Katherine Jones and Nancy Mann.

Committee members Ann Berwick, James Mnookin and Marcia Mitchell did not respond during the meeting to Gentile's criticisms of current school policy.

"I realize the problem lies with the School Committee, parents the school staff and that everyone is to blame," Gentile said. "But unless everyone works together, we're never going to see an improvement in this area."

Students must be shown that the breaking of bottles in a school building, alcohol and drug use on school property are "totally unacceptable" before the problem will be solved, he stressed.

Superintendent Strand said vandalism and drugs were never raised by parents and principals as areas of great concern during special needs assessment meetings this fall, but said he would pursue the issue as a priority if the committee wanted him to.

"I just think that in general we're too permissive and we tolerate too much," Gentile said and added that he favored instituting a "strict, uniform policy" for dealing with acts of vandalism and drug and alcohol use.

Jones urged the committee to obtain information on specific policies in each school and to begin at that point a discussion of Gentile's concerns.

In an interview Thursday, Gentile said he is investigating Peabody's handling of drug and alcohol problems after a bus driver for the Peabody schools took her busload of students to the police station because of marijuana use.

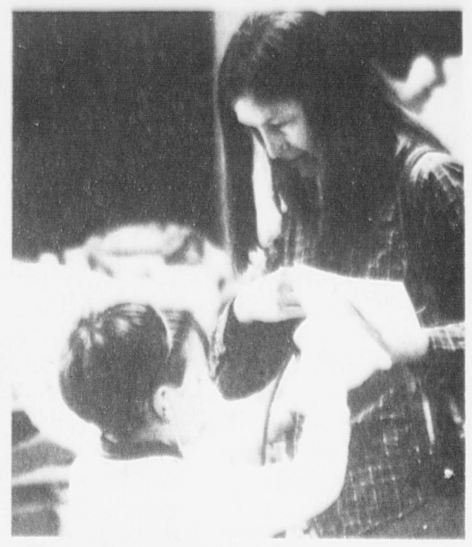

Gentile said increased awareness of school policies would be a first step, but he stressed, the problem will not go away until the Newton schools make vandalism, drugs and alcohol abuse a priority.

Wednesday's discussion "satisfied" Gentile that the committee was interested in the issue.

Gentile said he will docket the item for discussion by the School Committee with the hopes of using information he has gathered from Peabody as a basis for future action in Newton.

Peabody has set up a subcommittee of its school committee and a task force to deal with the problems as well as introduced a tougher suspension policy. Gentile said his hope is for the the Newton schools to set up a similar task force.

School budget, $40.2M, goes to mayor

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The School Committee last week approved a $40.2 million budget for submittal to the mayor and Board of Aldermen.

Mayor Theodore Mann is expected to discuss that budget when he presents his proposed overall city operating budget to the aldermen tonight.

The school system figure is some $550,000 higher than Mayor Mann has recommended. Mann is an ex-officio member of the School Committee, but he was on a National Conference of Mayors tour of Taiwan at the time the final vote was taken.

Before the 8 to 0 approval, the committee restored $21,000 in teacher-aide salaries earmarked for cutting during an earlier "straw vote." In all, the body chopped $827,000 from Supt. John Strand's request, and the $40.2 million figure represents a 2.2-percent increase over the 1982-83 school budget.

Superintendent John Strand orginally recommended a budget of more than $40.5 million, which represented a 3-percent increase.

Committee member Ann Berwick called Strand's budget, with the "straw" vote revisions, "astounding."

"I think that to be able to come forward with a 2.2-percent increase at the same time that we are giving (teachers and other school bargaining groups) increases in the neighborhood of 6 percent...and given the new programs in the budget is really a sleight of hand," she marveled.

School Committee Chairperson Nancy Mann objected to Berwick's wording. "No, it's not really a sleight of hand," Mann said.

"No, in truth it's not," Berwick said. "It is very talented budgeting done with a great deal of circumspection and creativity."

"I want to thank the superintendent and I want to say that this is a budget worth fighting for," Berwick said.

Committeeman Robert Ricles, who had previously criticized the budget for too many new and costly computer and advanced-challenge programs for bright children, said the revised budget is one he can "support fully."

"I think that the budget is fully defensible and will withstand the scrutiny of other political bodies," Ricles said.

Some changes which made Ricles support the budget were doubling the number of elementary schools involved in the new advanced challenge program and cutting a $50,320 cable television studio at Newton North High.

The committee plans to lobby the Newton Cable Foundation for the funds since several members agreed the new program would be a "great benefit" to Continental Cablevision.

The school budget also won praise during the Wednesday meeting at F.A. Day Junior High from Newton Teachers' Association (NTA) President Rosetta Johnson.

Johnson called the less-than-2.5-percent increase in the budget "very reasonable" since it is within the increases allowed by Proposition 2½.

"Even though we have had our differences...we are proud to support you at this time," Johnson told the School Committee.

However, Johnson decried the cuts of about 44 teachers, some of them tenured.

"It disturbs me very much to know that some of my colleagues are in very vulnerable positions," Johnson said.

The NTA president said she would contact committee members soon to discuss "creative ways" of promoting "natural attrition."

Despite pleas from private school parents at Monday's public hearing on the budget, the committee did not restore a $118,000 cut in private-school transportation.

Back this budget

The praise, in total, was almost embarassing.

PTA Council President Eleanor Samuels commended School Superintendent John Strand for his work on hammering out the proposed school budget for next year.

"Fiscal responsibility" in the proposed budget was touted. The League of Women Voters was behind it. Oak Hill Elementary President Pat Burdick pronounced it a good one; Hyde Elementary PTA co-president Jeff Swope promised support from the Hyde community.

And so it went last week as a $40.2 million school budget was tentatively put into place by the School Committee. One sticking point concerning the school department's elimination of funds to pay for school busing for private school students drew some criticism from parents of private school children but on the whole the budget process was remarkably smooth.

The budget, as submitted by Superintendent Strand in his first year as head of the local schools, is an increase of only 2.1 percent over last year. It speaks well of his abilities as an administrator and it attests to his talent for working closely — and coorperatively — with the Newton School Committee.

The mayor and aldermen should support this budget as an example of tight management and constructive — not destructive — cost containment.

A point for pride

The Garden City notched another plus recently when the First Baptist Church in Newton Centre was named to the National Register of Historic Place.

In case you missed it, the First Baptist is the church with the towering tower at the corner of Beacon and Centre Streets. It's also the one with the gargoyles and ornamented downspouts — something amateur architectural aficionados like us can't resist.

The parishioners, who have no doubt always been fond of their church building, should be proud of this latest recognition. After all this is the church which once boasted Samuel Francis Smith, author of "America" as its pastor back in the 1800s.

It is always curious to contrast history with our present-day situation at times like this. So those who drive past the First Baptist Church of Newton and admire its unique facade might consider that in 1887, when it was built, the construction cost was tagged at $90,000.

One would be hard-pressed to find a house in Newton Centre for that price today.

It's that time of year again. Fantasy Island, You Asked for It and Ripley's Believe it or Not all wrapped into one.

It's budget time for the Garden City.

Budget time is a fascinating experience. And there are certain traditions which must be upheld, and which I have mentioned in these columns before.

There's Police Chief William Quinn's academy award-winning performances; Library Director Virginia Tashjian's emotional pleas; and, of course, the war between the School Committee and Board of Aldermen, if you can call it a war.

Actually it is a mismatch since the School Committee has won every round. With even more school advocates elected to the board in the last election the Las Vegas oddsmakers have taken this year's budget battle off the boards.

But you know who the master is of this confrontation? Do you know who the real victor is during this battle of the legislative titans of the city? Do you know who is so clever at maneuvering each year that he actually comes out favored by both sides? Who else? The mayor is the master playwright of this drama.

While the mayor was in Taiwan the stage was being set. So we will set the scene for you for the play "I don't throw the hand grenade; I just pull the pin and hand it over."

ACT I

The School Committee proposes a budgetary increase which is in excess of Proposition 2½ guidelines. The mayor objects to the budget and states, in public, that he will not support any budget in excess of that which he has set forth previously.

ACT II

It's the meeting of the actual school budget vote. The mayor, with the entire school lobby sitting in the audience, casts his vote: Abstain.

No need to antagonize "Concern," of course. Especially when he has his master plan ready to implement and an unsuspecting Board of Aldermen ready to bite.

ACT III

City budget is now in excess of Proposition 2½ guidelines.

The mayor has, in previous years, taken the position that he merely transmits the school budget to the Board of Aldermen. However, a new court decision in Leominster now gives him the clear right to cut the budget.

This could result in a whole new plot but why should the playwright and leading actor tamper with a proven crowd pleaser?

ACT IV

The mayor calls the Board of Aldermen into his office and tells them the school budget is too high and that the board must cut it or cut other city departments.

He suggests that they send him resolutions and that he "will give them due consideration."

ACT V

Budget is now being reviewed by the Finance Committee. Unsuspecting aldermen are asking questions about school appropriations and operations, antagonizing all the spectators with each question.

Cuts are suggested by several members. The school lobby is unaware the mayor has sent his top gun with a list of recommended cuts in the school budget, to private meetings with key aldermen.

Cuts are passed. Scchool lobby is on the phone to its members.

ACT VI

Full Board of Aldermen meets on the school budget. Votes on each recommended cut are taken.

Aldermen in a dilemma. They don't want to cut school budget but the only alternatives are to pass the budget as is, exceeding Proposition 2½, requiring referenda, angering taxpayers and losing supporters.

Other alternative is to cut the school budget, anger school lobby, Concern gets candidates to run resulting in a tough election come November.

ACT VII

Mayor reviews aldermanic actions.

He knows that if aldermen don't cut the budget he can blame them for buckling to the school lobby and being fiscally irresponsible.

And if the aldermen do cut the budget he can state that he merely transmitted the budget and that the aldermen are totally responsible.

FINAL SCENE

The mayor hands aldermanic budget to his top aide, smiles, and says, "Take care of this like we usually do." Mayor exits.

CRITIQUE

This play has had a long run in Newton City Hall.

It draws record crowds and provides outstanding performances from all participants. And maybe it will continue to play for several more years.

But remember, even "My Fair Lady" was eventually closed down.

Parent angered at mixed signals on sex

To the editor;

On March 16 the Newton Graphic, page two, printed an article which quoted Newton North High School Principal Marya Levenson and Newton District Court Judge Monte Basbas speaking on adolescence.

Ms. Levenson stated that "adolescence is a time of testing limits..." and that "the most necessary thing for parents and teachers to do is to maintain a sense of authority over the youth. Be clear about limits."

Judge Basbas "censured parents for letting their children stray." He is quoted as saying "Far too frequently we as parents walk away from our children and hope someone else will do the job for us." He requires the parents of offenders under 18 to accompany their children to court.

On the front page of the same issue of The Graphic there was another article concerning adolescence.

University of Massachusetts professor Linda Gordon gave a lecture to adolescents at Newton South High School. Her subject was the history of birth control and abortion. She referred to the federal regulation requiring that parents be notified if their children younger than 18 have been prescribed birth control (the "squeal law") and said to the students that she feels the regulation "is terrible for moral and practical reasons."

These articles reflect the mixed messages given by society to parents and children. On the one hand parents should maintain "a sense of authority" and be responsible for their children until they are 18.

On the other hand adolescent "women" are given birth control prescriptions by federally funded clinics, the clinics thereby giving adult and governmental tacit support to the adolescents' sexual activity. This is done whether or not the parents approve of their minor children having sexual relations.

Incidentally, have you noticed in discussing adolescent girls in reference to birth control, pregnancy or abortion they are usually referred to as "women." What does this say? That sexual activity confers maturity? Is this the message that we wish to convey?

Currently, notification to parents that minor children are being prescribed birth control, is being blocked by the courts because it "invades the adolescent's right to privacy." Privacy from the parents, that is.

If the subject were drug use, not sex, the advice to parents and children would be quite different. Children would be strongly advised to avoid drugs for the sake of their physical and emotional health.

Parents who suspect drug use would be pressed to react quickly and firmly. It is recommended, among other things, that they search their child's room and possessions. What happened to the right to privacy?

Isn't early sexual involvement and its potential damage to physical and emotional health as serious a subject as drug use?

It is puzzling and discouraging to me as a mother of teenagers to read that the principal of one Newton high school wishes me to maintain my authority over my children and "be clear about limits" while the administration of the other high school presents an adult speaker who states to the students her support of their right to sexual activity regardless of their parents' views.

It is disheartening and infuriating to me as I attempt to be a responsible parent to minor children to find an outside agency can prescribe medication to my children and grant tacit approval for an activity of which I may strongly disapprove.

The federal government incoopration with the local birth control clinic can undermine my authority with my children but at the same time assumes no responsibility for them.

Group objects to proposal for health clinic

To the editor;

According to local City Hall information a small, relatively unknown medical group designating itself as the Center for Ambulatory Surgery now being formed in a distant part of the country, Washington, D.C., is demanding a certificate of need to open a clinic for certain unspecified outpatient surgical procedures in the city of Newton.

A tentative site now being considered is in our Newton Upper Falls district.

A meeting sponsored by the citywide Newton Association for Local Health Control was held at a fraternal hall recently and attended by many concerned and indignant citizens.

Those present were unanimous in their opposition and expressed deep fears at the propsect of this intrusion by an unknown ambulatory surgical clinic in a city where there are now fine, complete and proven services in all areas of health including five nearby hospitals of local and even national repute.

These clinics are totally unnecessary, they pose a serious medical risk and are generally opposed by almost all of the reputable hospitals across the country.

The Newton Association for Local Health Control is on record as being unequivocally opposed to this intrusion into our city's health care. It is confident that the area's hospital authorities and the great majority of physicians and citiznes citizens, all concerned for the health and safety of Newton people, will reject and resist this unwarranted unacceptable and dubious medical venture.

Reconsider private transport

To the editor;

We are writing this letter not just to protest the proposed termination of busing of private school students, but also the city's lack of concern for the safety of these same private school students.

Our children were bused to Solomon Schechter Day School not because we were over the city's mileage limitation but because it was not safe for them to cross Brookline Street and Dedham Street at an hour when traffic is impossible to negotiate.

We feel that the city has an obligation to insure safe passage for all its citizens especially those of school age. We propose that the city must provide either a traffic officer at Brookline and Dedham Streets or a traffic light.

We are well aware that there is a cross light at Oak Hill Street, but its use is not feasible as our children would still have to cross Brookline Street and then walk down to that light, cross and then either walk back to Wiswall Street or continue to Spiers Road. Both of those routes require the children to leave almost an hour before school starts. (During winter months it is still dark at 7 a.m.)

That cross light was put at Oak Hill Street so that the children could walk from Oak Hill Park to Memorial Spaulding School. Since the schools were combined the city has bused these children both to and from school, with or without the cross light. If it is unsafe and unfeasible for those children to use that cross light, we can say that it is not safe and not feasible for our children to use it either.

Also if you are looking to save money why not stop busing those children as well. I am sure that it costs something to bus them and the money saved could be used on education.

The city owes its children safe passage to and from school, whether it be PUBLIC or PRIVATE school. They are still citizens of Newton and therefore entitled to its protection.

Newton police log

Intruders empty handed

OAK HILL — Nothing was reported missing following a housebreak last week on Donna Road, police said. Burglars gained entrance into the house by cutting a porch window screen and slipping a door lock sometime during the day.

Burglars enter via cellar

NEWTON CENTRE — A Parker Street house was burglarized sometime between 5:30 p.m. and 9 p.m. last Tuesday while the residents were attending a memorial service, police said.

The burglars entered the house by breaking a cellar window, according to police. Assorted men's and women's jewelry and a pillow case were reported stolen.

When police officers questioned neighbors they learned that a resident had seen an unfamiliar vehicle parked on the street during the time the break occurred, according to the report.

Car radio, cassette gone

CHESTNUT HILL — Thieves smashed the driver's side window of a 1975 Volkswagon Rabbit and stole the radio and cassette player Tuesday afternoon while the car was parked at the Chestnut Hill Mall parking garage, police said.

Two face shoplifting charges

NEWTONVILLE — A Natick man and a Boston woman were arraigned Wednesday in District Court on shoplifting charges in connection with an incident Tuesday at the Purity Supreme supermarket, records state.

Police went to the Washington Street store after an employee called to say he observed two people in the store take several cartons of cigarettes, according to police.

Arrested at the supermarket were Prince A. Davis, 31, of 5 Silver Hill Rd., Natick, and Joy Roberts, 34, of 42 Savin St., Roxbury, who were both charged with shoplifting, police records state.

They were released on personal recognizance. A trial date was not set.

Man ordered to pay restitution

NEWTON — A Boston man charged with several counts of larceny and uttering was ordered to pay restitution to a Newton hardware store at a trial Wednesday in District Court.

William R. Doyle, 27, of 804 East 2nd St., South Boston, was charged with three counts each of larceny under $100 and uttering false purchase orders and checks. He had been arrested by police in connection with incidents last Nov. 26 at Swartz Hardware, located at 353 Watertown St. records state.

Court records state Doyle forged company purchase orders on three occasions to buy items from the store. Doyle admitted to suffient facts and a judge found sufficient facts, ordering Doyle to a probation term and to pay restitution to the store through the court probation department.

Fire extinguisher stolen

NEWTON CENTRE — A fire extinguisher was the only item reported stolen following a break last week into Hefferman's Dry Cleaning store on Pelham Street, police said. The intruders entered the building by forcing two doors, police said.

Plans for library

croaching on the green belt effect the presently undeveloped lot gives to the area.

"To keep the green space near Walnut Street, I moved the location back to the Homer Street parking lot now used by City Hall," said O'Sullivan.

An estimated 60 spaces of city parking would be lost only temporarily, since the plans call for a total of 160 parking spaces located at the site. Access to the lot would be from Homer Street.

Also being incorporated from City Hall are city archives that are in need of a "place to go." Design changes in O'Sullivan's drawings make way for a historical documents area to the tune of 2,500 square feet.

Characterizing himself as more "practical builder" rather than a "theoretician of design," O'Sullivan firmly believes it is more important for a building to "work right than to just look right."

Seeing something being built and testing his own carpentry skills at remodeling, O'Sullivan said he knew he wanted to be an architect since junior high school.

O'Sullivan now works full-time for the Boston architectural firm of BCH and he primarily comes up with plans for historical rehabilitation projects.

Keeping them neat

Jackson Homestead Director Duscha Scott adjusted the collar of a mannequin dressed in the opulent fashion of the 1880s in a Newton Historical Society fashion exhibit on display entitled "Keeping up with the Colbys." The Colbys were members of a wealthy Newton family and the exhibit contrasts their styles with those of Newtonites of lesser means during the late 19th century. (Photo by Ren Norton)

Praise for one of their own

To the editor;

I am writing you on behalf of the staff and board members of the Newton Community Service Centers, Inc. present at the 26th Annual Northeastern Region National Conference of Christians and Jews Neighborhood Awards luncheon to express our deep sense of pride in the award recipient from Newton.

Of the 10 recipients of letters of commendation and pins, three were well known vital members of the Newton, Wellesley, Weston RSVP sponsored by the Newton Community Service Centers. It was a proud moment for Barbara Ireland, director of the local RSVP, joined by myself and large throngs of well wishers to witness these outstanding individuals cited for dedicated volunteer services to improve human relations in the community.

The countless hours of personal giving by Anna Fleisher, Elizabeth Merrill and Norman Pratt to the end result to improve the quality of life for others was noted and moved each of us with their humble acceptance of the well-deserved commendations.

It truly can be said that these distinguished individuals clearly are identified in the saying appearing on the program cover for this special event. "To believe in our own worth we must have respct for the human dignity of all." It was indeed a special privilege to have been present for this most significant function.

Ocean conservation talk focuses on Israeli role

WEST NEWTON — "Research in Oceanography and Current Issues in Conservation Affecting the Eastern Mediterranean Sea" will be the subject of a talk by Dr. Colette Serruya at the fourth Annual Meeting of the Committee for the Development of Oceanography in Israel, at The Second Church in Newton, 60 Highland St., Thursday, March 31, at 8 p.m.

The public is invited; there will be no solicitation of funds.

Also on the program will be Fourth District Congressman Barney Frank, a proponent of protection of natural resources, who is currently a member of numerous House Committees, including the House Operations Sub-Committee on the Environment, Energy and Natural Resources. Chairman of the meeting will be David Guberman.

Dr. Serruya became director-general of the Israel Oceanographic Institute in 1982. She is a limnologist, was director of the Kinneret Limnological Laboratory from 1970-81, and previously headed a project to study Lake Geneva. Her book, The Lakes of the Warm Belt, published by Cambridge University Press, will be released this summer.

The Institute, based in Haifa, has developed techniques for fish farming to enable increased production of a major protein source to feed people of the region. Preservation of water supplies, exploration and cleaning of the Mediterranean's resources, and prevention of coastal erosion in the area are among the Institute's other priorities.

Israeli and Egyptian scientists participate in cooperative marine technology programs under the leadership of the Institute.

The Committee for the Development of Oceanography in Israel is a 10-year old support group for the Institute in the U.S. whose members include many scientists and several hundred local citizens.

For further information, contact Jane Weingarten at 965-2658.

Board seeks assessing accountability

NEWTON — The aldermen have authorized Mayor Theodore D. Mann to file a home rule petition in the legislature that would allow him to appoint one of the three members of the Board of Assessors to act as "director of assessment administration."

The move is the first tangible result of an audit of the Assessing Department which recommended that responsibility for the administration be delegated to one person.

A "sunset provision" will be included in the special legislation which will terminate its effect after one year. At that time, according to Chief Budget Officer David Wilkinson, the department's performance will be rated to see if some more radical reorganization is warranted.

Wilkinson said, "We'll have to go back to scratch if it doesn't function" after a year.

The legislation and the audit from which it stems are all measures taken to eliminate the confusion in the department and the mammoth backlog of work that have resulted from the recent citywide property revaluation.

Wilkinson said, "The law is now silent about executive responsiblity in the Assessing Department." Executive responsibility is now spread around the three members of the Board of Assessors, he said, and the changes are being made to make one of them accountable.

Alderman Richard Bullwinkle, the only one to vote against the proposed special Legislation, commented, "We are doing the mayor's work for him. We don't need a reorganization of the department. I think we need some people to do the work."

John Rogers, president of the taxpayers' group Save Our Homes II, advocated a reorganization of the Assessing Department, but cautioned that the effort should not distract the assessors for what he considers to be their primary responsibility, the fair and equitable evaluation of properties in the city.

Rogers said the assessors still have a lot of work ahead of them reviewing properties that have been wrongly assessed after being inappropriately compared to other properties in different neighborhoods.

Correcting statments of land values and updating the differences between the assessed value and the sales price of properties are also top priorities, Rogers said.

Chief Assessor Robert Palmer, in the course of meeting with representatives of SOH II, has basically agreed with the group's priorities, according to Rogers.

One-way restrictions on 5 streets near BC lifted by aldermen

NEWTON — "We'll be back," said one resident Thursday after bitter debate resulted in the aldermen rescinding one-way road restrictions in Chestnut Hill.

The Public Safety and Transportation Committee voted 4 to 1 on Thursday to recommend removing traffic restrictions on five streets, opening them to thousands of cars from Commonwealth Avenue. They are: Old Colony, Crosby, Manet, Hammondswood and Wachusetts Roads.

Committee member Michael Malec echoed the dilemma before 80 residents attending the meeting, saying, "Solomon himself would despair at this situation where the short-term solution is painful. Bluntly put we must sacrifice one street for another and one section of Chestnut Hill for another."

About 1,100 cars from Crosby Road shifted to Hammond Street as a result of the 18-month-old restrictions, according to City Traffic Engineer David Tannozzini.

One group of neighbors has a lawsuit pending to eliminate the one-way rules, but other Chestnut Hill neighbors favor the one-way strictures.

Meanwhile, the State Department of Public Works (DPW) this week ruled the city ordinance creating the restrictions invalid.

"Neighbors think it's (the court case) a war-like act, but they have put the problem onto us," said Monadnock Road resident Harris Baseman, who wants to eradicate the restrictions.

A Hammondswood resident observed the traffic war is dividing up the neighborhood.

Boston College was dragged into the fracas by residents saying, it is not a "good neighbor" and causes much of thier traffic woes.

"The quality of life is being destroyed in favor of B.C.," said Crosby Road resident Virginia Ronan, pointing out that College Road is one-way for the safety of the college students, while her road is used by children and available to rush hour traffic.

The Traffic Commission stated College Road is part of the long-term solution to the traffic headache. Chairman of the Public Safety and Transportation Committee Joesph DePasquale said he is looking into securing College Road as a two-way street for commuters.

Also speaking against the motion to rescind the traffic restrictions was Dennis Mathaisel: "Chestnut Hill is in serious danger of losing its character and is sandwiched between B.C. and the mall."

David Atkinson of Priscilla Road said, "All roads lead to Hammond Street" and it is the best route for commuters.

Resident Marvin Silverstein countered saying, "Hammond Street is not safe."

Chairman DePasquale had opened the committee session to the public, and after hearing the neighbor squabble for three hours, Alderman Rodney Barker asked, "What are we doing here?" Referring to the DPW decision, he said, "We have to open the streets by law."

The DPW ruled against Newton because the one-way ordinances are for only the initial 10 feet of the roads and not from "intersection to intersection."

Waiting for a letter from the DPW, City Solicitor Daniel Funk said on Wednesday, "If it says what we think it's going to say we'll have to take the (one-way) signs down."

Aldermen DePasquale and Marcy Richmond raised the possibility of putting the restrictions back up by voting for a "Do Not Enter" sign at the entrance of the roads. They also noted Sumner Street in Newton Center was certified as a partial one-way by the DPW in 1979, setting a precedent for the Chestnut Hill roads.

"It is similar in the respect it does not go from intersection to intersection," said DePasquale.

Alderman Verne Vance was forced to abstain from voting on the issue after being accused by Priscilla Road resident Michael Brady of appearing biased in favor of removing the restrictions.

Brady noted Vance's law partner is one of the members of the class action suit filed against the city to remove the restrictions giving what Brady called an "appearance of impropriety."

Alderman Vance responded by withdrawing from the vote and said he would ask the city solicitor to render an opinion in the matter.

Helping hands

Students in the fourth and fifth grades at the Solomon Schechter Day School pitched in to load non-Kosher foodstuffs into the back of a van for transport to charitable agencies in the area.

Stuffed

Schechter Day School students had the van filled to the brim last week as they emptied their homes of non-Kosher foodstuffs and prepared for the traditional Jewish celebration of Passover, which began at sundown Monday. (Photos by Art Illman)

Program combines Passover holiday with aid for poor

NEWTON — The Boston area's Jewish community is combining Passover tradition with an effort to aid the poor.

For the fourth year Project "Mazon" (sustenance) is collecting "chametz" (food not kosher for Passover) and donating it to those in need.

Passover, the eight-day Feast of Freedom which began Monday at sundown, commemorates the escape of the Jews from bondage in Egypt. On the day before the holiday begins, it is customary for Jews to remove from their homes all traces of leavened bread or foods containing yeast. Matzoh and various foods with unleavened ingredients replace bread products on the menu.

While many Jews have customarily transferred their "chametz" to non-Jews, then repurchased it after Passover, Project "Mazon" distributes the food to at least a dozen shelters and soup kitchens.

Last year, some 250 bags of groceries were collected. This year, coordinators of the program hope to expand it ot several hundred more bags.

Members of Newton's Jewish Community brought their leavened foodstuffs to the Solomon Schechter School Thursday. Students from the school transferred the groceries to vans for transport to distribution points.

Sponsoring the project is the Hillel Council of Greater Boston in cooperation with the Combined Jewish Philanthropies of Greater Boston, the American Jewish Congress, the Synagogue Council of Massachusetts, and a number of synagogues and Jewish Community Centers in the area.

Mishkan Tefila plans memorial symposium

CHESTNUT HILL — The Annual Program sponsored by the Rabbi Herman H. and Mignon Rubenovitz Memorial Fund will take place on Sunday evening, May 8 in the Congregation Mishkan Tefila Social Hall.

It will take the form of a symposium on the subject "Art and Architecture: The American-Jewish View." Speakers will include Professor Gerald Bernstein of Brandeis University, who teaches history of art and has made a study of synagogue architecture in America; and Bernard Pucker, owner of the Pucker/Safrai Gallery on Newbury Street.

A champagne reception and a special exhibit related to the subject of the evening is being planned.

The Committee for this event is still in formation and includes Mr. and Mrs. Howard Richard, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Kaitz, Mr. and Mrs. Myron Jaffe and Mr. and Mrs. Morton Lieberman, all of Newton.

NEWTON CORNER — Photographs which compare and document the growth of Boston from 1850-1981 are featured in the Newton Free Library gallery March 30 - May 1.

In a dramatic exhibit, architectural photographer Peter Vanderwarker of Newton has paired old photographs, many loaned by the Boston Public Library, with new ones. Vanderwarker will show slides and discuss his work on April 11 at 7:30 p.m. at the Main Library, 414 Centre St., Newton Corner.

Vanderwarker wanted to match old and new views of Boston exactly, to document change.

"The primary task," says Vanderwarker, "was to locate the exact point from which the old view had been taken."

"Since the city has changed so much, many of the old vantage points no longer exist. I was often dismayed to find a beautiful old view completely obliterated by a huge new office tower. Often, getting the camera to the old vantage point required hanging out of windows or going across to old and sometimes precarious rooftops."

Included in the exhibit are photographs of some of Boston's best known spots: Fanuel Hall, the Arlington Street Church, Scollay Square (Government center), the Back Bay, the State House, an early aerial photograph of Boston and much more.

More than 50 pairs of photographs are included in Vanderwarker's recently published book, "Boston Then and Now" which was produced with the help of the Boston Public Library.

Vanderwarker, who lives on Boyd Street in Newton, graduated from Phillps Academy in 1965 and the University of California at Berkley in 1971. He is an instructor in architectural design and advanced photography at the Boston Architectural Center, and has had work published in major architectural journals.

Main Library hours are Monday-Thursday 9-9; Friday 9-6; Saturday 9-5 and Sunday 1-4. For more information call 552-7145.

Her photos focus on infant care

BOSTON — Born Early, a new exhibition featuring photos by a Newton woman, at Boston's Museum of Science, offers an opportunity to see a premature infant within a neonatal intensive care unit.

Almost all the 23 photographs are by Newton resident Georgia Litwack, and were taken during preparation of a book, Born Early, to be published in April.

Litwack is co-author with Dr. Mary Ellen Avery. The infant's father, Mark Weber, Boston, took two of the photos in the exhibition.

Emerging in her 26th week, instead of the normal 40th, baby Adrienne had to be supplied with artificial support systems to replace the amniotic sac and umbilical cord of her mother. Like all pre-term babies, Adrienne was very small in size and weight. The major problem for her and other preemies was the underdevelopment of her digestive, respiratory, nervous and circulatory systems.

The photos reveal the array of electornic apparatus in the unit and the equipment Adrienne needed, sucha s a an incubator with oxygen tank, and a heart monitor.

Litwack is a freelance photojournalist whose work has been exhibited in museums and colleges and has appeared in local, national, and international publications. She has had two previous exhibitions at the Museum of Science.

Sisterhood Sabbath at Emanuel on April 2

NEWTON — Members of the Sisterhood Temple Emanuel of Newton will conduct the annual Sisterhood Sabbath on Saturday, April 2, hosting Soviet economy specialist and Wellesley College professor Marshall I. Goldman as guest speaker.

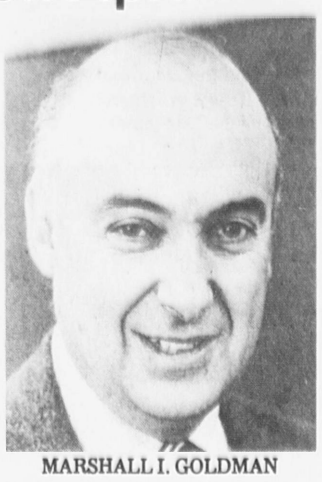

His topic will be "Who lost Soviet Jewry?"

The program during the week of Passover will begin at 9:30 a.m. in the temple sanctuary.

Goldman, who holds the Class of 1919 Professorship at Wellesley College, is also associate director of the Russian Research Center at Harvard University.

Goldman is currently researching how the Soviet economy, one of his areas of expertise, will be affected by a change in leadership. Goldman is also the author of USSR in Crisis: The Failure of an Economic Model, published this year.

For his research on the Soviet economy energy and environmental matters he has made several trips to the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

MARSHALL I. GOLDMAN

He has studied Russia's marketing facilities as well as foreign and economic relations with neutral and Communist countries. As a Fulbright-Hayes Lecturer on Economics to the Moscow State University he lectured on the American economy to students, Soviet audiences and the foreign business and diplomatic community in Moscow.

League eyes two forums discussing policy issues

NEWTON CENTRE — As heated debate continues on U.S. military buildup and defense spending, the League of Women Voters is seeking member agreement to take action on national security policies.

Two public information meetings, aimed at increasing citizen awareness, will be held on April 5 at 9:15 a.m. and repeated April 10 at 7:30 p.m. Both meetings will be held at the First Baptish Church in Newton Centre. The meetings are cosponsored by the Newton and Needham Leagues.

The League national security study committee will examine our relationship with other nations and the weapons capabilities of both the U.S. and the Soviet Union.

A resolution to study U.S. national security policies and their impact on domestic programs and international relations was adopted at the League national convention last spring. If a consensus is reached by League members this spring, the League may then develop criteria to use in the current debate on arms control proposals, agreements and negotiations.

The League feels this is an appropriate time to present its findings as citizens are showing unprecedented concern over naitonal security policies and the threat of nuclear war.

Italo-American film planned

NONANTUM — "Italian American," a documentary film directed by Martin Scorsese, will be screened Tuesday, April 12 at 7 p.m. at the Nonantum Branch of the Newton Free Library, 144 Bridge St.

In interviews with his mother and father in New York's Little Italy, the Scorsese's recreate family legends; their parents' arrival in New York, and the early immigrant experiences. At the same time, Mrs. Scorsese makes her famous spaghetti sauce, whose recipe is revealed at the end of the film.

Made in 1975, "Italian American" is academy award winner Scorsese's tribute to his ethnic background.

Following the film, John Amoroso, a Newton North High Schol teacher, will lead a discussion of the stereotypes that Italians and Americans have about each other. Amoroso has developed a course in Italian American ethnic studies. Viviana Planine, who came to American three years ago and teaches Italian at Newton South High School, and Paula Emmanuel, housewife, mother, and voracious reader, who has been in this country ten years, will also participate in the discussion.

This is part VI in the series, "It Then and Italy Now: The Italian-American Conception," funded by a grant from the Massachusetts Foundation for Humanities and Public Policy. For more information, call 552-7163.

Coffee will be served before the meeting. Chairman of the day is Isabel Conway and hostess at the church is Lorraine Holcomb.

Kitchen and Bath Design & DECOR

Bob and Al Norberg

Struggling with a stack of heavy baking dishes, when only one is needed, is an ordeal in most kitchens. Because of their diverse sizes, they never seem to stack neatly. One way to resolve this problem is to store them vertically in a deep cabinet drawer beside the oven. The individual dishes can be kept separated by vertical hardboard dividers. Each divider can be clipped into place on the front and back walls of the drawer. In this way, they can be moved about to make room for dishes of differing widths. Extra space can be used to store cook books and appliance manuals.

Modern day products and technology have presented the home dweller with a multitude of choices for decoration, efficiency and beauty within the kitchen and bath area. At CHARL MARC KITCHEN & BATH CENTER, 4174 Washington St., Roslindale, we are up to date on all that is currently available. Combined with our experience in design and remodeling, we are the people you want to talk to to help you make the best choice possible. Bring us your decorating and design problems. We will give you the solutions. Tel. 325-9400. Showroom daily 9-5, Wed. & Fri. eves. 7-9.

Len Zakim promoted by the ADL

NEWTON — The torch is being passed on to a new generation of professional leadership at the New England Office of the Anti-Defamation League.

After 31 years as the ADL's New England regional director, Sol Kolack is passing that mantle on to Leonard Zakim of Newton, the ADL's East Coast civil rights director and counsel. Zakim's promotion took effect last week.

Kolack will continue to serve as the Eastern States Area director, supervising the activities of seven regional offices. He has held that title in addition to the regional directorship.

Zakim, an attorney, is co-chairman of the Greater Boston Civil Rights Coalition and a member of the Newton Human Rights Commission Advisory Board. He serves as a member of the Middlesex District Attorney's Civil Rights Advisory Committee, the Governor's Advisory Committee on the Homeless, and the Boston Committee's Crisis Prevention team. He also serves on the Martin Luther King Breakfast Committee for Boston.

Prior to joining the ADL, Zakim volunteered for and was employed by the Greater Boston Legal Services in Roxbury. In 1978, he was Southeastern Massachusetts area campaign coordinator for Governor Michael S. Dukakis.

Zakim has written and spoken extensively on civil rights issues, particularly on the problems of anti-Semitism and extremist hate groups. He has appeared as a guest on numerous radio and television shows.

Recently, he organized an ADL-sponsored trip to the Middle East with Sen. Paul Tsongas, and he has spoken on the Middle East situation to campus and community groups.

Zakim is a graduate of the New England School of Law and American University.

As regional director, he will be responsible for all ADL programming, civil rights and leadership activities in the five New England states.

Tiger sextet has holes to fill

By Steve Tiberi
Staff Writer

NEWTON — It's a matter of philosophy with Don Crowley. He just wants to enjoy the success of this past season and doesn't really want to spend too much time, right now, thinking about getting his Newton North hockey team ready for the 1983-84 season.

Can anyone blame him? Crowley's 1982-83 team surprised quite a few people by capturing the Suburban League crown with an 8-2-2 record. They continued their solid play by winning their first game in the Eastern Mass. Division I Hockey Tourney before ending the season with a respectable 12-4-2 mark.

"We had a special group of players this past year," said Crowley. "It's tough right now to start talking about what we have coming back and who will be playing where. All lot things fell into place for us this season. We have to have that same kind of thing next season. I'm content to just enjoy this past season for awhile."

Crowley also advises his underclassmen to get away from hockey for a time in the spring. He suggests they partcipate in other sports to maintain the competitive edge.

"I think if they're always playing hockey," said Crowley, "it'll just become a mechanical thing and they won't get any enjoyment out of it. We encourage our players to get involved in other sports so when the time comes for hockey they'll be excited about coming back."

When Crowley does force himself to look ahead to next year's squad, he likes what he sees. The Tigers are returning four of their five top goal scorers, including the top two scorers on the team. Starting goalie Steve MacKay will also be back to backbone the Tigers.

Any good hockey must be sound in the goal and MacKay proved in his junior season that he can carry a team. In his final seven regular season games he allowed only nine goals, inlcuding four shutouts. He played extremely well in the state tourney and gained valuable experience.

"Steve's return is a big plus for the team," said Crowley. "He came on strong for us this past season and played better down the stretch as he gained confidence. He always had the ability to be a top flight goalie, but once he gained the confidence in himself, he was tough to beat.

"Steve's going to a goalie school in the summer," said Crowley. "He's going to learn the finer points of playing the position and imrpove his game by simply learning more."

Mark Buckley and Ken Castriotta will be junior netminders next season. They each backed up MacKay this season and may challenge the incumbent for a starting position.

The Newton North defense may need the most rebuilding. Suburban League co-MVP defenseman Dave Buckley has indicated he's still undecided where he'll attend school for his senior season.

If Buckley doesn't return, Paul Boudreau will be the lone returner on defense for the Tigers. This means a search for two or three defensemen is necessary. "We might have to move some people around," said Crowley. It's definitely an area which will require rebuilding."

Luckily the Tigers have a wealth of returning forwards. Newton North returns its top line of center Tom Ryan, left winger Chris Pachus and right winger Tim Marchand. Pachus was the leading scorer for the Tigers with 13 goals and 17 assists for 30 points. Ryan was right behind him scoring 12 goals and handing out 14 assists for 26 points.

Marchand was the fourth leading scorer on the Tigers in '82-83 scoring 11 goals and dealing out 11 assists for 22 points.

"Right now," said Crowley, "it's hard to say whether or not they'll be playing together next season. If we do have to split up the line, we'll be losing quite a bit of point production."

The Tigers must rely on juniors who showed promise this season to pick up the scoring slack. Winger Tom Grady did a fine job on a line with seniors John Hickey and Paul Healey. Grady popped in 12 goals and had 12 assists for 19 points. He improved greatly as the season wore on.

Winger Glenn LeGault also made great strides during the season. He played on a line with Jon Brownstein, who finished the season with eight points. Mike Burns, Bob Connerney and David Kanter formed a fourth line at times this season and they picked up valuable experience.

"We have a good nucleus returning," said Crowley, "but we do have to fill some holes next year. We have some people who may be able to help coming up from the junior varsity, but right now it's too early to say anything for sure."

Quinn's 1st year shortened by injury

BOSTON — Of the three freshmen on the women's basketball team at Boston University, Debbie Quinn of Newton enjoyed the most success despite playing in only six games.

In the home opener, a 92-64 win over Yale, Quinn started at guard and scored seven points while pulling down a team high eight rebounds.

In her next game, a 75-63 victory over Fairfield, she roped a career high 10 rebounds.

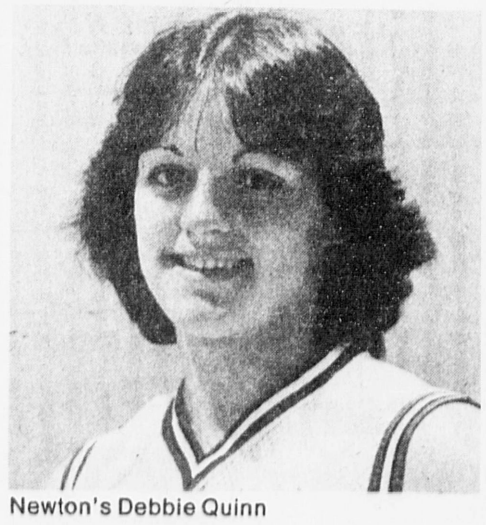

Having played the first seven minutes of her sixth game, Debbie fractured her kneecap and was lost for the rest of the season.

Faced with a scheduled laced with nationally ranked teams, the Terriers slumped to 9-17. They ended the seaosn with an impressive win over Villanova of the Big East.

Quinn was a junior as Newton North High School was crowned state champion. A Suburban League All-Star her junior and senior years, she was named to a Boston newspaper All-Scholastic and the Converse All-American second teams as a senior.

The basketball team's Most Valuable Player and leading scorer as a senior, she also excelled in soccer and softball, earning Suburban League All-Star and Boston all-scholastic awards as a junior and as a senior in soccer.

Debbie, a physical therapy major, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Quinn of Melrose Street, Auburndale.

Injury-prone Lanier out of Bullets game

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — The Milwaukee Bucks said Monday center Bob Lanier, who has missed a large part of the season because of problems with his ailing knees, will be out again for the club's next game.

Coach Don Nelson said Lanier will be out four or five days and could miss two more games. Earlier in the year he had an operation on his right knee, but now the left is giving him trouble.

Beth Butcher displays top form on the balance beam

Butcher's determination pays off

WALTHAM — For five hours each day and six days each week, gymnast Beth Butcher trains at the Massachusetts Gymnastics Center in Waltham.

The hard work has obviously paid off for the 12-year-old from Waltham, as Beth recently qualified for the State Gymnastics Championships to be held this weekend at UMass-Amherst.

A seventh-grade honor student at Kennedy Junior High, Beth earned her trip to the state meet by scoring an all-around personal-high of 70.65 in a meet at the MGC March 6 and 7.

The daughter of John and Jane Butcher, 13 Larchmont Ave., Waltham, Beth competes in the United States Gymnastic Federation Class I program.

"Beth is and outstanding athlete," her MGC coach, Steve Nunno said. And she is a very talented gymanst."

In competition since she was seven, Beth is in her second year of Class I action. She reached the state meet last year at that level and two years ago was a second place finisher at the state level in Class II.

Beth's road to Amherst began on the first day of the two-day competition, during the compulsory phase.

Going up against some of the best young gymnasts New England has to offer, Beth turned in an outstanding performance in all her routines, scoring a 35.65 total. Included in that career-high figure was a superb 9.2 in her floor exercise routine.

It was on the second day of competition, during the more difficult optional routines, that Beth really shined.

In only her second optional competition of the season, Beth hit for a 9.15 on the vault, an 8.80 on the floor exercises, an 8.80 on the high bar and an 8.25 on the balance beam.

In winning the vault, floor exercises and high bar and turning in the strong performance on the beam, Beth easily exceeded the 64 point total necessary to qualify for the New England Championships.

After Beth's 70.65-point performance, Nunno said, "She was just incredible on the floor and vault and just really fun to watch."

Ironically, Beth's personal-best performance erased her own record that she set at the MGC in late December. During that meet, her total was 67.45, as she competed in both Class I and II.

A pair of Beth's teammates on the MassStars gymnastics squad also qualified for the state meet back in December.

Cheryl Cooperstein, a 15-year-old ninth grader, put together an excellent performance at the Gymnastics Center. Her fine total of 70.15 qualified her for the Class I Championships at Amherst. Surprisingly, the December meet was Cheryl's first major competition of the season.

Cheryl is the daughter of Carl and Barbara Cooperstein of 19 Oakwood Terrace in Newton.

Debbie Levenson of Newton, a 13-year-old eighth grader at Brown Junior High, qualified for the Class II competition to be held the weekend of March 26 and 27. Her total of 62.30. surpassed the 60.00 that was necessary to qualify.

Reaching the Class II Championships is the culmination of a year in which Debbie has shown constant improvement.

Debbie is the daughter of Arthur and Pam Levenson, 225 Greenwood St., Newton.

Those who are successful in the state meet, will advance to competitions at the regional and national levels to be held later in the year.

Waltham Boys' Club tourney

Newton Youth advances

WALTHAM — The Newton Youth Center held off a strong fourth-quarter surge by the Nisbet Club to hang on to a 65-64 victory Tuesday night in the opening A Division contest of the Waltham Boys'Club Basketball Tournament at the Boys' Club Gym.

The Boys' Club Tournament is in its 41st year and is being sponsored by the Bergin Construction Company.

The win will pit Newton Youth Center against perennial powerhouse Roxbury Titans tonight at 8:15 p.m. in a quarter-final A Division matchup.

What seemed to be an easy win turned into a near nightmare for the Newton Youth Center. The Youth Center, which was comprised of mostly Newton North High basketall players, held a 65-53 lead with 2:20 to go. The Nisbet Club, which featured several players from Waltham High basketball team, then ran off 11 straight points in the final two minutes to close it to 65-64 with nine seconds to show on the clock.

After a missed free throw (one of four misses by Newton in the final minutes) with nine seconds left, Waltham got the rebound and Darren Marcou flew up the court to try and put in the winner.

He cut to the hoop and put up a five-footer that went in and twisted out of the rim. Newton's John Coppola snagged the rebound with two seconds on the clock and he was fouled. He missed the shots, btu Waltham didn't have time to get a shot off.

"We played a little sloppy at the end of the game," said Newton Youth Center coach Kevin Burns. "We've only had one practice as a team and we were missing a top player in Mark Coppola. We were able to hang on however with good rebounding and defense. We just missed two many free throws down the stretch.

Another big factor in Waltham's late rally was a technical foul, which led to five straight points. After Nisebt Club's John Nisbet hit a jumper and a free throw for a three point play, Jerry Nocera got underneath to tap in an offensive rebound and Nisbet trailed, 65-58, with 1:50 to play.

Newton missed and Nisbet came down. Frank Manzelli was fouled while shooting. A Newton player slammed the ball in disgust and the referee whistled a techincal foul. Dave Kaufman hit one of two free throws for the technical and Manzelli hit one of his free throws to make it 65-60. Waltham kept the ball and Nocera scored an inside basket. Waltham's Manzelli then stole a Newton pass and fed Nocera inside. The 6-4 Waltham High forward made the score 65-64 with 30 seconds to play.

Newton held a 29-28 lead at halftime and it stretched the lead by outscoring Nisbet, 22-14, in the third period. Keith Norton led the way for the Newton Youth Center with a game-high 26 points. He scored 12 points in the third quarter. John Coppola was also in double figures for Newton with 14 points.

Nocera finished as the leading Nisbet scorer with 17 points. Brian Scafidi added 11 points, while Marcou chipped in with 10 points.

Woburn will meet the Roxbury Titan B team next Wednesday night, 7 p.m.

Newton Rec swimmers cop title

ACTON — The Newton Recreation Department swim team set 14 team records en route to winning the 1983 Winter Suburban Swim League Championships for the first time Saturday at Acton-Boxboro High School.

The Newton team finished with 1021 points, more than 100 points ahead of the hosts, who took second.

For the season, Newton finished at 9-1, good enough for first-place in the Suburban Swim League.

The record-setting beagn in the graduated medley, when the team of Jean Melido, Abbie Dezotell, Jennifer Hagar and Amy Satter won the event in 1:04.36. In the same category, the boys team, of Joe Dezotell, Michael Beal, Tim Troiano and Doug Karp turned in a record-setting 1:00.2.

Among the 8-and-under individuals, records were set by Amanda Keaveny (18.49 seconds in the 25-butterfly and 20.18 in the 25-backstroke) and Glen Roberts (21.61 in the 25-breaststroke).

Among the 9 and 10-year-old girls, Melissa Dezotell (15.57 in the 25-freestyle), Jennifer Hagar (18.49 in the 25-breaststroke) and the 100-yard relay team of Hagar, Dezotell, Sara Concannon and Lynsey Graham (1:04.45) set new team marks.

In the 9-and-10 boys division, Michael Robertson's time of :20.17 in the 25-breaststroke was a new team best.

In the 15 to 18-year-old group, Abbie Dezotell's 50-butterfly time of :30.96 was also a team record.

Medford edges Mishkan Tefila

BROOKLINE — It could be deja vu. Or maybe just bad luck.

Whatever the reason, the Temple Mishkan Tefila United Synagogue Youth basketball team's season is over, courtesy of a 50-49 double-overtime playoff loss to Medford Wednesday at the Runkle School.

Last season, Medford eliminated Mishkan Tefila by one point, but needed only regulation.

The similarites don't end there, though.

Last year, Mishkan Tefila took an 11-point lead into the final quarter. Wednesday, the lead was only eight, but the result that same–a fourth-quarter scoring drought.

Contracts rule reconsidered

NEWTON — An ordinance designed to give aldermen more control over changes in city contracts, approved Monday night by a 13 to 10 vote, has been held up for reconsideration by one of the aldermen who voted for it.

Alderman Rodney Barker said he was convinced, after he voted, that part of the ordinance violates the separation of powers between the city's executive and legislative branches.

Barker said, "I do support the principle of the first part" of the ordinance, which stipulates that the Board of Aldermen must be informed of any substantive changes in city contracts.

He said he decided the second part of the ordinance was "illegal." The part he objected to states that the full board of Aldermen shall meet within 72 hours of being notified of changes to determine whether those changes are consistent with the original contract.

The ordinance was proposed by President Matthew Jefferson after Mayor Theodore D. Mann made substantial changes in a contract with the firm responsible for the recent citywide revaluation without informing the aldermen in a timely fashion.

It will be reconsidered by the aldermen at the next meeting of the full board, tonight.

New classroom

Frieda Drapkin of Newton affixes a Menorah to the doorpost of a new sixth grade classroom of the Maimonides School. Looking on is Maurice H. Saval, chairman of the board of Maimonides, who dedicated the Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Saval classroom in October.

Item not itemized, board bats it back

NEWTON — Members of the aldermanic Public Facilities Committee have sent back a request from Building Commissioner James Cameron for $222,000 for "building maintenance" in city buildings because the request was not itemized.

Several aldermen said Cameron was requesting the money be put in a "bucket account" where it could not be properly accounted for.

"I don't want to see a 'bucket account' for this money," committee member Joseph DePasquale told Cameron. The request should be itemized according to the budget codes of the various accounts in which the money would be put, Depasquale said.

The money Cameron is requesting is part of $600,000 in state aid the city was not counting on receiving when this year's budget was drawn up.

Committee Chairman Richard McGrath said the itemizing of the request was necessary so that the money would be spent for what the aldermen authorized. "They have to put an account number on it so they can't change it," he said.

Included in Cameron's request was $$32,000 for a security system in City Hall, a proposal that has already been turned down twice by the Board of Aldermen.

Asked why the Building Commissioner would request funds for a project that has been rejected twice, McGrath commented, "It's not his list. He's been told to put it on there. It's happened before."

Blood bank re-accredited

LOWER FALLS — The Newton-Wellesley Hospital Blood Bank has been granted renewal of a two-year accreditation by the American Association of Blood Banks (AABB), according to NWH Chief of Pathology John H. Meeker, M.D.

The accreditation followed an intensive on-site inspection by specially trained representatives of the association, who established that the level of medical, technical and administrative performance within the hospital met or exceeded the standards set by the AABB.

By meeting these requirements, the NWH Blood Bank now joins more than 2200 similar facilities across the U.S. and abroad that have earned the accreditation rating and recognition.

Dr. Meeker said the Blood Bank sought accreditation because "it represents a level of professional and medical expertise that meets government regulations. The major objective of the program is to assist hospitals like ours to achieve excellence in providing higher quality blood, blood components, and other transfusion services to patients."

Car theft stats indicate Mall figures are less

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

CHESTNUT HILL — Police statistics on auto thefts published last week pointed to a high incidence at the Chestnut Hill Mall but, according to a police statistician, those figures also included thefts from shopping centers throughout the Chestnut Hill area.

An article in the March 23 issue of the Newton Graphic concerning Newton's overall crime statistics for the last 14 months stated that police said that more than half the vehicles stolen in Newton are stolen from the Chestnut Hill Mall.

However police failed to explain that for statistical purposes, they classify nearby shopping centers, including parking lots all along Boylston Street, as part of the Chestnut Hill Mall area, according to John Donovan, police crime statistician. The statistics include all lots along Route 9 from the mall to Langley Road in Newton Centre, Donovan said.

Donovan said about 60 percent of vehicles reported stolen from the entire Chestnut Hill shopping area are reported stolen from the Chestnut Hill Mall parking lots, that is, the parking garage and immediate adjacent lots.

Donovan also said last week the figure — 405 thefts — includes attempted thefts. Of the 405 vehicles reported stolen, about 50 were actually unsuccessful attempts, according to Donovan. He said police combine attempts with actual thefts because that is how the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) compiles the statistics. The statistics are filed with the FBI Donovan said.

Donovan had said previously that the mall area is a difficult area for police to patrol which accounts for the number of thefts.

Julio Secchiaroli, manager of the Chestnut Hill Mall, echoed Donovan's view that the mall area is difficult to patrol. Police said Secchiaroli contacted police after the statistics were released and expressed concern about the thefts.

Secchiaroli said last week the mall employs several security guards to patrol the parking area. He said he was unaware of the number of thefts because, he surmised, most people call police rather than mall security if their cars are stolen.

A large portion of the city's auto thefts also occur at the MBTA parking lots, Donovan said.

Local man sentenced to 4-6 years in prison

By Alberta Cook
Middlesex County News Service

CAMBRIDGE — A 39-year-old Newton man was sentenced Friday to four-to-six years at Walpole State Prison after being found guilty of possession of heroin with intent to distribute.

David Monosson of 435 Boylston St., was tried before Middlesex Superior Court Judge Andrew Linscott Friday. He was charged in connection with an alleged attempt to sell drugs in Newton on Oct. 1, 1979. Judge Linscott found Monosson not guilty of a charge of conspiracy to violate drug laws.

According to the prosecutor, Assistant Middlesex County District Attorney Phyllis Broker, Monosson and two other men were arrested by Newton Police after being observed in a parking lot of a Brigham's Restaurant in Newton at 8:20 p.m.

Browker, recommending the Walpole sentence, told the judge Monosson had a "horrendous drug record" and that he is "one of the largest heroin dealers in the area."

His attorney, Gerald Goldfarb, asked that Monosson be sentenced to a less severe term at the state prison in Concord. He told the court Monosson had undergone drug rehabilitation treatments and that he was "no longer on methodone." Goldfarb said Monosson is a "skilled mechanic who wants to go into business" and lead a "drug-free" life when he leaves prison.

The two co-defendants in the case, Ralph Stratis of Arlington and Richard P. Madej of South Boston, are scheduled to go to trial on Friday, April 1.

Broker said Monosson is presently serving an 18-month term at Concord State Prison and will begin serving the Walpole sentence when the Concord sentence has been completely served.

Correction

NEWTON CENTRE — A story in the March 16 issue of the Newton Graphic stated incorrectly that Mediation Associates in Newton Centre charges $60 for each two-hour mediation session.

The charge is $55 per hour for the sessions and $60 for the initial orientation session.

The Graphic regrets the error.

Chiropractic for Health
by Dr. David G. Rutman, Chiropractor
POSTURE CHECKS FOR CHILDREN
Much back pain can be directly traced to poor posture that may have begun early with childhood activities and habits. Check your children for potential difficulties by observing their shoulder levels. If one shoulder is higher than the other, it could be an indication of a problem. Also, check your daughter's hem to see if it hangs properly. Having to consistently alter one side of new dresses is a tipoff to possible postural imbalance. Have your child bend over forward from the waist. With the head level and with the back and arms dangling, check for bunched muscles at the spine. Lastly, check for markedly uneven shoe wear.
The childhood years are truly the developing years. As such it is the optimum time to correct existing problems, head off developing ones, and establish sound health routines. At the office of DR. DAVID G. RUTMAN, CHIROPRACTOR, 4593 Washington St., Roslindale, all this is available to you. In addition, by bringing your children in for periodic exams during their developmental years such a routine of health care will likely carry through to adulthood. Tel. 323-5022. VISA & MasterCard accepted. Hours by appt. including 3 eves. a week.
CHIRO TIP
Avoid watching television in bed with your head propped at a sharp angle.

Busy reference area of main library, Newton Corner.

Director cites need

The original structure was dedicated in 1870, with the first addition going on in 1886. Subsequent additions were tacked on in 1912, in 1928 and finally in the early 1950s.

"There are times when you have to say it's becoming costly to the city in terms of prestige as well as dollars," said Tashjian.

Rotting away in the basement and other out-of-the-way places are rare books whose pages are crumbling because of intense heat in the summer and cold in winter, said Tashjian.

"We need a main library badly," the director said. "This building has outlived its usefulness." Lack of handicapped access to the second floor and a lack of parking spaces have frustrated many library users, she said.

A few people randomly polled at the main library Monday, said the old building has its "ups and downs."

"Everything is cramped together and it's difficult to get access to a lot of resource materials," said West Newton resident Jeff Bangston.

On the plus side, Bangston said, "The available resources (once located) are better than any place around."

Two businessmen avidly pouring over reference guides in search of sales prospects said, "We can't find this material in other libraries."

Against moving the main library was Harold Lazarus of Newton Corner, who said he found the building sound and conveniently located.

Joyce Smith of Newton Center said she thinks the library is fine but "a little confusing."

Campaigning for a new library at the site of Homer and Walnut Street, across from City Hall are members of the Board of Library Trustees.

"The time has come for the city of Newton to make a commitment to a new main library," said Library Trustees Chairman Dorothy Reichard this week.

The commitment in terms of dollars is estimated at anywhere from $7 to $12 million. To help raise the capital some branch libraries would be sold and the city would have to sell bonds, said Reichard.

A design for a 74,000 square foot, two-story, main library at the Homer Walnut Street site has been suggested by a Newton resident and student of architecture.

"David O'Sullivan's idea is interesting and creative and would fit nicely on that piece of land, but it might not be large enough," said Reichard, suggesting that three floors are more desirable.

A proposal to reuse Warren Junior High School as the new main library is just a "band-aid approach," she said.

Changing his stance on the reuse question this week was Alderman Robert Tennant, who said he now agrees with the library trustees' opinion that reusing the Warren Junior High School (scheduled to close in July) as a main library is not a good plan, "Because its location and design is not suitable for a main library.

"As far as my personal opinion is concerned the main library situation has been on the agenda as long as I can remember, but at this time I don't think economic circumstance will allow expenditures of $8 to $10 million," said Tennant who is chairman of the Aldermanic Administation and Planning Committee.

Studies supporting backers of a new main library go back to 1948. Known as the "Wheeler Report," the 1948 study says the "Central library has been sorely neglected physically and as to its services to the entire city."

Series fosters view of Italian culture

Italian film program to include the guest lecturers.

"I decided I wanted more of a focused program, something that would encourage dialogue. We're really trying to encourage discussion," Brenner explained.

"Padre Padrone," was the most controversial film to be shown thus far, Brenner said. The film, which depicts the experiences of a young Sardinian shepard boy, contains violent scenes that might disturb or offend some people, Brenner said. But it succeeds in ponting out "that Italy is many different lands." A discussion following the film was evidence of Brenner's remark.

"Padre Padrone" sparked emotional discussion among some 100 people who remained to discuss it with Boston College professor Dr. Reno DiBartolo. The participants represented various regions of Italy.

Fr. Giovanni Dessi, of Our Lady's Church in Nonantum, is a native of the small village depicted in the film and criticized its portrayal of the people as well as the communist overtones, he said. Lincoln-Elliot School bilingual teacher Elsa Barbi, who emmigrated from Italy as a young woman, said there is less diversity among the regional dialects in Italy. Others praised the film for depicting a universal theme of hope and despair.

Seven more programs are scheduled through May, including discussions on Italian stereotypes, the histories of Northern and Southern Italy and a documentary of fascism during World War II.

Brenner said a Newton North High School teacher who facilitates the student exchange program with Italy also helped her to coordinate the program.

The library's film program began seven years ago, the year Brenner was hired, when a $6,000 state grant allowed the library to purchase several hundred Italian books and present Italian films.

The current library budget includes about $300 to purchase new Italian books each year. Donations from numerous Italian cultural groups help to fund the annual film program.

Brenner said she chose films that look at individual experiences as well as the changes in Italy over the last 40 years. The expanded program, she said, should "makes people aware of how humanities can enrich their lives."

Dance-a-thon benefit slated

NEWTON — A 12-hour dance-a-thon to benefit muscular dystrophy will be held at the Sacred Heart Parish Center on Crescent Street Friday April 8 at 8 p.m. to Saturday at 8 a.m.

Chairman Julia A. Werbinski said those interested in participating and getting pledges can can phone 244-1782 evenings.

There will be prizes for the dancers who turn in the most money. Last year more than 20 dancers participated and raised some $2,000.

Joan Franklin looks eye-to-eye with Claudia Olds' sculpture "Bag lady on bench" which is part of a current display at the Newton Arts Center, Newtonville.

Newton Guidance Clinic seeking leadership help

NEWTON — The Newton Guidance Clinic is looking once again to local residents to supply leadership and skills so necessary for boards of directors for non-profit agencies.

Strong citizen involvement has characterized the Newton-Needham Mental Health Association (parent body of the guidance clinic) from its beginning in 1965. Continuing community effort has been essential in maintaining the high quality of service for which the Clinic has become known. This month, the Nominating Committee is seeking new candidates for the Board of Directors.

"Financial management, community relations and computer skills are some major talents that Newton citizens could contribute to the Board," according to Fay Bronstein of the Nominating Committee.

Others include help in long range planning, local and corporate fundraising, increasing relationships to civic groups, personnel evaluation skills and graphics. Anyone interested in contributing such skills to the board should call Ann Anderson at the Clinic 969-4925.

Other current Newton board members are: Susan Glazer, Tom McGuire, Charles Olton, Milton Grahm, Elaine Freidan, Debby Faber, Adele Hoffman, Muriel Finegold, Natalie Stellar, Doris Rodman, Barbara Brewer, Marcia Gittes, Estelle Hochberg, Jane Morse and Sally Brescher.

The Newton Guidance Clinic is the only public children's psychiatric service in the city; it provides individual, group and family therapy to children, adolescents and their families on a fee scale based on family income. It is funded by the Massachusetts Department of Mental Health, the City of Newton, United Way and private donations.

Organizations and churches planning to attend should telephone Julie Carruthers at 893-1670.

Philip Keohane, editor for Transcript Newspapers, will introduce the program and outline the goals of the daily and weekly newspapers in providing more Watertown news coverage than any other newspaper.

Also participating in the program will be John P. Hoey, managing editor of the News Tribune and Richard Lodge, managing editor of The Newton Graphic.

Enns, who recently won a NEPA award for her feature writing, will explain what she looks for in selecting a lifestyle feature. She will also review suggestions for social page news, including weddings and engagements.

Sports editor Frank Murphy will offer tips for those seeking wider coverage for little league and club sports.

A question and answer period will follow the seminar.

Personnel shifts for Water Dept.

NEWTON — Anticipating the findings of an independent audit of the city's Water/Sewer Department, Public Works Commissioner John Sulik has asked the aldermen to approve some inter-departmental personnel shifts.

Sulik explained to members of the aldermanic Public Facilities Committee that he would like to shift Vern Porter, $30,000-a-year head of the Water/Sewer Department, to the Engineering Department. He also would like to replace Porter with a business manager in the Water/Sewer Department who would earn a bit over $20,000 a year.

Asked how soon he would need a business manager in the Water/Sewer Department, Sulik commented, "November 15, 1982," the day he took over the reins of the Department of Public Works.

The aldermen told Sulik they would reserve judgement on his request until the results of the departmental audit have been reviewed. The city's Chief Executive Officer James Hickey said he thought the audit results would be in his hands in a couple of days.

Sulik, who has already seen some of the auditors' recommendations, said the action he was requesting aldermanic approval of was "not inconsistent" with the audit report.

According to City Engineer Paul Giunta, Porter's engineering abilities will be called on to oversee some $318,000 in federally funded improvements to the city's water and sewer lines. He added that federal regulations changed recently so that it is now required that a registered engineer oversee all federally funded projects.

Critics hit accessory apartment plans

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The aldermanic Housing Committee, originally formed to investigate the possibility of expanding the use of existing housing in the city, heard words of warning from a guest alderman Tuesday night.

The committee, which stemmed from a Human Rights Commission report advocating the development of accessory apartments in some older, larger homes, heard "a very cautionary note" from Alderman Lisle Baker of Chestnut Hill.

Whether or not an accessory apartment can be added to an existing dwelling is now determined by lot size. A proposed amendment to the ordinance would change the criteria to the size of the house itself.

It was estimated that, if homes with more than 3,500 square feet of interior space were open to conversion, approximately 1,000 properties in the city would be affected.

Baker warned of the "cumulative impact" of relaxing the regulations on apartments in single-family homes. He said the committee should consider, when contemplating an increase in population density in parts of the city, that city services, especially the school system, have been reduced to cope with a declining population.

"I'm always wary of doing something piecemeal that we would not do overall," Baker said of allowing more accessory apartments. "The cummulative impact might not be nearly as innocuous as the individual case. There will be more people on the street and more cars on the road. Look 15 years ahead, and see if you want it."

Baker added, "There is a tremendous reservoir of expectation among people buying into a single-family neighborhood that it will stay that way."

Baker added that, because of the limits of Proposition 2½, adding accessory apartments to the city's housing stock would not add to the tax revenues. Because the total tax levy can only go up by 2½ percent per year, accessory apartments would only result in shifting the tax burden from one property to another. The demand for city services would increase, Baker said, but the amount of money needed to pay for those services would not.

Committee member Harold Levinsky commented that he also was worried about creeping density. He said his family moved from Brookline to Newton long ago to get away from density problems.

Contemplating increased density in Newton, Levinsky said, "In 15 or 20 years, Newton won't be Newton as I grew up to know it."

Committee member Terry Morris, who is chairman of the aldermanic Land Use Committee, also warned against allowing the city's population to become more dense. While he sat at the end of the committee table polishing the solid brass hardware from his own home, Morris called the city "a city of urban villages" and commented, "Zoning is used by us and our Republican predecessors to preserve a certain ambience in the city."

Committee member Dominic Taglienti commented that he had lived in the city since it had a population of 30,000, approximately a third of the present population. "It's not that different now," he said.

Board President Matthew Jefferson, a committee member and longtime advocate of more affordable housing, told committee members, "I'd love to sit around a table and talk philosophy, but I would probably disagree with everyone on the board."

Saying he was "a bit shocked at my colleagues' perception of the city," Jefferson needled his fellow committee members for their comments about the "ambience" of the city and the "heterogeneity" of its population.

Jefferson argued that studies have shown the city can handle a population of 100,000, 15,000 more than the present population, without seriously affecting the quality of city services.

He also said that zoning was very often enforced discriminatorily, not on an ethnic basis, but on an economic one. "There are cases on record where this is supported," he said.

Jefferson pointed to communities like Weston, where the minimum lot size has been set at more than an acre, and said, "You're just not going to get into those places if you're not a millionaire."

Jefferson derided the notion that "certain ethnic groups wouldn't be comfortable" in certain parts of the city. He commented, "Nobody else might share this opinion, but I say, 'Baloney.' For someone to say, 'You're not going to be comfortable in this setting,'.... That's a lot of baloney. When we create housing in the city, we should create it for everybody."

While Mayor Theodore D. Mann is in Taiwan, Jefferson is acting mayor of the city.

Committee Chairman Sondra Shick said she, like Jefferson, was "coming from a different place" in the discussion. She said her main concern was with adding housing to the city's stock.

In reference to narrow guidelines Morris suggested for determining which homes might be candidates for adding on accessory apartments, Shick said that, given the guidelines, "only rich people could do it. And the apartments will be too expensive."

Local bankers were criticized in the course of discussion for loaning money to people who were counting on rent from an illegal apartment to help finance a home.

Morris said the banks should be fined "up to $100 a day" for their complicity in the violation of zoning ordinances. He said the banks will not be concerned with zoning "unless they have to be."

It was left up to Morris to draw up a specific proposal to change the existing ordinance regulating accessory apartments. The committee agreed that, when the proposal was completed, they would poll the various villages in the city to determine residents' opinions of it.
